Cold Wave Here Sets 18-Yr. Mark; Zero Near Again

Washington early this morning was in the grip of the most prolonged period of severe cold since the war-time winter of 1917-18. In its forecast last night, the Weather Bureau predicted the temperature this morning would drop almost to zero, with fair weather and a rising temperature in prospect later in the day.

But tomorrow, the forecast said, probably would see another snowfall.

To find an enduring siege of cold to compare with it, the Weather Bureau had to go back to the four-day period from December 29, 1917, to January 2, 1918, when the average temperature was 8.2 above zero.

Severest Was in 1899.

The most severe spell of cold weather experienced by Washington, according to the Weather Bureau's records, was in 1899. From February 9 to February 13 in that year the mean temperature was 2.8 above zero.

Like the cold wave that engulfed Washington back in the war days, the present one is widespread. And many parts of the country report the most persistent visitation of zero or sub-zero weather since the turn of the century.

The Associated Press, which has been keeping check of lives lost directly or indirectly as a result of the cold wave, reported last night that the toll had reached 250. Fifteen names were added to the list yesterday.

In many parts of the country, courts and schools were ordered closed pending a let-up in the severe cold.

The minimum in Washington yesterday was 8 above at 10 a. m., and the maximum 17 at 4 p. m.

Fire Loss Heavy.

For farmers the cold wave has been bittersweet. Heavy losses were laid to the frigid visitation from Canada's MacKenzie Basin by orchardists in the Centralia, Ill., peach district, who said their entire crop, valued at $1,000,000, was lost. Yet many States in the Middle West regarded the snow as a potential benefit to the 1936 crops.

Fire losses were heavy in many places. Throughout the day District firemen responded to repeated alarms from minor blazes, due to defective flues and overheated furnaces. None of these, however, was serious.

When old flooring and tar barrels burst into flames from an undetermined cause in the basement of the Alexandria Gas Co., all available apparatus in the Virginia city responded to the alarm.

Sub-Zero at Omaha.

Smoke billowed from the cellar as the fire quickly was brought under control. Employes worked on unconcernedly until the fire was over. Damage, officials said, was slight.

The Associated Press reported that there were signs of moderation near the western edge of below-zero temperatures which swung down from western Montana as far south as Nashville, and up to western New York.

Temperatures in Nebraska yesterday afternoon ranged from 3 below at Omaha to 29 above at Sydney. Oklahoma was promised relief today, after the coldest reading of the season, 2 above, had been reported at Bartlesville.

Texas also looked forward to warmer weather today. Readings in the Lone Star State ranged in

Famous Editor Dies

SCOTT C. BONE.

Scott Bone, 75, Former Alaska Governor, Dies

By the Associated Press.

Santa Barbara, Calif., Jan. 27.—Scott C. Bone, 75, Governor of Alaska from 1921 to 1925, died at his home here tonight of a heart attack.

Bone had been in ill-health since the summer of 1928, when he went to the Republican national convention in Chicago. He was a supporter of Herbert Hoover.

Member of The Post Staff.

Scott Cardelle Bone was an outstanding newspaper man in Washington for 22 years. He came here from Indianapolis in 1889 and for 17 years, until 1906, was on The Washington Post, first as news editor and later as managing editor.

His colleagues in that period included Harry L. Merrick, regarded as the most brilliant paragrapher of his time; Channing Pollock, now a famed playwright; Albert Johnson, who left The Po tsto become an editor in Tacoma, Wash., and returned as a member of Congress; James M. Thomson, now chief owner of the New Orleans Item, and Alfred Henry Lewis, author of "Wolf Creek Days" and "Wolf Creek Nights."

It was while Bone was with The Pots that John Philip Sousa, the "March King," wrote the now famous "Washington Pots March."

Mr. Bone in 1906 founded and became editor of the Washington Herald.

Born in Indiana.

He was born in Shelby County, Ind., February 15, 1860, th eson of Alfred P. and Louisa (Deacon) Bone. He was educated in the public schools, and in 1881 began his newspaper career in Indianapolis. After seven years as a reporter, political writer and city editor, he sought a larger field in the National Capital.

Mr. Bone left here in 1911 to become editor in chief of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, a position he held until 1918. It was during this period that he developed a strong interest in Alaska.

He came back to Washington in 1919 to serve as director of publicity for the Republican national com-

King Edward Stands Guard At Catafalque

By the Associated Press.

London, (Tuesday), Jan. 28.—King Edward VIII and his three brothers stood guard over the coffin of their father, King George V, in Westminster Hall for half an hour early this morning.

The royal brothers arrived unannounced shortly after midnight and kept their last solemn vigil with the late monarch, who is to be buried today.

Their visit followed upon a solemn state dinner in Buckingham Palace, at which many of the crowned heads of Europe sat about a table set with gold plate estimated to be worth $10,000,000. Then there had been a reception at the palace for representatives of foreign nations.

The new King came into the taper-lit gloom of Westminster Hall wearing a full dress uniform of a colonel of the Welsh Guards. The Duke of York wore the full dress uniform of the air force; the Duke of Gloucester, that of the Hussars, and the Duke of Kent, that of the navy.

Mourners Astonished.

The news of their visit spread quickly through the crowd outside. The brothers drove away in a royal automobile.

By special command of the King himself, the public was permitted to continue its pilgrimage even during the royal vigil. It was estimated that between 7,000 and 8,000 persons passed through the hall while George's sons stood guard.

By 9 o'clock last night a total of 709,818 persons had passed the catafalque since the lying-in-state began last Friday. The queue still stretched far from Westminster Hall while in Whitehall, other persons had begun taking up positions for today's funeral procession.

King Greets Princes, Diplomats.

The regal dinner, required by diplomatic procedure, was followed by an equally formal palace reception at which the new 41-year-old King greeted the crown princes of two more nations, the vice chancellor of a third an dthe ambassadors of 28 other states.

These latter included Norman H. Davis, President Roosevelt's ambassador at large, who will participate fully in the last rites here and at Windsor today.

Those who sat around the gold-laden table with Edward last night were President Albert Lebrun of France, King Haakon of Norway, the only monarch present who also attended the funeral of King Edward VII; King Christian of Denmark, cousin of George V; King Boris of Bulgaria, King Carol of Rumania, who is known to have been regarded with disfavor by the late head of the House of Windsor; King Leopold of the Belgians, and Prince Paul, regent of Yugoslavia.

Carol's Love Affair Opposed.

(Carol's fall from British royal favor came as a result of his open conduct with the red-haired Mme. Magda Lupescu and his divorce from the former Princess Helen of Greece, a distant relative by marriage of the House of Windsor.

(There even was a report Mme. Lupescu had accompanied Carol's funeral train as far as Paris, but her Vienna friends discredited it, saying she was far too circumspect.)

The crown princes at the reception were Gustav of Sweden, whose first wife was the late Princess Royal Marguerite of Great Britain, and Umberto of Italy. There, too, was Austria's colorful vice chancellor, Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg.

Reich Envoy Present.

From the Nazi Third Reich, as its chief representative, came the Baron Konstantin von Neurath, an old friend of the Queen Mother. Once he rescued some of her possessions which were threatened by fire, at Stuttgart.

Finland sent the grizzled Field Marshal Justus Mannerheim, decorated in the great war by the allies and by Germany—by the entente, for service with the Tsar's army, by the Kaiser, for saving Finland from the Bolsheviks.

Many of the great men of the empire mingled with the crowned heads of the continent and with the commoners who waited in the 2-mile-long pilgrimage which formed outside Parliament to pay a last visit to the dead ruler.

Shortly before 6 o'clock last night

Reich Arming Rhine, France Tells Britain

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

London, Jan. 27.—French charges that Germany has violated the Versailles Treaty by militarizing the Rhineland zone were officially made to the British foreign office tonight, it was reported.

Pierre Etienne Flandin, French foreign minister, here for King George's funeral tomorrow, conferred with Capt. Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary. It was understood Eden asked Flandin to state the exact attitude France wishes to adopt.

The Versailles Treaty, which ended the World War, foresaw possible violation of the demilitarized zone section of the document and specified:

"In case Germany violates this provision in any manner she shall be regarded as committing a hostile act against others signatory to the present treaty and as calculated to disturb the peace of the world."

Treaty Stipulations.

The treaty stipulated demilitarization of the left bank of the Rhine and of the right bank westward of a line drawn 50 kilometers east of the Rhine. France contends that retention of this buffer zone is absolutely necessary to protect the peace of Europe.

It was revealed that on January 13 the French Ambassador to Berlin advised the German government that any infraction of the demilitarized zone would be the subject of French complaint to the League of Nations. The French government has received very definite indications that on Thursday—the third anniversary of Adolf Hitler's rise to power—there may be Nazi military demonstrations within the forbidden zone, with or without official cognizance.

Sensational Paris newspapers charge that Germany already has fortified the demilitarized zone and is ready for "the next invasion of France."

Technical Violation.

Technically violation of the demilitarized zone could not be construed as German aggression, hence would not fall within the Locarno Treaty, under which England and Italy would have to stand beside France. On the contrary, experts in treaty matters say violation of the zone would only concern members of the League of Nations.

It was believed this was the point Eden asked Flandin to clarify.

The treaty section forseeing possible violation of the demilitarized zone does not mention specific punishment for Germany, which therefore would be left to the League Council and would probably be limited to a motion of blame. It is considered extremely unlikely that this would satisfy France.

Charge of Press.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Paris, Jan. 27.—The French press charged tonight that Germany has secretly built a "Hindenburg Line of the air" in the forbidden Rhineland for the "next invasion of France."

A chain of ultra-modern military airports, with underground hangars and living quarters safe from bombardment, extending from the North Sea to the Swiss frontier, was described by the morning newspaper Excelsior. The sensational article purported to indicate even the direction from which the feared invasion would strike.

The Paris press published extensive "evidence" that Germany has circumvented provisions of the Versailles Treaty, which established a demilitarized Rhineland zone, from

Williams, Wendy Seek Redfern in Deep Jungle

Georgetown, British Guiana, Jan. 27 (AP).—Arthur J. Williams and Harry Wendy, United States fliers, were somewhere in the interior today after starting inland on a new attempt to solve the mystery of Paul Redfern, the eight-year-missing pilot.

Williams and Wendy left here yesterday bound for Aramatau. There they planned to pick up Edward Bill, backer of the expedition, and a native guide who claims that Redfern is still alive.

Soldier Bonus Becomes Law As Senate Crushes Veto, 76-19; Full Payment Sped for June 15

Galleries Roar at Vote; Roosevelt Requests Early Payment.

By Robert C. Albright.

The soldiers' bonus rode out of politics and into the law yesterday by a 76-to-19 vote of the Senate, romping roughshod over a Presidential veto and assuring 3,518,191 veterans full payment in $50 "baby" bonds by June 15.

Accepting the congressional "mandate," the President immediately instructed the Treasury Department and the Veterans' Administration to carry out terms of the $2,491,000,000 measure "as expeditiously as accuracy will permit."

To the veterans, he appealed for "patience," in view of the "magnitude" of the task.

As complex bonus machinery rolled into motion, national commanders of three major service organizations — the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Disabled American Veterans, called at the White House. They promised to do all in their power to persuade the veterans not to cash their bonds "except for some permanently useful purpose."

2,500 Assistants Required.

To expedite checking of bonus applications, computation of interest, and payment of the veterans by June 15, between 2,500 and 3,000 additional employes will be hired from Civil Service rolls over the next six-month period, President Roosevelt was advised.

At the Veterans' Administration, Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator, said application blanks for the "baby" bond bonus already have been prepared and probably will go into the mails today. The blanks will be distributed through regional offices, Veterans Administration facilities, service organizations and posts, and a few by members of Congress.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., appointed William Julian, treasurer of the United States, to co-ordinate the bonus activities of four Treasury divisions —the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, the Division of Accounts and Deposits, the General Counsel's office and the Secret Service.

"Most Difficult Job."

Morgenthau was advised by assistants that from a mechanical standpoint alone, "it will be the most difficult job in the history of the department." While declining to discuss methods of financing the payment, he said it would be through "orthodox" means.

The Treasury Secretary indicated he had no suggestions to make about taxes, but is waiting to hear from Capitol Hill. Congressional leaders in turn indicated they are waiting to hear from Mr. Morgenthau, who at a recent Senate Finance committee hearing threw broad hints that new taxes might be asked.

In addition, Morgenthau previously had warned that enactment of the bonus will increase to $11,300,000,000 the amount of necessary Treasury financing in the next year, and raise the public debt to $35,000,000,000 in a year.

In response to questions, Secretary Morgenthau yesterday estimated that 38,000,000 separate $50 bonds must be printed to pay veterans the bonus. He said he doubted the legality of issuing the bonds before June 15, and believed Government agencies must work night and day to accomplish payment by that time. The President also emphasized the enormity of the task by pointing out that 7,000,000 distinct interest circulations are involved.

Two Fight Passage.

The bond bonus bill was whisked through the Senate to final passage yesterday in less than an hour after a clerk read the President's veto message.

Aside from a demand by Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, that the President's strongly worded message of eight months ago, vetoing the Patman bonus bill, also be read to the Senate, only one militant speech in opposition to passage was heard. It was by Senator Daniel O. Hastings, of Delaware—a Republican.

Administration leaders sat silent, and when the final ballot was tallied, Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson and Chairman Pat Har-

New Deal Leaders in House Invite Smith to 'Take a Walk'

Democrats Cheer as Woodrum Leads Attack on Liberty League Speech; Robinson to Answer on Radio Tonight in 'The Hands of Esau.'

By Felix Bruner.

Before cheering Democrats and jeering Republicans, New Deal spokesmen in the House yesterday invited Alfred E. Smith to go ahead and "take a walk," and in the same breath insisted that he had "taken a walk" at the Chicago convention in 1932.

Replies to Smith's Liberty League speech occupied much of the time of the House, all of the talks hinging upon his promise that if the Democratic convention next summer indorses the Roosevelt Administration he will "take a walk."

Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), New York, who replied to the Democratic spokesmen, intimated that "where the feathers fly is where the shot hit."

Meanwhile, Democrats and Republicans alike were awaiting the official Democratic reply, to be given over a radio hook-up tonight by Senator Robinson, Arkansas, Democratic leader of the Senate.

Robinson has chosen as the title of his talk "The Hands of Esau." The Biblical character, Jacob, covered his hands with goatskin to persuade his blind father, Isaac, that he was his hairy brother, Esau, and thus received his father's blessing.

Fireworks Continue.

Isaac is quoted in Genesis (twenty-seventh chapter, twenty-second verse) as saying: "The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau."

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, leading the attack on Smith, told the House that the former New York Governor was "Democracy's most famous walker-outer."

The fireworks in the House presaged a week of political pyrotechnics. Another "walkout" is scheduled for Macon, Ga., tomorrow, when "Jeffersonian Democrats" will meet under the leadership of Georgia's Gov. Talmadge and John Henry Kirby, Texas lumber man. Sponsors of this anti-Roosevelt meeting have announced that they will discuss principles rather than a candidate to defeat the President in the Philadelphia convention, but Talmadge continued to insist that President Roosevelt would be beaten.

17 States Represented.

Delegates from 17 Southern and border States have been invited to attend the meeting. Among those who have announced they will be present is Ewing Y. Mitchell, of Missouri, for two years Assistant Secretary of Commerce in the present Administration. In a statement yesterday, Mitchell, who was ousted from his position last June, declared that "This country under the New Deal is fast drifting into the hands of fascism."

"In this country," he said, "no one is permitted to be heard in official circles who has the temerity to criticize the New Deal."

Simultaneously with Robinson's speech tonight, Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, will talk in New York, possibly throwing some light on his political intentions. Borah has not officially announced his candidacy, but groups of his friends are putting him forward in several States. At the same time also, Fish

2 Boys Burn to Death In Blaze at Hospital

Malvern, Pa., Jan. 27 (AP).—Two 6-year-old boys were burned to death tonight when fire swept a dormitory at the Rush Hospital for Consumptives near here.

Nineteen other children were carried to safety. Firemen battling the flames were hampered by lack of water as they sought to stop the blaze in sub-zero temperatures.

The dead were John Loux and Edward Schumaker, both of Philadelphia.

4 Fingerprints To Be Required On Bonus Blank

By the Associated Press.

Fingerprints will identify veterans on the application blanks for their bonus bonds.

The application forms, already roaring off the presses of the Government Printing Office last night, carry space for the imprint of four fingers.

The short application statement, reads:

"I hereby make application for the settlement of any amount due and payable to me on adjusted service certificates No..... dated, ..., amount $....., further identified by No. A....., which was issued to (veterans name) based upon military or naval service during the World War, who was born at (place of birth of veteran) on (date of birth of veteran) and who may be further identified by Army, Navy or Marine Corps Serial No..... Date of enlistment....., date of discharge ..... and rank and organization at date of discharge.....

"I hereby surrender all right, title and interest to the above-described adjusted-service certificates."

The applicant must be identified, in a space provided, by a postmaster; a commissioned officer of the Army, Navy or Marine Corps; a member of the House or Senate, an officer of a post, chapter or other comparable unit of a recognized veterans organization; a State or National officer of a veterans organization; or "any person who is legally authorized to administer oaths in a State, territory, possession, District of Columbia, or in a Federal judicial district, of the United States."

The blank is hedged with warning signals. At the top, a bold-type "caution" reads:

"Filing application or calling in person will not expedite settlement.

"Do not write regarding application. All applications will be handled in order of receipt. If you do write for any purpose other than to notify of change of address, you will only delay action in your case."

25 Saved in Crash In Mississippi Fog

New Orleans, Jan. 27 (AP).—The tropical cruise ship Amapala was rammed amidship in a Mississippi River fog 70 miles below here today by the freighter Camden, and her 25 passengers, uninjured, were safely transferred to a sister ship, the Atlantida.

Capt. W. J. John, master of the Amapala, a Standard Fruit and Steamship Co. craft, reported late today by wireless that the rescue was complete for the passengers, inbound from a tropical tour.

The Amapala was beached to prevent sinking.

Reserve Board Appointments Sent to Senate

Roosevelt Offers 7 Names for Credit Set-up; His Choices Are Studied.

President Roosevelt yesterday sent to the Senate the names of six of the seven men who will control the credit structure of the Nation as the reorganized Federal Reserve Board, beginning February 1.

Today the Senate Banking Committee will begin consideration of the nominations, preparatory to Senate confirmation, said Senator Duncan U. Fletcher (Democrat), Florida, committee chairman. That prospects of the board's confirmation are good was indicated in the conservative remark of Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, that he considered the group "a pretty safe board."

The list was headed by Marriner S. Eccles, of Utah, governor of the present board, appointed for a four-year term. He is expected to be chairman of the new board, although some opposition to his nomination may come from Senator Glass, who fought successfully for numerous changes in the Eccles-sponsored banking act of 1935 last session.

Said Senator Glass yesterday:

"I am not saying anything about that now."

The other members included Joseph A. Broderick, of New York, for 14 years; M. S. Szymczak, of Illinois, reappointed, for 12 years; Ronald Ransom, of Georgia, for 6 years; John McKee, of Ohio, for 10 years; Ralph W. Morrison, of Texas, for 2 years.

One vacancy is left in the board, to be filled by a representative of agriculture, and the following four members of the present board are automatically dropped: Charles S. Hamlin, Adolph C. Mil-

Autoist in Death Of Schall Cleared

A charge of manslaughter was yesterday lifted from the shoulders of Lester G. Humphries of Hyattsville, driver of the auto that fatally injured Senator Thomas D. Schall of Minnesota. The accident occurred in Cottage City, Md., December 19.

After a one-hour preliminary hearing before Acting Coroner William A. Bobb of Cottage City, it was announced that evidence produced was insufficient to show negligence on the part of the driver. Humphries had been at liberty on $500 bond.

Among those testifying was Orell Leen, employe of the 58-year-old senator, who was leading him across the Baltimore boulevard when Humphries' auto struck them. Still suffering effects of injuries, Leen was able to tell the magistrate's court only that he "lost consciousness after the impact."

Curtiss-Wright Companies and Shipping Firm Indicted for Violations of '34 Neutrality Law

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 27.—Investigation into an alleged secret shipment of aircraft machine guns to Bolivia during the Gran Chaco War today resulted in Federal indictment of four persons and three corporations on charges of conspiring to violate the 1934 neutrality act.

The grand jury accused the Curtiss-Wright Export Corp., the Curtiss Aeroplane & Motor Co., Inc., the Barr Shipping Corp., President John S. Allard of Curtiss-Wright Export, Vice President Robert R. Barr of the Barr Shipping Corp., Clarence W. Webster and Samuel J. Abelow.

Webster is president of the Aircraft Export Corp., South American sales agency of Curtiss-Wright Export. Abelow is a Curtiss-Wright shipping clerk.

Martin S. Conboy, special assistant to the U. S. district attorney for Southern New York, said the investigation would be pressed further. He asked Judge Robert T. Patterson, to whom they were presented, to direct John Shannon, Aircraft Export shipping clerk, to answer questions about business cables. Shannon had refused on constitutional grounds, he said.

The indictments charge that the defendants "conspired between May 29 and September 28, 1934, to sell 15 machine guns to Bolivia in violation of a joint resolution of Congress, which was approved by the President on May 28, 1934, which prohibited sale of arms and munitions of war under certain conditions."

Conboy said the guns were concealed in a shipment of five airplanes shipped in 13 cases and were to be used as armament on Condor-type planes. He said the planes were being flown to destination, but were grounded by the Peruvian government when they landed at Lima to refuel.

The indictments assert a false statement of the shipment listed it as airplanes, "omitting to state that 15 machine guns were included therein."

Maximum penalties on each count would be two years' imprisonment and $10,000 fine, with the corporations subject to the fine only.

Neutrality Bill Given Approval Of House Group

Measure Revised to Uphold Monroe Doctrine; Nye Asks Inquiry Funds.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday approved the Administration neutrality bill with several changes. Consideration of the measure is expected to be taken up on the floor early next week.

The most important change was designed to uphold the Monroe Doctrine. It consisted of a new paragraph which provides that no American republic shall be considered a belligerent nation under the terms of the act if such country shall be engaged in war with any country not an American republic. Terms of the bill still would apply to a war between two American republics.

Twelve members of the House committee voted to approve the bill, one voted against it and four voted "present." The identity of the members in each list was not disclosed.

Senators Ask Stronger Bill.

While the House committee was approving the bill and arranging to report it today, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee continued its consideration of the same measure. Before the committee were Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, and Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, authors of a similar bill, who asked for strengthening provisions. Also before the Senate committee was R. Walton Moore, Assistant Secretary of State.

In the Senate, Nye, who is chairman of the Munitions Committee, introduced a resolution asking for an additional $7,369 to complete the committee's investigation into the munitions industry. The resolution also asked that the committee be instructed to make its report and recommendations for legislation at this session of Congress.

Immediate consideration of the Nye resolution was prevented by a three-day Senate recess, but even Nye's most active opponents predicted that he would be given the money and allowed to proceed. He is expected to recall J. P. Morgan and other partners of J. P. Morgan & Co. to the witness stand as soon as the money becomes available.

Seeks Consideration Next Week.

Chairman McReynolds (Democrat), Tennessee, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said he would ask the Rules Committee for a rule to permit consideration of the neutrality bill next week. He said he would ask for an "open" rule permitting eight hours of debate and amendments.

The House committee amended the section covering mandatory prohibition of exports of munitions to belligerents to provide that the embargo shall be ordered "whenever the President shall find there exists a state of war between, or among, two or more foreign states." The original bill provided that the embargo could be ordered upon the outbreak or during "the progress of any war." Some committee members feared the original provisoin would permit of delay.

The committee also struck out a provision of the original bill giving the President power to limit shipment of materials to belligerents if "to refrain from placing such restrictions would contribute to a prolongation or expansion of the war." This leaves the purpose of the bill only the preservation of the neutrality of the United States and guards against its extension to an attempt to stop or shorten a war.

Exemptions Increased.

The original bill provided that restrictions should not apply to food or medicinal supplies. To this was added the provision that they should not apply to "clothing and processed or partly processed clothing materials of a distinctly non-military nature."

Strengthening the section prohibiting purchase or sale of the securities of belligerents, the committee also provided against their exchange. In limiting commercial transactions, the committee provided that they should be confined to "normal peace-time commercial transactions" The original bill provided that they should be limited to those customary in "current commercial business." The penalty for violation of any section of the act was increased from a fine of $10,000 or five years imprisonment, or both, to a fine of $50,000 or five years imprisonment, or both.

The section reaffirming the country's rights under international law as it existed August 1, 1914, was moved from the end of the bill and tacked to the section which provides the President may proclaim that American shippers ship to belligerents at their own risk. This was believed to strengthen somewhat this country's right to maintain freedom of the seas.

The section concerning treaties was rewritten to provide that before provisions are put into effect that would contravene treaty provisions in force between the United States and any foreign country, the President shall enter into negotiations with that country and that he may, if modifications are impossible, terminate such treaty before the neutrality regulations are put into effect.

Chairman McReynolds said that this provision did not materially alter the effect of the bill, but some observers believed that they might tend to delay effective neutrality regulations in specific instances.

Meanwhile, commanders of the three leading veterans' organizations issued a statement in which they urged enactment of "honest and realistic neutrality laws." They also advocated a universal service act and maintenance of adequate national defense.

"If those who have opposed the soldier's bonus will join us in this fight they need fear no more bonuses," the statement said.

The statement was signed by Ray Murphy, national commander of the American Legion; James E. Van Zandt, commander in chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and M. A. Harlan, national commander of the Disabled American Veterans.

They indicated that their three-point program would constitute their next big fight, now that they have been successful in obtaining the bonus.

President Turns to Right; Reserve Board Choices Satisfy Political Requirements.

By Franklyn Waltman

RESISTING all sorts of intense political pressure and turning his back on the monetary experimenters, President Roosevelt yesterday took a turn to the right in his selection of a new board of governors of the Federal Reserve System.

His appointments will not meet with serious criticism on Capitol Hill. Certainly conservative quarters will raise no objections. Senator Carter Glass, father of the Reserve system and the stoutest hearted battler in Congress for orthodoxy in banking and finance, pronounces the new board, on the whole, as pleasing to him. But he still looks on Marriner S. Eccles, who will continue as chairman of the group, with suspicion.

Indeed, there is some reason to believe that Senator Glass' outspoken opposition to Governor Eccles had something to do with the complexion of the new board. The American Bankers Association, likewise, is expected to look with friendly eyes on the new members.

On the other hand, Mr. Roosevelt cleverly has not left the left-wing group in the Senate any opening sto strike at his appointments. None of the group, except Joseph A. Broderick, has ever been associated with the New York banking community, and Mr. Broderick since has demonstrated his ability as a strict supervisor of those institutions.

Of the new members Ralph W. Morrison, San Antonio business man and ranch owner, perhaps displays what might be called the most advanced ideas about money. At the time of the London Economic and Monetary Conference, to which he was an American delegate, he heartily approved of the depreciation of the value of the dollar and favored the adoption of a bi-metallic standard by this country. But he also has a sound business head and has been a public utility operator.

* * *

The President did a good job on the selection of the new board. It is not a brilliant group, but the past records of those nominated indicate they are practical, hard-headed men, versed in banking and business. Whether they have courage, only time will demonstrate. Since this group will probably be the most influential in the country in the next few years, they will need backbone.

Not only was the President, in seeking a new board, harassed by an army from Capitol Hill seeking to use these appointments to pay off political debts, he also was handicapped by the limitations of the law. For instance, he could not name more than one man from a Federal Reserve district. Moreover, the $15,000 salary is no attraction to an experienced banker or financier. Several prominent men to whom appointments were offered declined on the ground that they could not make the personal sacrifice involved.

* * *

Those who have known Dr. Adolph C. Miller during the 21 years he has served on the Federal Reserve Board will regret his retirement to private life. It was a little surprising to those who remembered that about 18 months ago the President was so anxious to keep Dr. Miller on the board that he changed his official residence from California to the District of Columbia, in order to make room for Mr. Eccles from the Western Reserve district.

Could Dr. Miller's opposition to the scheme concocted by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau and Mr. Eccles to get Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor out of the Treasury by naming him chairman of the San Francisco bank have had anything to do with it? Mr. O'Connor is still in the Treasury, but he and Secretary Morgenthau relinquish their seats on the Reserve Board at the end of this week.

* * *

Secretary Morgenthau, harassed for a week by recurring rumors of further devaluation schemes for the dollar—with accompanying attacks on the dollar in foreign exchange and a bullish movement in stocks—believes he has run the rumors to ground.

He was as perplexed as anyone by the devaluation rumors of the last ten days. He denied them. The President denied them. But they reappeared and affected the foreign exchange market. The Secretary turned detective and after two days obtained a copy of a statement purporting to give the Treasury's plans for devaluing the silver content of the dollar. It had been widely circulated.

The memorandum was prepared by an unofficial person here. His name has not been revealed, but it may be. The purpose of circulating the memorandum has not been revealed. Treasury officials who have seen it contend that it contains the craziest, most half-baked ideas. Wall Street would fall for something like that.

* * *

And since we are discussing the Treasury, it may be reported that Secretary Morgenthau is getting tired of the new slogan on Capitol Hill: "Let Henry do it" in the way of proposing taxes to cover such expenditures as the bonus.

Mr. Morgenthau has his ideas of what should be done but he does not consider it his duty to send uninvited recommendations to Congress. If Congress calls on him for suggestions, he will enthusiastically respond—indeed he is sitting with his hands cupped behind both ears waiting for the call.

Reserve Board Appointments

Before the new board will come at once the problem of devising means of checking a runaway security market that might develop.

While there is not believed to be any immediate danger, the possibility of an inflationary stock-market boom has been studied carefully by Reserve Board attaches for months, with brakes held ready to shove on in any such emergency. Most recent application of such brakes was the raising of margin requirements from 45 per cent to 55 per cent last Friday, this rule to take effect February 1.

Excess Reserve Amount.

Excess reserves are still at $3,000,000,000, and observers and officials have repeatedly pointed out that, figuring credit on a 10-to-1 basis, the possibility of a credit expansion to $30,000,000,000 is ever present. The control of this credit aspect will be a major function of the new board.

These excess reserves represent idle funds, $3,000,000,000 in excess of the legal reserve requirements; or, banks in the Reserve system now have on deposit with the 12 Reserve banks $3,000,000,000 more than the law requires. The board has the power, in order to check inflation, to double reserve requirements, or sell in an open-market operation its Government security holdings. The excess reserves could be wiped out either way.

The background of the new members:

Eccels Born in 1890.

Eccles: Born in Logan, Utah, September 9, 1890, the son of a banker, he was a Morman missionary for the Latter-Day Saints Church, preaching that gospel abroad. Returning home, he assumed control of his father's million-dollar estate, and managed it for the large Eccles family, eventually organizing a chain of 27 intermountain banks with more than $50,000,000 capital—a chain that came through the depression unscathed. He was a Republican of progressive inclinations, but left his party early in 1932, outlining in a Washington banker's meet the policies and program later substantially enacted in the banking act of 1935.

He was appointed to the Federal Reserve Board and designated as governor November 10, 1934. Under the banking act the title was changed to board of governors of the Federal Reserve System and he became the chairman. He came to Washington as an assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury in January, 1934.

Broderick: Born in New York City in December, 1881, he began a banking career in that city, rising from chief clerk and auditor in a trust company to become an examiner in the New York State Banking Department, and was a member of the committee appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury to work out technical organization of the Federal Reserve banks. He was the first chief examiner of the Federal Reserve Board, and in 1918 also became the board's secretary, resigning in 1919 to become a vice president in the foreign department of the National Bank of Commerce in New York. In 1929 he became superintendent of banks for the State of New York.

Szymczak: Born in Chicago, August 15, 1894, he received A.B. and A.M. degrees at St. Mary's College, Kentucky and De Paul University of Chicago, becoming professor of business administration and economics at the latter school. After a business career during which he became comptroller of the City of Chicago, he was appointed a member of the Federal Reserve Board on January 13, 1933, and is now reappointed.

Ransom, a Lawyer.

Ransom: Born in Columbia, S. C., January 21, 1882, he received his LL.B. degree at the University of Georgia in 1903 and was admitted to the bar the same year. He engaged in the general practice of law in Atlanta, in 1922 becoming vice president of the Fulton National Bank. A director of several corporations, president of the Atlanta Clearing House Association, president of the Georgia Bankers Association, at times during his career, he has been prominently identified with the American Bankers Association and the Reserve City Bankers Association.

Record of McKee.

McKee: Born in Pittsburgh, November 19, 1891, he was educated in public schools there, Alleghany Preparatory School and the University of Pittsburgh, specializing in banking and commercial law. Of wide experience in general banking and business, he represented the Comptroller of the Currency as receiver for insolvent national banks in Ohio and Pennsylvania in 1931-32, and later became examiner for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in charge of bank reorganizations. Since 1933 he has been chief of the examining division of the RFC.

Morrison: Born in Howell County Mo., September 7, 1882, he was educated in public schools and college at West Plains, Mo.; began his business career in a railroad's operating department; later sold railroad equipment in the United States and foreign countries. He aided in the development of water power and studied the operation of electric power plants, assisting in organizing the Central Power & Light Co. in 1916, which was sold in 1925. In business in San Antonio, Tex., he has devoted himself to large-scale ranching, except for service as a member of the American delegation to the World Monetary and Economic Conference at London.

Ickes Sees New Laws to Offset McCarl Ruling

By the Associated Press

Another obstacle to occupation of the Government's low-cost housing developments was raised yesterday by Comptroller General J. R. McCarl, drawing from Secretary Ickes the assertion that additional legislation was "mandatory."

The Comptroller General, who already has ruled that the PWA could not make payments to cities for municipal services for the projects, yesterday decided there was no authority to charge lower rents on the first ten projects than total costs justified.

Ickes, who had planned to strike off 45 per cent of the allotments in figuring the rent, said "it is perfectly obvious that if the low-income group, now living under the most wretched conditions imaginable in American slums, are to be given decent shelter and the opportunity to grow up as useful citizens, there must be a subsidy applied to their housing."

The PWA administrator added this "makes it mandatory that legislation be enacted to permit the administration of the PWA slum-clearance program."

Techwood Project.

The Techwood project in Atlanta, which drew McCarl's ban on Federal payments to the city in lieu of taxes on the developments, also occasioned yesterday's decision. It was expected that Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, who is sponsoring a bill intended to extricate the housing division from its earlier difficulty, would introduce the new legislation.

The ruling applied only to the ten projects financed from the old PWA fund appropriated under the national industrial recovery act. Apparently, however, the $100,000,000 additional program for 33 other developments would fall under McCarl's decision that in the obsence of specific instructions by Congress to charge less rents, must defray the Government' total investment.

The 45 per cent donation was based on PWA's policy of donating a similar proportion of allotments to local governments for other types of projects. The remaining 55 per cent was to be amoritized on a 60-year 3 per cent interest basis.

McCarl's decision followed formulation here last week by the national public housing conference of a drive for new appropriations for the housing division. No funds were included in President Roosevelt's budget message, although Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, has prepared a bill calling for a $1,000,000,000 new program

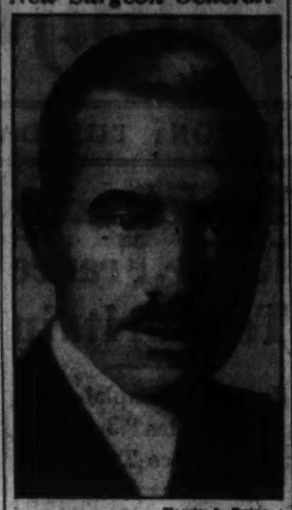
Low Income Groups.

The conference emphasized that it would be impossible to put the developments within reach of low income groups without a Federal subsidy, but suggested that local housing authorities could carry out the projects.

The Techwood project in Atlanta is the only Federal housing development yet occupied, although several private developments financed with PWA loans are now open. Most of the nine others affected by the decision will be completed this spring.

The other nine developments are: University, also in Atlanta; Riverside Heights and William B. Patterson Courts, in Montgomery, Ala.; Cedar Central, Cleveland; community housing, Indianapolis; the addition to the Jane Addams project in Chicago; Brewster, Detroit, and projects in Evansville, Ind., and Schenectady, N. Y.

New Surgeon General?



Harris & Ewing.

DR. THOMAS H. PARRAN, JR.

Parran Assured Cumming's Post

Assurance that Dr. Thomas H. Parran, jr., has been recommended to President Roosevelt as successor to Surgeon General Hugh S. Cumming and that he will receive the appointment was given yesterday in authoritative quarters.

Acceptance of Dr. Cumming's resignation, submitted on the grounds of ill health, by the President was made public a few days ago. Naming of a successor by the White House is subject to Senate confirmation.

Dr. Parran is an assistant surgeon general of the U. S. Public Health Service on leave of absence to hold the post of New York State health commissioner. Mr. Roosevelt was Governor of New York when Dr. Parran received the latter appointment in 1930. His current two-year term expires next January.

City Headquarters For Borah Opened

By the Associated Press

Informed sources said yesterday a "Borah for President" national campaign headquarters under the chairmanship of Carl G. Bachmann, Wheeling, W. Va., has quietly been established here.

The move has been made in anticipation of the Idaho Senator's formal declaration of his candidacy for the Republican nomination on or about February 1.

Bachmann, for years Republican whip in the House of Representatives, has offices in a three-room suite of a prominent hotel.

Representative Fish (Republican), New York, generally accepted spokesman for Borah enthusiasts, was "neither affirming nor denying" the existence or purposes of Bachmann's organization.

"That," he said, "rightfully should come from Mr. Bachmann. All I can admit is that I understand efforts are under way here to set up a voluntary national campaign committee for Senator Borah's anticipated candidacy."

McDonald Is Confirmed As FHA Administrator

By the Associated Press.

The Senate yesterday confirmed the nomination of Stewart McDonald, of Missouri, as Federal housing administrator for the unexpired term of four years starting June 30, 1934. He succeeds James A. Moffett, resigned.

New Deal Leaders Blast Smith

will address a McKinley Day dinner at Canton, Ohio.

Attention also is being attracted by the plan of another Republican possibility, Gov. Alf. M. Landon of Kansas, to speak at a Kansas Day dinner at Topeka tomorrow night.

"Smith says America is being ruined," Woodrum told House members. "And what does he do? He takes a walk. Can you imagine Jackson, Jefferson, Cleveland or Franklin D. Roosevelt taking a walk when the country was in danger?"

Woodrum demanded to know when the sanctity of Democratic platforms became so important to Smith. He recalled the 1928 convention at Houston when the Democrats were divided on the prohibition question and finally adopted a law enforcement plank. He recalled that in spite of this declaration Smith wrote his own repeal plank and ran on it.

The Virginia Representative told the House that "license and not liberty" was the objective of the American Liberty League.

"They call it a Liberty League," he shouted. "O Liberty, what crimes are committed in thy name! "In what liberties are they interested? I wonder if at that table Saturday night there was a single human being who missed a meal during the depression. I wonder if there was a single head which had tossed upon a sleepless pillow, fearing the loss of his home or his farm."

He said the same crowd in 1928 were "pointing a finger of scorn at Smith because his table manners were not just what they should be."

"How well we remember Chicago," he said, "with little Johnny Rascob and Jouett Shouse and those other little spoiled boys who couldn't take it."

Democratic members stood and applauded when Woodrum finished. He was followed by Fish. The Republican representative said that Republican demands for repeal of unsound legislation were practically the same demands as those made by Smith.

"Gov. Smith, in his speech the other night, takes exactly the same point of view as the Republican Party," he said.

Democrats applauded loudly.

* * * when he says he stands for constitutional government and restoration of the powers of the legislative branch," Fish concluded.

"There is not a single statement by Gov. Smith which I can not indorse personally," he continued, "or that is in conflict with any individual who believes in a representative, constitutional form of government. The only fault I find with his speech—which represented the rank and file of Democrats—was that it didn't go far enough.

"It didn't go into party faith, the principles of Thomas Jefferson and the violation of those principles."

Speaker Byrns earlier in the day declared that Smith's speech made re-election of President Roosevelt "more certain than ever." He said Smith had left the people wholly in doubt as to what he would have done had he been elected President.

Byrnes Defends Roosevelt.

"The President tried to conform to the platform and to the Constitution," Byrns said. "Don't forget that platform was written in June, 1932, and President Roosevelt was confronted with a condition in March, 1933, in which he had to do something or things would have gone to smash."

Representative Bankhead (Alabama) Democratic leader in the House, recalled that "in 1928 it would have been convenient for many of us to "take a walk."

In a radio talk last night Charles M. Hay, special Assistant Attorney General, told his audience that he was moved with profound regret that Smith "should fail his former friends and supporters and fail his country when those principles are being applied and those ideals about to be realized—"principles and ideals for which Smith formerly fought."

From Chicago, the Associated Press reported that Col. Frank Knox, candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, had predicted Smith's speech "unquestionably will have the effect of swinging millions of Democratic votes to the support of the Republican ticket next fall."

Knox said that had Smith been elected and had he followed the Democratic platform "the United States today would have been leading the world toward recovery." He suggested that the Republican party incorporate in its 1936 platform "the principal broken pledges" of the 1932 Democratic platform.

Smith's Speech Forces Choice Upon Tammany

Leaders Must Repudiate '28 Hero or Roosevelt; Revolt Is Hinted.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 27.—Alfred E. Smith's fighting words against the New Deal plunged Tammany Hall into a dilemma tonight which threatened both its leadership and the Tammany prestige of "Sachem" Smith.

Out of the Tammany consternation over Smith's speech before the American Liberty League, and all of the conjecture caused by it, there came general agreement among Democratic leaders in Smith's home town that Tammany must decide upon one of two courses.

One is to reaffirm its pledge of co-operation with the State and national Democratic parties—both directed by James A. Farley; the other, to side with Smith as a veteran counselor.

The decision lies with young James J. Dooling, who assumed the Tammany leadership in July, 1934, with the general approval of Farley.

Revolt Is Brewing.

But it also became known today that an uprising to unseat Dooling brewed among Tammany district leaders, demanding a clear-cut affirmation of Tammany support for President Roosevelt in the Philadelphia convention.

The demand, it was reported, is to be made through the district leaders individually or by a spokesman for the group.

Such a demand would place Dooling in the position of acknowledging the regular Democratic organization, headed by Chairman Farley, and repudiating Smith—tacitly if not directly—or vice versa.

Democratic lieutenants in the Manhattan Tammany district were frankly pessimistic over the outcome, some seeing a solution only in the resignation of Dooling from Tammany leadership.

Leaders Restless.

Since his successful battle to overthrow former leader John F. Curry, Dooling has encountered serious obstacles. By his accepting the counsel of Smith and only partly co-operating with the regular Democratic organization, Tammany has been embarrassed by a noticeable lack of Federal patronage. District leaders have become restless.

Many Tammany leaders were convinced today that Smith will have to enter a primary fight if he wants to go to the convention as a delegate.

Reports were current in Democratic circles that neither Smith nor John W. Davis, a fellow Liberty Leaguer, and former Democratic Presidential candidate, will be selected as delegates at large.

At Smith's office, it was said that "it is impossible" to estimate the number of telegrams received as a result of the speech, and late today a secretarial staff was still busy opening messages.

Slaying of Son Charged To Radio Man's Wife

Gatesville, Tex., Jan. 27 (AP).—Mrs. Ethel Johnson, 47, wife of a Federal radio commission inspector, was indicted today on a charge of killing her son, Joe Dean Blankenship, said by prosecutors to have named her beneficiary in life insurance policies totaling $3,000.

She previously had been indicted on a charge of killing her daughter-in-law, Bernice Blankenship, 17.

Old Theater Landmark Falls Prey to Wreckers

Chicago, Jan. 27 (AP).—Another theatrical landmark, the 35-year-old Illinois Theater, fell prey to wreckers today.

They began tearing down the house, which boasted of seats once selling for one of the highest prices ever paid in this country, to make room for another downtown parking lot.

In 1907, when the first Ziegfeld Follies came to the Illinois, two first-row seats on the aisle were disposed of by a "scalper" for a reported $400.

Harry J. Powers was owner of the theater during the period in which many famous stage stars thrilled its audiences.

Talmadge Sure Party Will Bar Roosevelt Race

He Will Not Be Renamed, Says Governor After Talk With Kirby.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Jan. 27.—Gov. Eugene Talmadge, one of the South's most bitter New Deal critics, today expressed confidence that President Roosevelt would fail to be renominated at Philadelphia.

Talmadge and John Henry Kirby, his ally in calling the "Grass Roots" anti-Roosevelt meeting at Macon Wednesday, held a conference in the Governor's office as Kirby passed through here from his Houston, Tex., home to the site of the gathering.

The Governor said Southern "Jeffersonian Democrats" had two objects in view at Macon: Saving the country and saving the Democratic Party.

Both he and Kirby said they were in full accord about the resolutions to be adopted at Macon. Kirby added principles were the first consideration and the "Constitutional Democrats" had no candidate in mind as yet.

Kirby and Talmadge intended invitations to Republicans dissatisfied with the candidate to be named at their national convention, to join their movement.

Talmadge predicted the Philadelphia national convention of the Democratic Party would return to the platform of 1932—which he charged President Roosevelt had abandoned—and select a Presidential candidate who would stand on that platform and carry it through.

The two "Grass Roots" leaders scouted any possibility of a third party's growing out of the Macon meeting. "We are all within the Democratic organization," Kirby said, "and will fight under our own flag."

Kirby said those opposed to the Roosevelt Administration would campaign throughout the South against the renomination, and said he was certain a number of delegations to the convention from the South would have anti-New Dealers within their ranks.

He said the "Dixie Democrats" would be organized to take votes "away from the socialists." He charged President Roosevelt is a "socialist."

2 Youths Ask For Jury Trial In Fake Alarms

Son of Ex-Representative and Companion Liable to 6-Month Terms.

Charged with pulling 29 false fire alarms between 11 p. m. Friday and 1 a. m. Saturday, two 18-year-old students pleaded not guilty and demanded a jury trial yesterday when arraigned before Police Court Judge Walter J. Casey.

The youths, Waldron W. Whitehead, 3016 Tilden street northwest, and Adam Martin Wyant, 2311 Connecticut avenue northwest, son of former Representative Wyant, of Pennsylvania, were arrested at their homes early Saturday by Third Precinct police after the license tag numbers from their automobile had been obtained.

If found guilty, the boys could be fined $100 each or sentenced to 6 months in jail, or both, in each of the 29 cases. They were released under $500 bond each in one of the cases yesterday, and the court took their personal bond to appear in the others. No date has been set for the trial.

Wyant, first year student at the University of Maryland, and Whitehead, a student of Western High School, stood with bowed heads as the charge was read and their attorneys argued for the jury trial. Assistant Corporation Counsel James W. Lauderdale agreed to a jury trial after consulting law books.

Firemen were summoned to various parts of the northwest section, over slippery streets, in answer to the calls sent in. Fire Department headquarters were swamped with calls asking the whereabouts of the "big fire" the alarms indicated.

Nebraska Firms Ask Power Stay

Proposed loans and grants by the Public Works Administration to three huge Nebraska power projects were attacked in the District Supreme Court yesterday when a group of central Nebraska utility companies challenged the legality of allotments totaling $24,800,000. As a result of the complaints, District Supreme Court Justice Jesse C. Adkins called upon the Government to show cause by February 5 why the allotments should not be enjoined.

The suits were filed by the Iowa-Nebraska Light and Power Co., Western Public Service Co., Central Power Co., Nebraska Power Co., and the Nebraska Public Service Co. Their complaints set forth a number of allegedly unconstitutional features.

The allotments consist of a $10,000,000 combined grant and allotment for the creation of a plant in central Nebraska; $7,500,000 for the Sutherland Project on the Platte River, and a Loup River grant of $7,300,000 under the terms of contracts now nearing completion, the power companies said.

Moran Reported Unwilling to Quit

Although reports have been frequent that Chief William H. Moran, of the United States Secret Service, will be retired in March, official confirmation was lacking yesterday.

The veteran officer, who has known intimately every President since McKinley, wishes to have his service continued, it was learned unofficially last night.

Two years ago President Roosevelt retained Chief Moran, who was past the retirement age. The order of retention automatically expires in March, but Chief Moran, it is understood, wishes to remain on the job.

There was speculation yesterday as to who might be named to succeed him.

Logical candidate for the office, it was felt in many quarters, is Joseph E. Murphy, Chief Moran's assistant and a veteran of 30 years' service. Moran, 58 years old, is a native of Columbus, Ohio.

Ramsey Acquitted Of Slaying Woman

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 27 (AP).—John Lee Ramsey, 28, of Rocky Mount, was acquitted of voluntary manslaughter charges this afternoon in connection with the death of Mrs. Eula Jane Harbert, 28, last November 15, after Judge J. L. Almond, jr., of hustings court, sustained a defense motion to strike the Commonwealth's evidence.

City Coroner Charles M. Irvin, testified that in his opinion Mrs. Harbert died from acute alcoholism and exposure.

The young woman's body was found lying in a vacant lot on the morning of November 15, after she allegedly had been automobile riding with Ramsey the previous evening.

3 Ships Race to Help Freighter After SOS

New York, Jan. 27 (AP).—An SOS from the Greek freighter Antonis G. Lemos tonight sent three ships racing to her aid and imposed almost four hours of commercial radio silence until it was announced temporary repairs had been made and assistance no longer was required.

The SOS was picked up by stations in the United States at 6:18 p. m. (E. S. T.). Regular radio traffic was resumed at 10:08 p. m. After a message from the Lemos said: "Chains have been repaired. No more assistance required. Waiting weather improvement before calling at Bermuda for repairs. Many thanks."

The message apparently referred to chains controlling the steering gear. The Lemos was bound from Istanbul to Baltimore.

Women's Clubs Here Support Edith Maxwell

D. C. Federation Calls for New Trial of Teacher Jailed in Killing.

The District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday expressed its belief in the innocence of Edith Maxwell, Wise County, Va., school teacher, whose 25-year sentence for the death of her father is now being appealed.

This statement was made in a resolution adopted at the federation's monthly meeting at the Raleigh Hotel.

The resolution declared the federation favored a new trial for Miss Maxwell and said the organization felt that if women were permitted to serve on juries in Virginia she would not have been found guilty.

The federation also indorsed the reappointment of Presiding Judge Gus A. Schuldt, of Police Court, saying:

"He is the one man without question to be appointed to the position he has so honorably filled for 15 years."

It also reaffirmed its stand of last year indorsing the equal rights amendment to the Constitution and recommended that this question be presented to the council meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs at Miami in April.

The organization also reiterated its opposition to the pending congressional bill to limit the working hours of women in the District to 40 hours a week.

After listening to a speech by Mrs. Jesse C. Atkins on the bill for a model juvenile court here, the federation voted to make a study of this bill.

2 Appeal Terms Under Food Law

By the Associated Press.

Two men convicted of conspiracy to violate the pure food law by selling "Warm Springs Crystal Compound," appealed to the Supreme Court yesterday to save them from prison sentences.

The water at Warm Springs, Ga., became famous some years ago when President Roosevelt found they were beneficial to sufferers of infantile paralysis.

The men are Mallory H. Taylor, jr., and Curtis J. Hazelrigs, who were sentenced to a year and a day in a Federal penitentiary. A third defendant, W. C. Dunham, pleaded guilty and testified for the Government.

They were convicted in the Middle Georgia Federal District Court of shipping in interstate commerce packages of sodium sulphate with the Warm Springs label.

It was charged the label was misleading because it indicated the product contained ingredients taken from the waters of Warm Springs, Ga. The defendants said they did not make that claim.

Hoffman Does Not Plan New Hauptmann Stay

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 27 (AP).—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman said tonight he had no "present intention" of granting Bruno Richard Hauptmann another reprieve at the expiration of the present one on February 15.

He also said he did not plan to call the court of pardons into special session to consider for a second time commutation of Hauptmann's death sentence.

The Governor, on January 16, granted Hauptmann a 30-day stay of execution and announced then there would be no further reprieves unless he and Attorney General David T. Wilentz agreed one was necessary.

36-Year Cold Mark Falls

In Wisconsin 10 and 15-degree readings were expected before daylight and Chicago reported 10 below as continued cold was forecast for Indiana, Michigan and Ohio.

As Washingtonians shivered and warmed their often semimumbed hands and feet before fireplaces and in office and Government buildings, Winter played artist and set the Capital in a background of ice and snow.

Most traffic was tied up in the ice-packed harbor here. The Norfolk and Washington steamers plied as usual, as did the steamer which operates between Fort Washington and the Capital.

Braving the sting of stark winter, groups of skaters glided on the Mirror Pool. Last night coasters speeded down glistening hillsides in Rock Creek Park.

Now and then, faint and far far away, came the jingle of sleigh bells. Fountains were decked in ice, and infrequent passersby who stopped to drink were forced to watch their step, lest they slip and fall on the ice.

Perhaps the most unique of the cold-wave pastimes was that of fishing.

Dr. Charles Wyche Commits Suicide

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 27.—Dr. Charles Wyche, 70, retired naval physician, died of a pistol wound in the head at his home, the Briscoe House, near here today. Harry Davis, St. Marys County coroner, said the wound obviously was self-inflicted and that an inquest would not be held.

Dr. Wyche came to Briscoe House six years ago from Washington, when his health began to fail shortly after his retirement.

He is survived by his wife and two sons, Ralph, 18, and Crosby, 21. According to tentative funeral arrangements, the body will be cremated in Washington. Buriel plans have not been announced.

Glider Pilot, Passenger Saved by 'Chute Leaps

Moscow, Jan. 27 (AP).—The pilot and passenger in a glider connected with an air-train saved themselves with parachute jumps today when the glider broke up in the air near Moscow.

Pilot Pavloff made a delayed jump to get clear of the diving wreckage of the glider. He did not jerk the rip cord until 200 feet from the ground, the wreckage missing him narrowly as he fell.

King Opposes U. S. Low-Cost Housing Here

He Will Consider Capper Plan, but Says It Is Not Necessary.

Opposition to the proposal of Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, that the Federal Government advance money for low-rent housing construction in the National Capital was voiced yesterday by Chairman King of the Senate District Committee.

"Building houses is not a function of the Federal Government," Senator King said. "If it started here, there would come demands from all over the country for Government-financed housing construction."

Senator King said the Senate District Committee will, nevertheless, give consideration to Capper's proposal that at least 5,000 housing units be built in Washington, because the Kansas Senator is ranking minority member of the committee.

The District Committee will meet in executive session this week, King said, to decide whether it will conduct an inquiry into charges of pro-communism in the public schools.

"There are plenty of private contractors and investors ready to build as many houses as Washington needs," Senator King continued. "A man just recently told me that he had put up 40 houses and would put up 40 more.

"There were vacant houses in Washington before all these emergency agencies were created and thousands of additional Government employes were brought here, and there'll be vacant houses after these temporary employes have gone home."

Senator Capper had suggested that the Government advance the construction funds to the PWA Housing Division and the Alley Dwelling Authority and that the debt be amortized over an indefinite period of years through the collection of rents.

Mexican Bandits Release American

Guanajuato, Mexico, Jan. 27 (AP). Max L. Quinn, United States citizen who was kidnaped by bandits Friday, was freed today after promising to pay 1,000 pesos (about $280) to his captors.

Quinn was unharmed and reached here after a long trip afoot and on horseback. The former Spokane, Wash., resident said a band of 25 men seized him near the El Cubo mine, of which he is manager, but, surprised by Federal troops, split into two groups.

One party remained to fight the soldiers while three of their colleagues hustled Quinn into the mountains.

"The kidnapers treated me well, but kept me waiting all night Friday and Saturday, finally releasing me after I agreed to pay 1,000 pesos," Quinn said. "I walked three hours and reached a town called El Chorro, where I obtained a horse and then came here."

James Rowland Bibbins, civil engineer and transportation consultant, died yesterday at his home, 2301 Connecticut avenue northwest. He was 58 years old.

A pioneer in this work, Bibbins conducted traffic surveys in 25 cities, including Washington, New York, Chicago, Detroit, Philadelphia and Boston. He made a comprehensive study here in 1928-29 of traffic lights and rerouting for the Washington Railway & Electric Co. and the Capital Traction Co., and reported his findings to Senate and House committees which were then considering a bill for the merger of the two companies.

Bibbins was born May 25, 1877, at Williamsport, Pa., the son of John M. and Frances Bliss (Rowland) Bibbins. His father was an inventor. After graduation from Baltimore City College and the University of Michigan, which conferred a bachelor of science degree upon him in 1899, he went to New York to work for the Westinghouse Electric Co. Later he worked for the same company in Chicago.

He came to Washington in 1921 to serve with the traffic division of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, subsequently opening his own office here as a consulting engineer.

Bibbins was married in 1917 to Vivian Linderman, of Morengo, Ill. She died here in 1926.

Bibbins was also a writer of poems, which were published under the name of "James Rowbins."

He was a member of the Arts Club, the Cosmos Club, the Washington Board of Trade, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the Washington Society of Engineers, the Michigan Alumni Club, the American Electric Railway Association, the Society of Terminal Engineers, the National City Planning Conference, the Appalachian Mountain Club and the Tau Beta Pi Association. He was a past scoutmaster of Troop 22, Boy Scouts of America, and a communicant of the Epiphany Church.

Funeral services will be held from the home at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mrs. Ella Sevier, widow of the late John Sevier, 3124 Q street northwest, who was a direct descendant of the first Governor of Tennessee, was named as the principal heir of his $400,000 estate it was shown yesterday when his will was filed for probate in the District Supreme Court. Mr. Sevier died December 22.

She is to receive the income from the major portion of the estate for life. A $75 monthly income is provided for a sister, Miss Sally Sevier, of Louisville, Ky.

After Mrs. Sevier's death, William R. Sevier, a cousin, of Birmingham, Ala., is to receive the bulk of the residue. All of the local property in the estate is to be converted into a memorial to Gov. John Sevier.

Library Trustees Chosen in Suburb

County Commissioner Paul Coughlan announced that the commissioners had approved a tax of 2 cents per $100 of property assessment in the area to support the library.

Mrs. Beers, who presided, read the annual report, in which a total circulation of 18,625 for 1935 was recorded among 1,400 readers.

Smith to BeWitness In Boundary Quiz

Virginia's side of the District-Virginia boundary dispute will be presented today when the House Judiciary Committee resumes hearings on the Boundary Commission at 10 a. m.

Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, sponsor of the commission, will be in charge of the presentation of witnesses, and will himself take the stand.

The State attorney general, A. P. Staples, and State Senator Frank Ball, of Arlington County, will be the chief witnesses, and the boards of both Arlington and Fairfax Counties will be present.

At last Thursday's hearing the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the Justice Department, and the District government attacked the commission's recommendation that the boundary line follow the southeastern side of the Mount Vernon boulevard.

Funeral Services Set For Mrs. Eversole, 100

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 27.—Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon for Mrs. Elizabeth Eversole, centenarian, who died Sunday at her home at Great Cacapon, near here, as the result of a fall at her home the day after she observed her one-hundredth birthday, January 15.

She was married to James Eversole before the War Between the States, and recalled incidents of that conflict in Morgan County, W. Va., where she was born and spent her entire life. Her recollections included a flight across the Potomac when Southern forces burned her home. She was a Union supporter and had two brothers who served with the Northern troops.

Executive Mansion Bids Suggested by Democrats

Baltimore, Jan. 27 (AP).—Competitive bidding for contracts for work on the executive mansion was suggested today by the two Democratic members of the board of public works.

Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor has been asked to rule whether the board has the power to allot money from another fund for completion of the mansion. Work on it was halted when the appropriation was exhausted. The members of the board are Comptroller William S. Gordy, jr., State Treasurer Hooper S. Miles and Gov. Harry W. Nice.

Amateur Flies Under Planes Dropping Bombs

Sacramento, Jan. 27 (AP).—Robert Grant, amateur flier, swooped down toward Mather Field to learn what was the reason for unusual ground activity. Down past Grant plummeted something.

A puff. Then an explosion.

When Grant, hastily flying away, landed at the Municipal Airport he was warned with other aviators to stay away from Mather Field, because Army fliers were practicing bombing.

Funeral Rites For Mead Set For Tomorrow

Place in Reclamation Burea 'Almost Impossible to Fill,' Says Ickes.

Secreary Ickes put aside Interior Department business long enough yesterday to express sorrow over the death Sunday night of his commissioner of reclamation, Dr. Elwood Mead.

"The death of Dr. Mead," Ickes said, "is a profound shock to me personally."

At Dr. Mead's residence at 1661 Crescent place northwest, where thrombosis and advanced age ended a long and brilliant Government career in his seventy-ninth year, it was announced that funeral services to be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow will be for members of the family only.

"His place in the official family of the Interior Department will be almost impossible to fill. He was an outstanding man, famed in his field throughout the world. All who knew him loved and respected him."

No Successor Yet.

Administration officials were silent yesterday on their probable choice of a man to fill the vacancy left by his death. Unofficially, however, predictions were that the selection would be made outside the Bureau of Reclamation.

R. F. Walter, chief bureau engineer and one of the most likely choices to succeed Dr. Mead under normal circumstances, was reported to be unwilling at the present time to relinquish the post that has put him at the head of field operations at Boulder Dam.

Walter's reluctance to accept the post was advanced unofficially as one of the principal reasons why the appointment probably will be made outside the bureau, although John C. Lage, head of the Washington engineering staff, was considered a possibility for the post.

His Work Praised.

"As commissioner of the Bureau of Reclamation, Dr. Mead has left for the Nation many monuments in work well done," Secretary Ickes continued. "Perhaps no man contributed more to the planning of Boulder Dam and certainly no one had a more important part in the actual construction of it than Dr. Mead. If his place in the memory of his Nation were to rest on that accomplishment alone, it would be secure. But there were many other accomplishments in his long and exceptional career as an engineer, law-giver, teacher and administrator in the field of irrigation.

"The death of Dr. Mead is a distinct loss to the country, which by his life he has so enriched through thought and devotion to duty and ideals."

E. K. Burlew, administrative assistant to Ickes, said Dr. Mead's "passing will be mourned by a great multitude in the West who have him to thank more than any other man for their hearth and their economic independence."

Dr. Mead was appointed reclamation commissioner by President Coolidge in 1924. During the last two years he directed the spending of $175,000,000 of New Deal funds for irrigation, stream control and hydro-electric projects.

Former New York Times Columnist Dies at 78

New Rochelle, N. Y., Jan. 27 (AP). Frederick Craig Mortimer, 78, an author and for 30 years editor of a column, "Topics of the Times," in the New York Times, died today at his home here.

mittee, and therefore played a prominent part in the election of Warren G. Harding to the Presidency. In 1921 President Harding appointed him Governor of Alaska. He took office June 15, his wedding anniversary, and served until June 13, 1925, when he was succeded by George Alexander Parks, a Coolidge appointee.

Leaving Alaska, Bone moved to Atascadero, Calif., where in October, 1925, he was elected vice president of the Westren Publishers, Inc. Meantime, he continued to work for the betterment of Alaska. He urged concentration of governmental supervision, replacing a bureaucratic system. He predicted that ultimately Alaska would be divided nito two States and would enter the Union under that basis.

He was married in 1887 to Mary Worth, of Anderson, Ind., whose death preceded his. He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Alfred Wilcox, of Santa Barbara; Mrs. John S. Starr, of Beverly Hills, and five sons, Carroll, of Santa Barbara; Paul, of Los Angeles; Roger, of Pasadena; Scott W., of the Boulevard Apartments of this city, and Robert D., of Seattle.

He was a member of the National Press Club, the Gridiron Club (president in 1910), the Elks Club, and the Yacht and Country Club of Tampa, Fla. He was a life member of the American Red Cross and held the decoration of the Japanese Order of Sacred Treasure.

Miss M'Dougall Funeral Service Set for Today

Art Critic, Magazine Editor, Died Sunday After Long Illness.

Funeral services for Miss Isabel McDougall, who died Sunday night at her residence, 2819 Twenty-eighth street northwest, at the age of 78, will be held today at 2 p. m. in All Souls Church. Burial will be in New York.

Miss McDougall, who had been ill for some time, was an art critic and contributing editor to various women's magazines. She was born in New York, but began her career as an art critic for the old Chicago Times, later going to the Chicago Post. Moving back to New York, she was for many years with the Butterick publications.

As a young girl, Miss McDougall spent 15 years in Europe with her parents, acquiring a command of foreign languages which was turned to good account during the World War when, as a member of the Censorship Bureau in New York, she was employed to read alien mail.

Miss McDougall came here 15 years ago to live in comparative retirement. She is survived by a sister Miss Maud McDougall, with whom she resided.

Capt. J. M. Evans Rites to Be Today

Last rites for Capt. John M. Evans, U.S.A., who died Sunday at Walter Reed Hospital, will be held at 2 p. m. today in Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington cemetery with full military honors. Capt. Raph C. Deibert will officiate.

Capt. Evans was born January 29, 1904, in Manila. He was made a second lieutenant in 1925, first lieutenant in 1931 and captain in August, 1935. He was a graduate of Michigan Agricultural College, class of 1925. At the time of his death he was on temporary detail at the army finance school here and recently he was ordered to duty at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth D. Evans, who was at his side when he died.

Pallbearers, appointed yesterday, are Lieut. Col. Gladeon L. Barnes, Capt. Theodore A. Baumeister, Capt. Emmett J. Bean, Capt. Mitchell A. Giddens, Capt. Stewart W. Towle, jr., and Dr. Charles E. Kellogg.

Soviet's Highest Honor Awarded to Stakhanoff

Moscow, Jan. 27 (AP).—Soviet Russia's highest honor, the Order of Lenin, tonight was awarded to Alexei Stakhanoff, initiator of the "Stakhanoff movement" to increase industrial production.

The award was made in the Kremlin in the presence of Joseph Stalin and other high officials. Stakhanoff, who came to Moscow from his work in a coal mine to receive the decoration, was besieged in his hotel by admirers.

Air Conditioning Of Autos Planned

The progress of experiments toward that end formed a topic of prime interest as the twenty-fourth annual convention of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers opened.

Members of the craft said the cooling appliances would first be utilized by motor buses and ambulances, with installation to follow later in private cars.

JohnGilbert Leaves Estate of $363,494

Los Angeles, Jan. 27 (AP).—A fortune of $363,494 in cash, stocks, bonds and negotiable securities comprises the estate of John Gilbert, romantic screen actor who died of a heart attack January 9.

The will was admitted to probate today by Superior Judge Arthur Keetch. Charles A. Greene, Gilbert's business manager for seven years, was named executor.

Blonde Virginia Bruce, film actress and divorced fourth wife of "Handsome Jack," was left the bulk of the estate. Gilbert directed that six annuities of $25,000 each be purchased to insure Miss Bruce and their daughter, Susan Ann, aged 2, an income for life.

Gilbert left $10,000 to another daughter, Leatrice Joy Gilbert, whose mother, Leatrice Joy, screen actress, was Gilbert's second wife. Various other bequests ranging from $1,000 to $5,000, were left relatives, friends and servants.

Dr. Williamson, 76, Former Pastor, Dies

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 27 (AP).—Dr. C. H. Williamson, 76, a member of the Southern Presbyterian Church, and former pastor of First Church here, died at a hospital today.

After resigning his pastorate here because of bad health, Dr. Williamson lived in Aubuquerque, N. Mex., from 1928 to 1932. About a year ago he was compelled to give up a pastorate at Lexington, Mo., because of his health.

He came to Memphis from Waukesha, Wis., the son of the late David E. Williamson, also a Presbyterian minister. His first pastorate was at Covington, Ky.

Survivors include his wife, four daughters, Mrs. Frank Puller, Evanston, Ill.; Mrs. Jack Worthington, Albuquerque, N. Mex.; Mrs. E. H. McGehee, Memphis, and Mrs. T. E. Hughes, Dallas, Tex., and three sons, Chester H., St. Louis; Charles, Charleston, W. Va., and Rowland Williamson, Tampa, Fla.

FLUSH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 2 pounds of waste, poisonous matter may develop, causing serious trouble. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, which have been used successfully by millions of people for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help to flush out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes. Desta's Forces In South Flee; Neghelli Falls

Addis Ababa Concerned; Seals Lips of Red Cross Officers.

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Jan. 27.—A strong advance by Italy's southern army caused concern in Ethiopian official circles tonight. The defending warriors of Ras Desta Demtu were reported completely disorganized and fleeing.

Red Cross officials confirmed Italian reports that the Fascist invaders had occupied the strategic provincial capital of Neghelli.

Two members of Swedish Red Cross units in the south reached here last night safely. They said the Italians had seized their equipment, but denied rumors that Swedes had been taken prisoners.

At the same time an official denial was issued that Desta, son-in-law of Emperor Haile Selassie, had been gravely wounded. Government sources also ridiculed reports the Italians had reached Igra Alem, Desta's newly constructed capital.

They said it was impossible to make the journey with the Fascist mechanized units.

Italians were said to be bombing an area 200 miles north of Wadara, making it impossible for Desta to transmit orders.

Because of the government's concern over the southern situation, it ordered Red Cross officials to cease giving information to newspapers.

"My lips are sealed," said Dr. Hanner, the Swedish consul, when he returned from an airplane flight to Sidamo.

A Red Cross unit directed by Austrians and Poles reported by telegraph that it was bombed twice near Makale, January 18.

"The Italians aimed especially at our plainly marked Red Cross emblems," said the message. It added that three women and two children who were undergoing treatment in an ambulance at the time were injured by the bombs.

15,000 Ethiopians Lost.

Rome, Jan. 27 (AP).—Italy's high command in Africa boosted to 15,000 today it's estimates of Ethiopian casualties in recent fighting on northern and southern fronts.

A great battle north of Dolo and the ensuing drive by the southern armies through nearly 300 miles of hostile territory claimed 10,000 Ethiopian lives, said a report from Marshal Pietro Badoglio, commander in chief of the colonial armies.

Two days ago Badoglio said 5,000 of the foe had been killed or wounded in major engagements in the north, climaxed, reportedly, by a smashing Italian victory.

Gen. Rudolfo Graziani's "hell on wheels" column pushed on from Neghelli to Wadara, a distance of approximately 40 miles, while Blackshirt lumberjacks in armored cars drove along the British Kenya Colony border after a battle in which, Italians said, 1,467 Ethiopians were slain.

Depot Blown Up.

The Ethiopian forces at Wadara offered "brief resistance," blew up their munitions depot and fell back, Badoglio reported. He said numerous prisoners were taken.

(Addis Ababa dispatches yesterday said Emperor Haile Selassie had ordered Ras Desta Demtu, in command of the southern armies, to withdraw into the mountains behind Wadara, nearly 300 miles from Dolo, for a stand against the invaders.)

Plunging through the jungles of the Dawa Parma River, the lumberjacks of Gen. Agostini repulsed Ethiopians under a Greek officer and seized the village of Malca Murri, 132 miles west of Dolo, the Fascist high commander stated.

Italian Losses "Small."

Italian losses of officers and white troops in the southern fighting were "small," Badoglio added, while "those of native troops amount to some hundreds dead, wounded and missing."

"A powerful radio station," "heavy chains for slaves," ammunition, cattle and other supplies were taken, he said, along with the personal luggage of a Belgian officer who served Ras Desta as military aid.

The marshal also reiterated Italian charges that the enemy had used "great quantities of dum dum bullets."

"Mopping up" was reported continuing in the north, and Badoglio said a band of armed Ethiopians along the Setit River had been beaten off by "our small outpost at Adenan."

Former Kaiser Observes His 77th Birthday

Associated Press Photos.

Fire Fighters Will Celebrate Silver Birthday

Deputy Chief W. S. Freeman to Be in Charge of Arrangements.

The silver anniversary of the founding of the Mount Rainier Volunteer Fire Deparment will be celebrated with ceremonies in the firehouse, Thirty-fourth and Ash streets, Saturday night. Deputy Chief William S. Freeman is in charge of arrangements.

Invitations have been extended to prominent firemen and officials of the county, the State and the District. The list includes Frank T. Shaeffer, president of the Maryland State Firemen's Association; W. R. Beattie, president of the Prince Georges County Volunteer Firemen's Association; Chief Howard Travers, Baltimore City Fire Department; Chief Edward Warr, Baltimore Salvage Corps; Chief Edward Schrom, District of Columbia Fire Department, and Chief H L. Leonard, Prince Georges County Rescue Squad.

Installation of officers also will be held during the evening. Karl A. Young will be inducted into the office for chief for the tenth successive time. Other officers to be installed include William S. Freeman, deputy chief; Bernard Beall, captain; James Mezzinotte, lieutenant; Simon Lebowitz, sergeant; Harry Robertson, superintendent of machinery; Edward Reier, secretary; David Laing, financial secretary; Andrew R. Gill, fire marshal, and Julius Reiners, treasurer.

The Mount Rainier Fire Department was established in February, 1911, when a group of citizens held a meeting for the purpose of discussing fire protection at the home of John Klein. Among those who attended were William H. Vanneman, who later became mayor of the town; Francis H. Crown, Robert Coward, M. C. Harmon and Ben Herron.

Assisting Deputy Chief Freeman in arranging the celebration are Arthur J. Bates, a former deputy chief; Bernard Beall, James Mezzinotte, Simon Lebowitz, E. T. Plumer, George Glorius and Joseph McMahon.

Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland extension service, and a corps of assistants will represent the university at the fifth annual poultry industries exposition, which opens in New York City Tuesday, February 4.

Among the assistants will be Leslie E. Bopst, Wade H. Rice, Stewart B. Shaw, Paul A. Raper, Mylo S. Downey, George Quigley, Dr. H. M. Devolt and William C. Supplee, all officials in the extension service.

The university's exhibit at the exposition will feature work that is being conducted by the Maryland Feed Inspection Service to determine the relative effectiveness of liver oils and allied materials.

The second annual meeting of the Southern Maryland Production Credit Association will be held Saturday at 10:30 a. m., in the courthouse at Upper Marlboro.

Bennett Crain, treasurer of the Production Credit Corporation of Baltimore, will explain how the credit association is associated with a Nation-wide co-operative credit system, serving farmers in every county within the country.

King at Bier

Other visitors were barred while they stood in silence before the catafalque.

With the Queen Mother was the little Princess Elizabeth, daughter of the Duke and Duchess o. York, who may herself some day sit upon the throne of the British Empire. Also in the party were the late King's sister, Maud of Norway, and King Haakon; the Kings of Denmark and the Belgians and Crown Prince Umberto of Italy.

Earlier, Rumania's King, the much-talked about Carol, had stood in silence for nearly 15 minutes before the bier. Another royal visitor was Prince Frederick of Prussia, grandson of the former Kaiser and godson of George V, the first male Hohenzoller to be received by George and Mary following the World War.

Yesterday, climaxed by the brilliant but solemn palace reception, drew one of the most colorful gatherings of diplomats and statesmen that Europe or the Isle had seen in many a year.

Principalities represented ranged from tiny Nepal, tucked high in the Himalayas, to the vast Argentine, and the personalities from the highest-born monarchs of the continent to Maxim Litvinoff, the Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, who before the war lived in London as a printer's assistant and taught Russian to officials of the British foreign office.

Londoners made ready to rise early in an attempt to gain positions along the route of this morning's funeral procession, which will be lined with 8,000 uniformed police while the men of Scotland Yard protect the distinguished guests.

Again King Edward and his three brothers will walk behind the casket during the 3½ miles of procession in London and Windsor. Also afoot will be the kings of Europe and the other heads of foreign delegations, including the American, Norman Davis.

Allied war veterans' associations, including that of the United States, will form an honor guard.

The procession will leave Westminster Hall at 9:45 a. m. (4:45 a. m., Eastern standard time), for Paddington Station. The funeral train will reach Windsor at 12:35 p. m. (7:35 a. m., Eastern standard time).

Last rites, led by the Archbishop of Canterbury, are to start in St. George's Chapel at 1:15 p. m. (8:15 a. m., Eastern standard time), and at 1:30 all of Britain will begin two minutes of reverent silence.

George V, it was announced officially, will be lowered into the St. George's vault to join the other kings of his line, clad in the uniform of a full admiral of the imperial navy.

Virginia State Fair Set for Sept. 28-Oct. 3

Richmond, Va., Jan. 27 (AP).—The Virginia State Fair Association voted here today to hold its annual fair in Richmond, from September 28 to October 3, inclusive. Seventy-five fair secretaries and other officials attended the nineteenth annual convention here.

H. B. Watkins, president of the association, was re-elected, as was C. B. Ralston, secretary-treasurer. Charles A. Somma, of Richmond, and T. B. McCaleb, of Covington, were re-elected first and second vice president, respectively. W. L. Tabscott, secretary of the Greenbrier Valley Fair Association, Lewisburg, W. Va., and R. Willard Eanes, of Petersburg, also were named vice presidents. They succeed T. L. Felts, of Galax, and E. V. Breeden, of Orange.

Ex-Kaiser, 77, Has A Quiet Birthday

Doorn, the Netherlands, Jan. 27 (AP). Beneath the proud standard of the Hohenzollerns, former Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany spent a quiet seventy-seventh birthday with his Kaiserin, Hermine, today.

The flag of Germany's royal house floated above spacious Doorn Manor, seat of the Emperor's exile for 17 years, and beneath it the white-bearded, erect former ruler went about his usual simple pursuits.

His daughter, Victoria Louise, the Duchess of Brunswick, was the lone guest. His other children and grandchildren, including the Crown Prince Frederick Wilhelm, were invited only for the birthday and family reunion dinner party, deferred until Friday because of the death of Wilhelm's cousin, King George V of England.

A wreath from the former Kaiser's rosarium, which is Wilhelm's special pride, was sent to London for George's state funeral tomorrow.

Britain Told of Rhine Arms

50 to 100 kilometers wide, extending the whole length of Germany. The zone was to remain inviolate from fortification or military occupation for 50 years after 1919, when the World War ended.

High French officials are nervously awaiting next Thursday, the third anniversary of Adolf Hitler's rise to power, when they fear concrete examples of flouting the treaty by Germany will occur.

The German press recently clamored that Anglo-French general staff technical conferences violated the Treaty of Locarno, and hence allowed Germany to disregard restrictions against militarizing the Rhineland Zone.

"The work of fortifying the demilitarized zone and rearming the Rhineland is well under way," said the Excelsior, owned by Mrs. Helen Brown Depuy, an American. "The Rhineland is well-equipped for aviation, which constantly practices passive defensive while a Hindenburg line of the air is established.

"Thus a line of air fields in the Rhineland provides initial hopping off places for attacking planes. In the event of invasion (of Germany) the planes will move back from the first line of airports, beyond the 'demilitarized zone' and in the event of further reverses, establish themselves in a second line.

"The airports are strung along parallel lines, placed opposite each other, with direct communications making retreat easy."

These airports, Excelsior said, contain great subterranean quarters where the aviators and operating personnel could remain for days, safe from bombardment, in telephone communication with the outside. Each hangar contains 100 war planes which rise to the surface on the giant elevator, the article stated.

The paper said that once or twice weekly German Rhineland cities are plunged into darkness, sirens screech and the inhabitants scuttle into newly constructed, reinforced concrete bomb shelters, and that Blackshirts and officers of the Reichswehr frequently parade the streets, supposedly forbidden to soldiers.

"The greatest concentration of airports is around Stuttgart, indicating a plan that the next invasion of France will strike through north Lorraine and north Switzerland," Excelsior stated. "The neutral zone along the Rhine today is no longer demilitarized except in name."

British Arming Pushed Despite Death of Ruler

Defense Committee Meets to Place Estimates Into Shape.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 27.—Great Britain went ahead with preparations for arms expansion today even as thousands mourned at the bier of King George and the princes of Europe gathered to do him honor.

Not pausing even until after the burial, the defense committee of the cabinet met at 10 Downing street to put budget estimates into shape for presentation at the usual cabinet meeting Wednesday.

A spirit of realism prevailed elsewhere in London and the belief was widely held that the most powerful figures in Europe would not pass up an opportunity to exchange views and discuss politics and future alliances.

Crisis Is Faced.

Realities of the international situation confronting the monarchs, heads of States, and representatives of governments assembled in London indicated that the late King's concern over current problems was well founded.

Great Britain admittedly is facing the greatest crisis since the World War and no other European government is in a much better position. Political discussion among the assembled notables was held to be inevitable despite the sad occasion bringing them together.

While it was felt that not much would be accomplished in London, plans may be made for future meetings vital to Europe.

World War Followed.

The assemblage in London in 1910 of 13 foreign monarchs and heirs to thrones for the funeral of George's father, Edward VII, was followed within four years by a world war which unseated many of the most influential, including the German Kaiser and the Russian Czar.

The question of whether history will repeat itself remained unanswered in diplomatic circles, where the common feeling prevails, however, that Europe is steadily arming in preparation for a possible war.

Library Board Elects.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Oakland, Md., Jan. 27.—Mrs. H. J. Loraditch has been re-elected president of the Oakland Free Public Library board. Miss Elizabeth Leary was named acting secretary. Other officers are Mrs. D. Broadwater.

Students Felled As Troops Halt Riots in Egypt

Clashes in Several Cities; Several Injured; Paris Reports 4 Killed.

By the Associated Press.

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 27.—Egyptian cavalry was called out because of disorders attending a student strike today. Five of the demonstrators were wounded.

They were injured in a clash with police at Damanhour, while a heavy force of cavalry was sent to Giza to head off 1,200 students marching on Cairo.

Nahas Pasha, leader of the Wafd Nationalist Party, had agreed to form a neutral cabinet to replace the government of Premier Tewfik Nessim Pasha, which resigned. He created dissension, however, when he insisted that the Wafdists must have a majority representation in the new cabinet.

Other parties opposed this demand, in view of the imminent opening of negotiations with the British.

An unconfirmed report said one student was killed in the fighting at Damanhour.

Bridges between Giza and Cairo were raised in an effort to block the students' entrance. Police were concentrated at the entrances to the bridge.

The students went on strike throughout the country and at Bulak they made a bonfire of the furniture of the School of Applied Arts.

Four Reported Killed.

Paris, Jan. 27 (AP).—The newspaper Paris-Soir said tonight four students were killed and 18 wounded in the nationalist riots in Egypt.

Dental Director to Wed In Hagerstown Saturday

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 27.—Miss Mary Elizabeth Wagner, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Scott R. Wagner, of Hagerstown, will be married here Saturday to Mr. Norman R. Purnell, of Georgetown and Dover, Del.

Miss Wagner is director of the Dental Hygiene Department of the State of Delaware and Mr. Purnell is connected with the State Highway Patrol. A number of parties in Miss Wagner's honor will be given here this week.

Irish Refuse Tribute To Memory of King

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Jan. 27 (AP).—The County Monaghan Council was forced to abandon a resolution of sympathy for the bereaved royal family today when a number of the members walked out of the meeting.

Those who bolted the meeting contended passage of the resolution might be interpreted as an indication of loyalty to British connections. The remaining members did not constitute a quorum, so the move was dropped.

Bourbon And Bolshevik.

The weakest part of Al Smith's indictment of the Administration was his "solemn warning" that "there can be only one Capital, Washington or Moscow." Couched in that language, solemnity acquires a somewhat owlish quality and, among well-balanced Americans, encourages not shudders but smiles. Incidentally, moreover, Mr. Smith's hosts here have been laying a good deal of stress on the fact that the United States has not one but 49 capitals.

This rhetorical flaw in what was otherwise a devastating attack on the New Deal is the more to be noted because such extravagances are becoming frequent. The Administration has made invective a large part of its stock in trade, thus furnishing its opponents with a good excuse for similar lack of restraint. But the problems currently before the Nation are not going to be solved by any mutual distortion of the positions of candidates for office. And gross exaggerations, this critical campaign year, are a luxury of partisanship on which the country can readily economize.

Undersecretary of Agriculture Tugwell is on record as saying that "the experiments commenced in 1933 in the United States are worth-while beginnings" toward "purposeful, intelligent control over economic affairs," presumably on the part of the Federal Government. But with the possible exception of this official there are few admirers of communism holding positions of any influence in the Administration. The trouble with the New Deal is not that it has attempted to substitute (in Al Smith's words) "the foul breath of communistic Russia" for "the clear, pure, fresh air of free America." The trouble is that it has degenerated into a confused and confusing tangle of conflicting policies without coordination, purpose or comprehensible objective of any kind.

In the present mood of the electorate, many Americans who have thought little on the subject are now prepared to learn the fundamentals of good government. They are beginning to appreciate the damage which can be worked by inefficient administration; the dangers inherent in pressure groups such as the veterans' lobby; the vicious effects of frothy emotionalism in the direction of affairs of state; the necessity for governments, like individuals, living within their income, and many other matters of political principle to which the voters have heretofore given inadequate attention.

For a democracy to be successful it must first have the ability to visualize its problems, and then the courage to tackle them. The real issues are confused, and their solution rendered still more difficult, when prejudice clouds the air with epithets which call for counter-epithets, and so on. If political leadership cannot rise above shouts of Bourbon and Bolshevik, 1936 will accomplish little for the welfare of the United States, no matter what the results of the November elections.

Reserve Board Appointees.

The four new members nominated for appointment to the board of governors of the Federal Reserve system appear on the whole better qualified for the tasks that confront them than many of the appointees to other governmental agencies.

Joseph A. Broderick has the advantage of a long and active connection with the Federal Reserve system, first as a member of the committee appointed to work out the technical organization of the Federal Reserve banks, then as head of the examining staff, and as secretary to the board. He also served as superintendent of banks of New York State while President Roosevelt was Governor. His position there was made extremely difficult because of the neglect of officials who preceded him, and in consequence he became a target for most unjustified criticism.

John McKee is another prospective member of the board who has won his way by reason of competence and character to his present responsible position as chief examiner for the RFC. His specialized knowledge gained as receiver for insolvent banks, and as an official in charge of bank reorganizations, should make for careful and constructive handling of banking problems.

Ronald Ransom and Ralph W. Morrison are both well known in their respective communities. The former is an outstanding Atlanta banker. The latter is a businessman from San Antonio with a practical knowledge of foreign trade problems and an interest in world affairs attested by his membership in the American delegation to the London Monetary and Economic Conference of 1933.

In view of the difficulties that confront the Government in finding men of first-rate ability to fill responsible posts at low salaries, the Administration appears to have been singularly fortunate in its selections for the reorganized Reserve Board.

The Public Works Theory.

In his Town Hall address Secretary Ickes rightly emphasized the need for advance planning of public works projects. He paid a well-deserved tribute to the effective and outstanding achievements of the National Resources Committee which, in cooperation with State planning committees, is developing a comprehensive program of public works. He expressed the hope that in the future no project will be undertaken by the Federal Government until it has been approved by this national planning body "not only as to necessity and social importance, but as to priority."

"The days of the discredited pork barrel," Mr. Ickes said, "ought to be at an end forever." Nobody would dissent from so sound an expression of opinion. But many doubt whether a vast public works program can be kept free from politics, however conscientious and capable the public officials in charge may be. Such projects as the Grand Coulee Dam and the Passamaquoddy power development give rise to skepticism that is not dissipated by sage discourses upon what ought to be done. Nevertheless, graft and waste could be reduced to a minimum if long-range planning under competent, non-political direction were substituted for the haphazard and hurried methods that have been employed heretofore.

Mr. Ickes fails to make a clear-cut distinction between a type of public-works planning intended to take up the employment slack in slow years and the kind of program that is designed to absorb huge numbers of unemployed in years of profound depression. The former desirable objective should not be confused with so-called "pump priming" activities that place emphasis upon job creation rather than the usefulness of the projects undertaken. Although stating that all projects should be self-liquidating, "insofar as possible," the Secretary too, optimistically envisages a public works program capable of absorbing vast numbers of permanently unemployed and providing jobs for additional millions of idle men in years of depression.

It is pointed out, quite correctly, that the $3,000,000,000 which the PWA has actually spent or appropriated during the past two and one-half years is "truly insignificant" compared with the total volume of construction work in normal times. But instead of concluding that the very magnitude of private outlays—estimated at from $11,000,000,000 to $15,000,000,000 per annum in the peak years prior to the depression—precludes the possibility of successfully priming the business pump with Government funds, Mr. Ickes thinks it shows the need for more spending. "Instead of siphoning enough money into the channels of trade through the construction of substantial public works to do a recovery job," he said, "we have been using an eye dropper."

The Secretary also attacked former Budget Director Douglas for objecting to the huge obligations incurred on account of public works because of the tremendous resultant drain upon the Federal Treasury. "Needed or useful capital expenditures," he contended, "constitute assets and not liabilities." Concretely, he seems to think that coast-to-coast highways, streams freed from pollution and extensive low-cost housing projects built with Federal funds create no budgetary or financial problems if they are useful and desirable. Unfortunately, enterprises which do not yield immediate returns in dollars and cents cannot be regarded as self-liquidating unless the meaning of that word is hopelessly distorted. On the contrary, they lay extra burdens upon taxpayers who have to meet the interest on borrowed capital.

Consequently, there are distinct limits to the pace at which public construction can be expanded at any given time without endangering the financial stability of the country. Secretary Ickes makes no concessions to these material considerations when he affirms that there is "hardly any limit to the amount of money that can be legitimately and wisely spent on public works in this country over a period of years."

An Ideal Civil Servant.

Dr. Hugh S. Cumming's retirement from the post of surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service is not merely an occasion for regret. In addition it presents an opportunity for congratulation to this important Federal institution for the progress it has made under his capable administration. And, as far as Dr. Cumming himself is concerned, felicitations are in order, both on his outstanding record and his good judgment in relinquishing his duties while still at the height of his powers.

For 42 years Dr. Cumming has devoted his time, his energy and his great abilities to the Public Health Service. It is especially gratifying to note that he reached the highest official honors within his profession by moving up through the ranks from assistant surgeon to surgeon general. When every established agency of Government offers similar opportunities to able young men, without recourse to political influence, more public servants of Dr. Cumming's type will be attracted to the civil service.

Because the Public Health Service does its work with an absence of self-advertisement, the importance of its functions is too frequently overlooked. Yet much of its work is vital to the preservation of health. It protects the country from introduction of diseases from abroad through the Federal maritime quarantine system. It controls interstate epidemics and co-operates with State and local health authorities in the solution of their problems. It investigates unconquered diseases and disseminates useful guidance and information in the whole field of hygiene.

In these and various other functions the Public Health Service has advanced its efficiency and usefulness under Dr. Cumming's direction. Undoubtedly the country is a more healthful place to live as a result of his careful planning and administration. The health service has not had all the funds it needs, but it has unquestionably used the money available to excellent advantage.

As Washingtonians congratulate Dr. Cumming on his contribution to the national health, their chief regret will be that the standards in the National Capital fall so far below those of the country as a whole.

A Record Of Surrender.

Enactment of the $2,237,000,000 bonus bill, over the President's veto, was a foregone conclusion. In the Senate, the 40 votes by which the President's veto of the Patman bill was sustained last May, yesterday dwindled to a slender 19. The major explanation is not far to seek. This is an election year. Senators have jumped through the hoop held by the veterans' lobby in the hope of securing a minor bloc of well-organized votes.

Only four Senators who must seek reelection next November, or retire, cast their votes against the bonus in this final test. To them goes the high distinction of clinging to their convictions in spite of both cajolery and intimidation. Millions of citizens whose interests have been disregarded by the vast majority of legislators owe a vote of thanks, therefore, to Senator Couzens, of Michigan; Senator Glass, of Virginia; Senator Hastings, of Delaware, and Senator Keyes, of New Hampshire.

This demonstration of political courage and sincerity stands out in sharp contrast to the groveling conduct of the Senate leaders on both the Democratic and Republican sides. Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, and Senator Harrison, chairman of the Finance Committee, both bolted their President's leadership. Both voted to sustain the veto in 1935, but this year they come up for re-election. Precisely the same course was followed by the lone Republican leader, Senator McNary, who must also face the electorate in November.

Senator Lewis, the Democratic whip, deserted the President on both occasions. The president pro tempore of the Senate, Key Pittman, changed his vote to favor the lobby in spite of the fact that he has four more years to serve. Others who shifted their ground under organized pressure, presumably to catch votes in the election next fall, are Senators White, Coolidge, Metcalf, Barbour, Bailey and Gore. Still another group of Senators changed their votes, possibly with more distant elections in mind. They are Austin, Walsh, Lonergan, Guffey, Radcliffe, Dieterich, Barkley, Pope, O'Mahoney, Chavez and Ashurst.

This is a sorry showing. The Senate, as well as the House, has advertised its vulnerability to special interests. Resistance to other raids upon the depleted Treasury can only be the more difficult from now on.

Greece And Britain.

Nowhere is the art of politics more intricate than in Greece, and seldom have Greek politics taken a turn more startling to the non-Greek than the turn they took on Sunday.

Last October Marshal Kondylis effected the overthrow of the turbulent Hellenic republic and, with his party, overwhelmingly carried an election for the return of King George II, thus apparently crushing forever the hopes of former Premier Venizelos, republican rebel. Now the Venizelists have in turn defeated king-maker Kondylis at the polls, and it is rumored that the sovereign on the throne will ask the republican in exile to come home.

Venizelos is a master of statecraft, whose light no earthly power seems able permanently to obscure. But it is probable that most of the credit for his comeback goes to another man—prominent, indeed, but heretofore less known for his political abilities: to the very monarch whom Venizelos was once so instrumental in dethroning and whom Kondylis so lately returned to the throne.

Kondylis is the friend of Italy, whereas Great Britain looks to Greek assistance in keeping a check upon Italian ambitions and Venizelos shares the Anglophile policy of King George of Greece. In order to win their election, the republican Venizelists had to promise "toleration" of the crown. It is not impossible that, in order to keep British good-will, the crown similarly promised toleration of Venizelos.

Hoover Offers AAA Substitute.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

In the welter of confusion in the Roosevelt Administration following the collapse of AAA, former President Herbert Hoover offers to the country, in his Lincoln, Nebr., address, a rounded and balanced farm program. Here again he meets the President's challenge to "produce a plan."

It is a program built upon an economy of abundance, rather than of scarcity.

Mr. Hoover's program looks to permanent stabilization of the farming industry. But he recognizes that emergency action must be taken at once to rescue the farmer from the quicksands of the New Deal fiasco. The immediate thing is to get on solid ground. For this rescue purpose Mr. Hoover would subsidize the farmer directly for crop diversification and soil conservation.

With the way paved for increased local consumption, Mr. Hoover would put an end to the cross-purpose and mutually defeating policies of the present regime—the curtailment of local production and the importation of foreign products.

One-Sided Counsel.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Washington dispatches report the Senate Committee on Neutrality Legislation as having "tentatively decided to invite Prof. Edwin M. Borchard, of Yale University, and possibly John Bassett Moore to counsel the committee on the legislation."

Prof. Borchard is a pronounced enemy of the League of Nations and Dr. Moore is not its friend. It follows that they will naturally recommend legislation calculated to embarrass the League of Nations in its efforts to preserve the future peace of the world by punishing the aggressor.

THEODORE MARBURG.
Baltimore, Jan. 25.

In Defense Of The Court.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I notice that "E. B.," a correspondent in these columns, contends because "the nine old men," constituting the Supreme Court, "not elected by the people and who hold office for life," voids laws passed by the Congress of the United States, we are not a representative government, and also holds that these nine jurists are not as able and competent to judge the validity of laws as the lawmakers themselves.

Of course, our correspondent knows that we are a constitutional democracy and that our fundamental law is the Constitution of the United States. The Constitution says that "all legislative powers granted" in this instrument "shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and a House of Representatives." And the Constitution specifically provides and directs that the President as well as members of Congress shall be elected by the voters of the land.

The President, who is elected by the electoral college, the legally constituted authorities, and who is therefore the direct mouthpiece of the people, is definitely authorized by the Constitution to appoint, with the consent and approval of the Senate, the members of the Supreme Court. Therefore, is not the choice of these "nine old men" just as much the voice of the people as the Representatives and Senators chosen for Congress? If not, why not? Furthermore, these judges must be confirmed by the Senate, the members of which body are directly elected by the people.

As these judges are chosen for their integrity, intellectual capacity, intelligence, knowledge of the law and their reputation as jurists by a direct representative of the people, they certainly can compare with the men composing the legislative department, who do not always possess these characteristic virtues. They are, of course, fewer in number, but if numbers are an indication of competency and ability to judge validity of laws, why not have thousands of legislators in order to make a more competent and well-informed body? Such argument leads to chaos.

The Constitution is a check and safeguard against all kinds of aggression, revolution and even the incursion of the brain-trusters of the New Deal. But the Constitution can be changed and within itself is provided the machinery and medium through which any change desired by the people may be accomplished. Why do not those who believe the "nine old men" are wrong themselves conform to the legal requirements of the fundamental law of the land and bring about through the duly constituted and established channels the desired purpose so greatly sought instead of criticizing the legal body our Government set up to check and curb legislative bodies running amuck.

FAIR PLAY.

School Floggings.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a mother of approximately four years' standing and a teacher with ten years' experience, I can not but form some opinions about the so-called "flogging cases" of the Takoma-Silver Spring Junior High School. It seems to me that the parents are following a very unwise course in so widely publicizing what has happened, for it will make the recipients of the floggings "heroes" in the eyes of the rest of the students. Then the school children are likely to assume an "I dare you touch me" attitude to those in authority.

This will certainly demoralize the discipline and spirit of good will so necessary between instructors and pupils. This lack of friendly cooperation between pupil and teacher makes school a most unattractive place and a medium of little value.

If my child had been one of those "flogged" (and I dare say she might happen to need it some time, too,) I would have interviewed the principal. If I had found his reasons justifiable I would consider the incident closed and have warned the culprit that I was thoroughly behind the action taken in school and wanted no recurrence of the misdemeanor.

If, however, I found the punishment unwarranted and knew of many others of a similar type, I would form a committee of dissatisfied parents, discuss the matter with the principal and attempt to have some effective method of administration followed. Failing in this, the matter could be taken to the superintendent. All of this should be done without any talk in front of the children, for too much publicity and display of personal feelings will rob a cause of its just merits.

Doubts In Hauptmann Case.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recent papers carried the news that Hauptmann volunteers for the "Lie Detector" test. While to many the result of such a test may not seem conclusive, it will serve, according to its outcome, either to make those convinced of his guilt more convinced than ever, or to render those by no means convinced, still less so.

There are those, included among them notably Gov. Hoffman of New Jersey, Detective Chief Ellis Parker (who has recently been making an independent investigation of his own), as well as a considerable number of other protesters throughout the land, who are by no means persuaded that Hauptmann, while without doubt criminally mixed up in the Lindbergh case, did the actual kidnaping and killing of the baby.

Is not this, indeed, an instance in which with Hauptmann welcoming hypnotism, sufficient proof of his own innocence of the actual killing might be established; with other possible evidence—all barriers down—coming to light for the furtherance of justice? If so, he could remain in prison on the ground that further evidence might clear him of the major crime and lead eventually to the major criminal.

I hold no manner of brief for Hauptmann, who clearly deserves most severe punishment. But there have been in the past tragic cases where the archcriminal has been discovered only too late. And surely one shrinks from each new instance of mistaken "legalized murder" just so long as there remains occasion for honest doubt.

Reactions To Al Smith.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Al Smith is the Sam Jones of our political orators of today. He knows how to speak to the crowd. His wit and sarcasm are admirable, and his good humor is unfailing. He says he has been treated well by America. In this, we all agree.

The trouble which moves many of our best people today cannot touch a man "who possesses supreme happiness and comfort." Gov. Smith grows eloquent over saving the country by anchoring to the Constitution. He appropriately says that Congress has lawyers, but they "do not function." No words which the speaker could use would be too severe on men who should have protected the President by their advice and supposed knowledge of law. But Gov. Smith fails to make clear that he loves people better than he loves conventional legislation and strictly constitutional procedure. He might have made as his slogan: "I love not man the less, but the Constitution more."

I do not glow over Gov. Smith's emotional talk concerning communism and socialism. A theological professor said in my hearing to his class, "If anybody should say to you that what you believe is what the Catholics believe, you'd turn pale, but much which the Catholics believe you would do well to accept." So I say in regard to the much-abused term "socialism." Our colleges are literally reeking with socialistic minded teachers, who say that when a certain company in 1930-32 paid its president, in salary and bonus, for three years within a few dollars of three millions, and paid its wage earners an average of $805 yearly, there is something wrong in our economy.

The Townsends, the Sinclairs and the Huey Longs are straws, not drifting in the air without significance. Gov. Smith has but one suggestion: "Come back to the platform of 1932." He tells us the Socialists went swimming and the brain trusters stole their clothes and are now wearing them." Good Sam Jones talk, I agree, but are clothes of this sort not becoming very fashionable? Anyhow, is it better to freeze in conventional, a la Smith clothes, or be warm in Socialist garb?

I am most bitterly opposed to the Administration for its attitude to the eighteenth amendment, and yet this is the one thing Gov. Smith applauds in the present regime. Well may he applaud, for the repeal clause in the platform was his own child. The sum of it all is: Gov. Smith has called attention to broken pledges and huge national debts. But he has said nothing constructive but: "Return to the abstractions of a platform of theory."

J. O. KNOTT.
Washington, Jan. 26.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Breaking his three-year silence (save brief pointed remarks), Al Smith dramatically undams his disgust at the deal which Administration witch doctors have thrust down the resisting necks of the bill footers.

A speech Roosevelt and his crew of infallible sophomoric economists may try to deride and belittle but one they cannot ignore. For by their reaction will the critics be judged. Parrotings of demagogues are in order. The "hireling of privilege" charge will be "hurled" according to political formula by "statesmen" who conveniently ignore the privileged groups which have usurped governmental powers.

For turning the spotlight on the scatter-brained complexity of the deal Al rates thanks of members of both parties weary of two-faced dealing, splintered platforms and experiments that belong in the error column. Raucous reprisal will come from some who have altered Patrick Henry to read: "Liberty or death—but gimme." Also from those New Deal opinion pilots who brand as distorted logic any disagreement with themselves.

The previous Administration recedes as a handy goat. So, unless Roosevelt's rubber stamps in Congress concoct a scheme to "guide" the farm vote, the New Deal craft will be adrift on rough seas, minus a bailing bucket and riding lights, one first Tuesday after a certain first Monday.

The Post Impressionist

International Beltramo!

Post Office, Tuesday.

HERE'S more disquieting news out of Europe: Rumor says Carlo's out of that continent—and on the continent of Africa.

* * *

What?

You don't know who Carlo is—or was?

Alas, how short the memory of man, how brief human fame!

Don't you remember the new drink which sanguine autumnal dispatches fanfared as a mighty Genevese invention, even more potent than sanctions?

It was concocted at the seat of the League of Nations, yet in honor, men whispered, of the Duce's Abyssinian adventure, its maker being an Italian. It was ironically called "The Negus" for the Ethiopian Emperor, one of whose titles is "The Conquering Lion." And, when its creator was asked why he so named it, he replied:

"Because, if you take three doses, you'll roar like a lion."

* * *

Of course, only one man in international Geneva could get away with such nationalism. Of course that man was Carlo Beltramo. If he has indeed been called to his country's colors and sent slogging through Ethiopian mud, Geneva will miss him more than it would miss many a diplomat.

* * *

The fact is that Cairo was a diplomat.

A man had to be a diplomat of no small ability to get and keep the concession for the League of Nations' bar—and to serve successfully most of the drinks and 50 per cent of the talk that passed across it.

* * *

We hasten to interpolate:

You mustn't pluck the impression that Carlo's concession was a well of deep drinking. On the contrary.

A whisky-bottle would probably last longer behind that bar than on any bar-shelf in America. Brandy was almost equally long-lived in the Carlo climate. Except as grudged ingredients for parsimonious cocktails, Carlo's hard liquors would have been classed as first rate insurance risks: therein lay one of the reasons we were surprised when we heard of "The Negus."

Most of the patrons went to Carlo for light liquids. Many were habitual consumers of unadulterated mineral waters. The intellectual stimulant was what counted.

* * *

So everybody became at least an occasional patron—everybody at the League. As soon as a major speech had been delivered in the auditorium and the translator was settling down to his job, just so soon the hall emptied and the bar filled. The drama shifted to a new theater—and, at that new theater, Carlo was the star:

Carlo, busy all the working-day, yet in a white coat as fresh after the last drink was mixed as before the first coffee had been brewed. Carlo with his bright black hair slicked back from his forehead. Carlo with a smile that was always present—but never fixed.

* * *

Carlo must have known more diplomats than any diplomat that ever lived—more European correspondents than any news editor. And he had for every one of all of them exactly the right word to put them on their mental toes and keep them there.

* * *

No matter how quickly or how radically the membership of the Assembly changed—and that membership, with its attaches, runs far into the hundreds—Carlo's knowledge of the delegates' titles and tastes (political quite as thoroughly as alcoholic) kept pace with all the replacements. No matter how bitterly two giants of the Council might oppose each other around the horseshoe-table in the Council room, Carlo could unostentatiously so serve their refreshments—tea, as often as not—at his bar that they found themselves shoulder-to-shoulder. Then, because they had to smile at his cheerful and apparently ingenuous chatter, they would soon be smiling to each other.

* * *

His was the diplomacy of light-hearted daring. In three or four languages—Italian and French certainly and, if memory serves us right, English and German—he would commit the most undiplomatic of verbal indiscretions without offending the tenderest susceptibilities.

Once, while drawing beer, he told Germany's great Stresemann that he (Carlo) doubted whether Teuton minorities were badly oppressed in Poland. An instant later, squirting seltzer into vermouth, Carlo remarked to Zaleski, then Poland's Minister of Foreign Affairs, that Germany really ought to control the Polish Corridor.

Neither Stresemann nor Zaleski was able to determine whether Carlo meant or didn't mean what he said. Nevertheless, both statesmen agreed that they liked the barkeeper.

* * *

And now, they say, Carlo has gone!

What will Geneva do without him?

He never devised but that one powerful drink. And he never gave the recipe therefor to even his dearest assistant.

He has gone, they say, to fight the Negus—and he has taken the secret of "The Negus" with him.

Fair Enough

Two Crash The Gate.

London, Jan. 27.

MY visit to the solemn scene of the lying in state of King George of England was accomplished under special circumstances. Not to put too fair a face upon a strange and rather sordid experience, I was bootlegged into the British House of Commons and thence into the great silent vault of Westminster Hall, adjoining the house where the King lay in his coffin attended by his magnificent Life Guards and beef-eaters, receiving the sad homage of his people.

With gate crashing in its myriad forms I have been made familiar by years of attendance at public events, but this was one gate which seemed not only impregnable but unassailable. Yet it happened and this is approximately how:

Saturday evening in the company of Floyd Gibbons, who is on his way home from Eritrea, I set out to see an enormous crowd of English people, some of them drawn from far parts of the country, who stood in a line about 2 miles long inching toward the entrance to the hall.

• • •

THERE had been intermittent rain all afternoon, and these men, women and children of the middle and lower classes had been taking it without the slightest impatience in a progress which required about three hours from Vauxhall Bridge to the coffin. It was a miserable night, with a milky fog hanging over Westminster and the river, and the big doubledeck buses and the taxicabs picked their way carefully through the foot traffic which overran the road under the lenient discipline of the bobbies.

At a point some distance down the long, silent file a voice from the darkness of a doorway said: "I can arrange to put you right into the hall for His Majesty's lying in state without delay, sir, if you would care to pay 8 shillings. It will take three hours otherwise and it's a nawsty night, sir."

Now it had not been our intention to attend the lying in state at all and it seemed to be not quite cricket for a couple of foreigners to accept this advantage over true and loyal mourners for the King.

• • • •

"THE royalty all go in ahead of them and the foreign royalty as well," said he, "and sometimes they stop line for 20 minutes to let some visiting king or some former queen like Vitcoria of Spain make a private visit. The boys of Westminster School, nurses of Westminster Hospital and the taximen from the palace yard all went in ahead of the queue.

"No, they won't object if you just go quietly as if you belonged there."

One hour later two strangers found themselves in the courtyard of the House of Commons. There had been only a slight question of identity at the entrance, where two unauthorized persons, a man and woman, had attempted to follow after. They were gently but firmly repelled and went sloshing away in fog toward the end of the line 2 miles and three hours away. There was a man standing near a private automobile in the yard who gave us more than passing glance, for Mr. Gibbons was wearing a gray hat and camel hair coat, as inappropriate to the occasion as the gambler's cap which I wore to an informal review of the Harvard unit by their Majesties at Buckingham Palace 19 years ago.

We took this man to be a member of Parliament, but he offered no hindrance and we entered the building to discover ourselves abruptly facing through a glass door the scene of the King's lying in state. At this instant the captain of the Life Guards slowly appeared on a half-stair from the guard room bearing his sword before his eyes, and strode with slow, formal tread to the point where Beefeaters stood with their heads bowed, leaning on the tall shafts of their pikes. There was a pause, and now down the same stair in the same solemn gait came four Life Guards to relieve the four who stood motionless at the corners of the coffin.

Their white leather breeches were fleckless and tight, their high black boots shone dully and their golden helmets and breastplates, their epaulets, medals and scabbards gleamed in a way to dazzle the eye. One was wearing short underwear and the hem showed through the skin-tight leather of his breeches. Slowly they mounted the dais, stepping backward until each stood elbow to elbow with the man he was relieving.

• • • •

SLOWLY the retiring guards raised their heads and swords in unison and sheathed their blades as the new men drew their weapons and stood to attention. The retiring guards stepped down and marched away as their relief lowered their swords and then suddenly bowed their heads, tossing their white plumes over their eyes in the motion.

They were standing short tricks now because the rigidity of their position and the fixity of their gaze at the shuffling feet of the endless line is a severe tax on physical endurance. At the head of a small stair we turned and found ourselves in line among English people who had walked 2 miles by inches in the rain. Well, it wasn't cricket, but we were no more outlanders than Carol of Rumania or the nephew of Zog of Albania, and moreover we hadn't set out to crash the gate and, finally, it had been done strictly in the interests of knowledge, after all. Sam Weller waited at the exit and we paid him 16 shillings. He has promised balcony places at $10 each from which to view the funeral procession and insists that when the mourning is over he can crash us into garden parties, balls and receptions. I am inclined to believe him, for his record is 100 per cent to date.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Campaign Slogans for 1936.

Both major parties are seeking suitable slogans for the Presidential campaign. Elmer Twitchell, hearing of the demand, promptly took his pen in hand with the following results:

For the Republicans.

1. Out of the alphabet by Christmas!
2. Vote the Republican ticket and stop wondering where you are!
3. Never mind the New Deal; we want a New Deck!
4. Keep the Constitution constitutional!
5. Rugged individualism, not ragged regimentation!
6. A chicken case in every constitutional issue!
7. Fewer fireside chats; more fireside facts!
8. What this country needs is a good 5-cent nickel!
9. Look before you leap, and even then make sure it's legal!
10. Back to the thrift account, the nest egg and a little personal independence!
11. A polo pony in every garage!
12. Why not some straight bookkeeping for a change?
13. Get off the revolving floor before you're too dizzy!
14. Back to the days when even a President might be wrong!
15. Remember, four years under the Democrats are like eight years under anybody else!
16. Give back America to America!
17. A vote for a Republican President means the return of the word "assets" to the dictionary.
18. Tune the Democrats out!

For the Democrats.

1. Never swap parachutes in mid-air!
2. Keep the budget balancers out!
3. Vote the straight Democratic ticket and remain confused but happy!
4. Over the top with pen and loud speaker!
5. When bigger deficits are made the Democrats will make 'em!
6. Stick with the New Deal; we're gonna start playing with deuces wild!
7. He kept us out of bookkeeping!
8. A relief agent in every garage and two boondogglers in every car!
9. Why change President? The other one won't know where he is going either.
10. Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus!
11. We were good guys when we had it; and we still have it!
12. It's fun to be fooled!
13. What was good enough for the pioneers is bad enough for us!
14. Why bother with facts when you can elect an entire Democratic ticket?
15. The party of the Dole-Fashioned Man!
16. We know our wants from AAA to Z.
17. The more abundant life or bust! Or both!
18. Don't worrk; just ask for Jim!
19. Our motto: when in doubt, broadcast!
20. Remember, if you don't vote for Roosevelt you may get back Hoover!

Synopsis.

The soldiers get the bonus—
The country gets the bills—
The Congress gets the fan mail—
The taxpayers get the chills!

Well, we never had winters like this under Coolidge and Hoover.

The budget is so big that it is no longer a question of somebody's balancing it. It's a question of finding a man strong enough to lift it.

After reading about the custom under which the Aga Khan is weighed by his subjects and given a present of his weight in gold every year, we understand why the old boy has never gone on a reducing diet.

An old-fashioned man is a fellow who still likes to pay as he goes, lives within his income and thinks it dishonest to go back on his word.

It looks like a great winter for snow-shoveling scandals.

The story we liked best about the late King George was the one that had him, as a youth in the navy, calling down to his elder brother, "Eddie, come up here right away and sing 'God Save Your Grandmother!'"

Wallace, Davis Uphold Legality Of Farm Plans

But Capitol Hill Remains Skeptical After Senate Committee Hearing.

Although Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and AAA Administrator Chester C. Davis yesterday told members of the Senate Agriculture Committee that the new two-year stop-gap farm program is fully constitutional, there was still considerable doubt on Capitol Hill last night.

The Secretary and Davis assured the committee that the bill was "constitutional and practical," but the committee decided to call in Solicitor General Stanley Reed today for a legal opinion.

The doubts center about the amendments to the soil conservation act of 1935, which would carry on part of the outlawed AAA's functions by permitting subsidies to farmers who reduce producing acreage.

The reactions varied. Senator Lewis Schwellenbach, Washington Democrat, said: "If any farm bill is constitutional, this one is." Senator A. Harry Moore, New Jersey Democrat, said the measure was "generaly constitutional," and predicted its approval by Eastern farmers. Senator James P. Pope, Idaho Democrat, and Senator Henrik Shipstead, Minnnesota, Farmer-Laborite, withheld opinions when questioned yesterday.

Davis Upholds Bill.

Later, at a press conference, Chester Davis said:

"I think there is no question that when the bill gets under a States' relationship basis it will be wholly constitutional in every respect."

It was understood, meanwhile, in the Senate that the Appropriations Committee may meet today to consider the advisability of reporting out the independent offices appropriation bill, which was to serve as the vehicle for the $400,000,000 appropriation asked by Senator John J. Bankhead, Alabama Democrat, for the new program's first year. This would mean that the appropriation measure would go through without the farm appropriation or legislative amendment tacked on, defeating Administration strategy.

Said Senator Ellison D. Smith, South Carolina Democrat, and chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee:

"I think I can state the prime object of the committee is to improve the financial condition of the farmers. The problem is to find how that can be done constitutionally and practically. There is no evidence as far as I can see of any matured opinion on those points as to this bill."

House Group Meets Today.

The House Agriculture Committee will meet today, said Representative Marvin Jones, Texas Democrat, and committee chairman.

The bill in its present state gives the Secretary of Agriculture broad powers to disburse benefit payments (conditional grants) to farmers who reduce production acreage. After January 1, 1938, grants will be made to the States to work out control programs.

Much discussion came on the amendment to the soil act which would effectuate these aims. Davis at his press conference, said that conditional grants have been made to land grant colleges and State experiment stations for years, and to States for vocational agricultural training, for xtension services and for roads. The proposed program would be largely constructed about the land grant colleges, state experiment stations and county committees.

After the conditions on which grants would be made had been determined, each State would authorize a State agency to enter into a co-operative agreement with the Federal Government. Funds would go from the Government to the agencies to the farmers. While enactment of laws would be required in some States, the officials interviewed reiterated that the term "48 little AAA's" was not truly descriptive.

AAA Issues Pamphlet.

In a pamphlet issued yesterday by the AAA, prepared, however, before the Supreme Court's adverse decision of January 6, Administrator Davis mentioned, in arguing for a permanent program, that:

". . . These objectives, together with increasing and maintaining farm income, can be best approached if the planning and administration of the agricultural adjustment programs are placed so far as possible on a local and regional basis."

In the meantime, four Southern cotton growers, two from Mississippi and two from Alabama, filed suit here in the District Supreme Court yesterday to impound $3,500,000 collected in penalty taxes on surplus cotton production under the Bankhead act. The plaintiffs, J. Wood Thompson and A. W. Fisher, of Leland, Miss., and D. S. Hopson and S. J. Ward, of Wetumpka, Ala., said their suit was filed in behalf of all similarly situated cotton planters.

'Melancholy Baby'

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

ON Saturday evening there was a party of young people going at full tilt in my house, raising the devil in general and making me feel very old. Most of those gathered around the cocktail shaker will vote in their first national election this autumn, which gives you an idea of the kind of a party it was. They were making a lot of noise, and the radio was blasting away, and the stout girl who works in the Treasury Department was singing "Melancholy Baby" to the huge delight of several couples ensconced in my favorite chairs. It wasn't my party, so I hid by the fireplace, just sort of looking on, waiting for 10 o'clock. But it was my house and, party or no party, I was going to hear Al Smith if I had to throw the whole gang of them out in the cold.

But at ten minutes of 10 the blonde who works for FHA brought me a cocktail and sat down beside me, and the next thing I recall was a sudden silence. Somebody said, "Aw, we can hear you sing any time," and "Melancholy Baby" ended on a high, gurgling note. The boy in the brown checkered suit was twisting a dial, and after a couple of squeaks I heard an old, familiar voice saying "Foither than that I have no ax to grind . . ."

So some two dozen youngsters turned from their cocktails, shrimps, songs and love affairs to listen to a bitter old man excoriate the Administration for which, with one or two exceptions, they worked. Not one of them had but benefited personally from the patronage of the party against which the man they were listening to was about to rasp out his defiant threat of a walkout. And not one of them, listening there, said: "Aw let him walk out, who cares?"

I don't think it was entirely Al's thumping voice, his pauses, his trick mannerisms, his use of the word "went" when he should have said "go," that brought these youngsters, even temporarily, into the fold of the Liberty League. They didn't laugh at his wisecracks as readily or as uproariously as did the gang at the Mayflower. Perhaps the drinks at my house aren't as heady as Martinis and Sauterne. But in any case they were taking that tired and somewhat uninspired voice very seriously.

And this amazed and saddened me, for sitting there and listening to the Happy Warrior I found it hard to visualize the smiling, brown-derbied, fighting fellow whom once I had seen literally thousands of persons worship as if he had been the patron-saint of the rank and file. I had seen men fight and women faint to glimpse that brown derby as he rode from a station to a hotel through a crowd that was thicker and wilder than even Lucky Lindy had called out in the same city before him.

Then he had not been bitter—except at those who in their hatred for him had resorted to what seemed on Saturday night the same trick he was pulling as he ended his speech by dragging the Red herring across its trail. It seemed so irrelevant to what had gone before. And I recalled that once where he said Moscow others had said Rome. But that was water over the dam, and those youngsters, listening so closely, had not known the Ku Kluxian filthiness of the campaign of 1928.

I made so bold as to mention this from my chimney corner after the cheering had been choked off by the control man and the girl named Louise was shaking up a fresh batch of drinks. And they hooted me down.

"That guy sure put the bee on Roosevelt," said the blonde I had found so attractive a few minutes before.

"Boy, did he smoke them out; and about time someone did," said the lad who had turned the dial to the speech.

Vainly I tried—feeling like an old gray-beard before these confident youngsters—to dispel the charge that the New Deal was socialistic. In harsh wards I quoted Norman Thomas' various excoriations of those who have said Roosevelt was a Socialist. And again they hooted me down.

"Why don't you go back where you came from?" someone said, and they all laughed.

So I went over to the neighborhood taproom to weep into my beer and try to figure it out, which I couldn't. And across the vacant lot came the strains of "Melancholy Baby," which seemed an appropriate theme song for the mood I was in.

Haul Clause Voided On Southern Iron

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday authorized railroads to fix rates on scrap iron and steel from Southern territory to destinations in Kentucky, West Virginia and Ohio without observing the long and short-haul clause.

Except when modified by the commission, this clause of the interstate commerce act prevents carriers from charging a lower rate for a long haul than for a shorter haul over the same route.

Only scrap iron and steel having a value for remelting purposes will be affected under the I. C. C. order. No specific rates were fixed, these being subject to review by the commission when they are filed.

German Tax Increase To Finance New Arms

Berlin, Jan. 27 (AP).—Germany may expect a tax increase of 1,300,000,000 marks (approximately $520,000,000) in the next fiscal year because of expenditures including rearmament, it was disclosed today.

Fritz Reinhardt, state secretary of the ministry of finance, announced that the Nazi taxation program brought in 7,190,400,000 marks in the nine months ended December 31, as compared to 6,061,500,000 marks during the same period in 1934 and 5,147,800,000 in 1933.

Reinhardt said the 1936 fiscal year "must and will" be better than 1935. "These increases are urgently necessary to cover anticipated expenditures, and for financing the rebuilding of the German military," he added.

81 Millions Bill Halted as House Talks of Smith

Appropriations for Varied Activities and Projects Are Carried Over.

By the Associated Press.

The session's third appropriation bill, a $81,221,330 measure, came up for House consideration yesterday, but was virtually shelved by political debate over the Alfred E. Smith speech.

The big share of the 1936-37 supply bill, as brought in by the Appropriations Committee, was for the Bureau of Indian Affairs, $27,101,170. The bill also included a $990,000 appropriation for the new Bituminous Coal Commission, administering unit for the Guffey act.

The total in the bill was $4,179,754 larger than the present year's measure, but was $1,721,111 under budget estimates.

The War Minerals Relief Commission, allowed $13,600, and the Petroleum Administration to administer the Connally "hot oil" law, with $300,000, were other new activities provided for. Of the grand total in the bill, $825,000 was to help support the Interior Department for the current year.

The Bureau of Reclamation was given $17,268,600, which was $2,196,500 more than the 1935-36 appropriation and $75,000 above budget figures, partly due to the need of additional funds "for operation and maintenance charges on the new land being brought under cultivation."

The committee allowed the Boulder Canyon project $9,600,000—$4,400,000 less than the current appropriation. This leaves, committeemen figured, only $6,670,000 more needed to complete the dam, power plant and incidental works. The committee also pointed out that the power plant is expected to be ready for operation by May, when power revenues will come in from Los Angeles.

The All-American Canal in Imperial Valley, California, was granted $6,500,000, leaving $10,000,000 yet needed to finish the $38,500,000 project.

The Appropriations Committee recommended that the consumers' counsel of the Bituminous Coal Commission have $90,000 to spend trying to keep coal prices from pyramiding under the Guffey coal control act, which levies a tax on the product at the mine.

Woman Denies Killing Husband, 3 Children

Passaic, N. J., Jan. 27 (AP).—Mrs. Elizabeth Fiederer, 38, who police said admitted killing her husband and three children by gas because they were afflicted by an incurable disease, pleaded innocent to four charges of murder in the deaths today.

She was arraigned before Police Judge Walter H. Gardener and held without bail for grand jury action after Capt. of Detectives George F. Eckhardt announced she told him she had killed the four. County Prosecutor Arthur C. Dunn said he planned to present the case to the grand jury on Friday.

The slender, brown-haired woman, who was removed unconscious from the sealed apartment in which the others died, showed no emotion during the brief proceedings.

Bonus Rushed, Veto Overridden

rison of the Senate Finance Committee—Roosevelt regulars, but both up for re-election this year—were on record for overriding the President's veto.

Fifty-seven Democrats were joined by 16 Republicans, 2 Farmer-Laborites and 1 Progressive, in voting to override. Only 12 Democrats and 7 Republicans voted "no." No Senators "switched" from their previous bonus vote.

No Senators were paired or absent. Vice President Garner was so impressed by this circumstance—it was the first time every Senator had voted on a bill since he had been the chamber's presiding officer—that he congratulated the Senate on the state of its "health."

Packed galleries, dotted with khaki, cheered and applauded for a full minute after the result was announced. Garner had to pound his gavel and shout for order before silence was restored.

In the brief prelude leading up to the vote, Senate Whip James Hamilton Lewis took the floor to pay a short tribute to the President.

"Does that mean the Senator will vote to sustain the President?" asked Senator King.

"It means I am compelled, like the President, to follow my sense of duty, sustained by my conscience," said Lewis.

He voted to override the veto.

Prior to the ballot, Senator Hastings heaped coals of fire on the heads of Democratic leaders for deserting the President on the bonus vote.

"Oh, I am sorry for him (the President) today," he said.

Hastings asked what had brought about this "new alliance" of the President with the United States Chamber of Commerce, the National Economy League and the American Liberty League, on the bonus issue.

"Do you suppose it could be true that the 'vested interests' have control in Washington again?" he jeered. "Do you suppose it could be true that 'entrenched greed' of the industrialists had anything to do with the writing of this veto message?

"Oh, no, Mr. Presdent! Oh, no. It is NOT true. You know it is NOT true and I know it is NOT true, too, but I deny it for you rather than embarass you by leaving you to deny it for yourself."

He charged Democratic leaders would not have remained silent if it was a Republican President in the White House who vetoed the bond payment bill.

"You would call out again that 'industrial autocrats' are back at their old tricks, and 'entrenched greed, is in control once more," he said. "You would blame it on Mellon or Mills, if they were in office."

Hastings chided Senator Harrison for feeling "no embarassment" in voting to override the President, after he had led the fight to sustain the veto on the Patman bill last year. Then Hastings made a mock plea to the Democratic leaders that drew laughter from the galleries.

"Oh, I beg of you not to desert him (the President) now," he said. "You have told us that he is the Moses who is leading us out of the wilderness. You have assured us that all we have to do is wait and wait, and finally we would see the things accomplished that were hoped for by the great mass of citizens of America.

"Oh, Mr. President, I beg of the distinguished leader on the other side of the chamber, I beg the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee, I beg the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania, Mr. Guffey, who has recently taken on the important duty of improving instead of losing the majority on that side of the chamber—I beg of all of you on this historic occasion not to desert your leader. Give him your support and show him you have always been with him. You know you have voted for things you did not like, all of you, and merely because he has asked you to do it.

"Now, when he asks you to do something that you know is right, and that he knows is right, I beg of you to make it easy for yourselves and go along with him. Help him to reduce the expenses of the Government by 25 per cent, which he promised in his campaign. Help him to balance the budget. Help him to eliminate some of the governmental bureaus instead of increasing them."

In a statement after passage of the bonus, James E. Van Zandt, commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, took issue with statements that a drive for general service pensions will follow bonus passage.

"I believe nothing of the sort is going to happen," he said. "However, the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States always have and always will stand sturdily for proper compensation to the disabled men and the widows and orphans of veterans. We believe that is just and right."

Donald A. Hobart, national commander of the American Veterans Association, the one service group to oppose prepayment of the bonus, charged that "leaders of the veterans' lobby now fear the consequences of their successful raid upon the public Treasury."

Hobart said this was evidenced by "their frantic appeal" for the veterans not to cash their bonds. He said it was "sheer childishness" to believe the veterans will heed this advice. He asked if this could mean that veterans leaders "are urging their members to demand a second bonus comprised of 3 per cent interest on interest which will not have been earned for nine and one-half years?"

"Or is it because they recognize that this bonus raid comes at a time when the public credit is least able to withstand the strain, and in consequence are running to cover?" Hobart added.

Shortly after passage of the bonus, Senator Thomas Gore (Democrat), of Oklahoma, introduced a bill authorizing veterans to pay either their adjusted service certificates or "baby" bonds over to Government agencies in full or partial payment of debts to those agencies. An effort to amend the bonus bill to provide for deduction of debts owned the Government failed last week.

Roosevelt Asks Veterans to Use Bonus Wisely

Joins With Ex-Service Men's Leaders to Warn of 'Frittering Away.'

An appeal against "frittering away" the cash derived from bonus bonds was issued to veterans and "all those who have their welfare at heart" by President Roosevelt and leaders of principal veterans organizations late yesterday.

The appeal was contained in one of two statements issued at the White House shortly after the Senate had completed enactment of the bonus bill over the Presidential veto.

The first statement called on Administration agencies to carry out provisions of the bill with the least possible delay. The second followed a conference between the President and heads of the veterans groups at which it was agreed to urge veterans to retain their bonds unless they plan to use the cash "for some permanently useful purpose."

Clerical Task 'Enormous.'

In view of the fact that Congress has enacted the law authorizing the exchange of Adjusted Service Certificates for bonds, the President indicated today to the Veterans Administration and the Treasury Department that he desired the provisions of the new law carried out as expeditiously as accuracy will permit. The President also indicated that the magnitude of the administrative task carrying the provisions of the new law into effect was so great that patience should be exercised in the matter.

The President was advised that more than seven million interest calculations will be necessary and that it will require between 2,500 and 3,000 additional personnel working for approximately six months to do this job. It should be remembered that the amount due each individual veteran must be separately worked out for each case. The additional personnel to handle this enormous figuring and clerical job must, under the law, come from the civil service rolls.

To Mail Blanks Soon.

Application blanks will be available in all regional offices of the Veterans Administration and in the hands of service organizations within the next two or three months. If the veterans will keep in mind that the bonds are to be issued dated June 15, 1936, and after filing their applications will refrain from writing follow-up letters, they will greatly assist in the prompt administration of the new law.

Later, after the President conferred with leaders of the three big veterans organizations the following statement was issued:

The national commanders of the three major former service organizations called upon the President today to assure him that they would do everything within their power to persuade veterans to retain the bonds issued to them in lieu of their adjusted service certificates, unless they expected to use the cash for some permanently useful purpose.

The President, as well as the commanders of the former service organizations, felt that the veterans should consider first of all the protection of their families.

Immediate and urgent need for funds offers, of course, a valid reason for cashing the bonds.

Home Purchasing Approved.

In the same way, the paying off of indebtedness wholly reasonable, just as using the cash for something of permanent value, such as a new home or the definite improvement of an existing home, would be reasonable.

What the President and the commanders both fully agreed on, however, is that every effort should be made by the veterans, by their organizations and by all who have their welfare at heart, to prevent the frittering away of cash obtained from the bonds. Permanent advantage as opposed to wholly temporary pleasure should be the criterion.

Those who keep the bonds or any part of them not only can get ready cash at any time if necessary, but while they hold these nontransferable bonds they will receive 3 per cent interest on the safest imaginable investment. They are true "thrift bonds."

The President and the commanders feel confident that very many veterans will keep these Government bonds in whole or in part for long-range protection of themselves and their families.

Alleged Killer Of Recluse Put On Trial Today

Confession Is Claimed From Fairfax County Defendant.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245. Fairfax, Va.
Phone Alexandria 43-F-31.

Trial of the first of two men charged with the murder of Truman Brush, aged recluse, at his dilapidated cabin near Falls Church last August, will open today in the circuit court of Fairfax County. Two indictments have been returned by a grand jury against Henry Edwards, colored, and Hugh Hummer, one charging murder and robbery and the other murder. The trial of Edwards will be held first, with Paul E. Brown, new Commonwealth's attorney, conducting the prosecution.

The finding of the body of Brush was reported to police by Hummer. Brush's skull had been crushed with a rock and his cabin ransacked. Police found about $500 hidden about the house.

Several weeks later Edwards confessed to the slaying, police said, implicating his plumber-employer, Hummer. The latter has steadfastly denied the accusations.

Citizens of the Town of Falls Church again are studying the proposal that the town charter be surrendered. A petition is being circulated asking the State Assembly to pass an enabling act to allow the citizens to vote on the question.

The question has been put forward from time to time by citizens, but no concerted action has been taken until recently. Two years ago the citizens of the section in Alexandria County petitioned the circuit court for permission to withdraw from the whole incorporation. The petition was granted by Judge Walter T. McCarthy, but the case was appealed to the State Supreme Court. A decision there is expected shortly.

The petition now being circulated includes both the sections of the town in Fairfax and Arlington counties. The backers state that the town will function more efficiently under the county form of government. Since the passage of the Byrd road law, small towns have been forced to maintain their secondary roads without help from the State and proponents of dissolution contend that by paying the county road tax and operating under the county school system better conditions could be provided with a decrease in taxation.

The town charter was granted by the State Assembly in 1875. Falls Church has a population of about 3,000 and normally about 400 qualified voters. The majority of the residents live in the Fairfax County section.

Opponents of the dissolution proposal point out that residents of the town would not be free from paying the present school and water bond indebtedness if the charter were surrendered, and to a large degree would lose their power of self government. The possibility of obtaining a sewerage system would also be lost, they contend. It was also pointed out that under the Byrd road law there would be no assurance that the State would maintain the streets. Critics to the conditions in Fairfax County as to secondary roads and what they term inadequate funds for their maintenance.

Circulation of the dissolution petition was started by J. V. Turner, John Turner and Philip B. Nourse, of East Falls Church, and B. N. Gibson, P. W. Lee, G. N. Lester, G. T. Reeves and W. S. Brown, of the Fairfax County section. Brown is a member of the Town Council from the second ward.

Citizens of Burke, Va., have been advised by the Southern Railway Co. that an application asking for authority to discontinue the local agency station and conduct it in the future as a "prepay" station has been filed with the State Corporation Commission. A hearing on the application will be held in Richmond on February 18.

Citizens of the community are preparing to wage a vigorous fight to have the station maintained on its present status. They point to the fact that the only available freight stations are at Fairfax Station, 9 miles away, or Alexandria, nearly 20 miles distant.

They have spent their entire life in Fairfax County, Va., on a farm near McLean. Mr. Money is 85 and his wife 84 years old. They have 7 children, 23 grandchildren and 5 great-grandchildren, and all but two children were present at the celebration.

Principal Accused in Whipping Wins Faith of Student Leaders

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Telephone, SHepherd 2363.

Six student leaders of the Takoma-Silver Spring Junior High School yesterday signed a statement expressing their confidence and loyalty in W. B. Marks, principal of the school, who is said to have invoked the old State statute permitting the corporal punishment of students.

At the same time, Henry J. Mehserle, Silver Spring resident, whose 14-year-old son, Jack, is said to have been one of the youths who felt the chastening rod in the hands of the principal, said that tonight's mass meeting in the County Liquor Control Board Building at Silver Spring is not an "ouster" meeting.

Mehserle said that the meeting is an attempt to make a "sane, intelligent effort to solve the problem." He said that the gathering is not interested in Mark's alleged whipping of several boys, but rather in getting repeal of the law which permits such whippings for disciplinary purposes.

Superintendent to Attend.

Dr. Edwin W. Broome, county superintendent of schools, has indicated that he will attend the meeting.

The student leaders who backed their principal are the following: Jack Neuman, student council president; John Pace, editor of the school's paper; Hal Dearing, assistant editor of the paper; Loretta Yost, manager of girls' athletics; Jean McCandlish, secretary of ways and means committee, student council, and Margie Burke, secretary of assemblies, student council.

The coming campaign will not be waged between Democrats and Republicans but between those who believe in the American system and those who tend toward communuism, Peter Snyder, Washington lawyer and former Assistant Secretary of Labor, told members of the Federation of Republican Women of Montgomery County at the annual meeting yesterday in Jesup Blair Community House.

Attacks Administration.

The issues of today, he asserted, are "whether or not we shall endure as a republic, whether we shall be American or anti-American and whether there is to be centralized Government control or liberty of the individual." The present Administration was termed socialistic rather than Democratic.

Functions of the police force in Montgomery County were described by Frank H. Karn, president of the board of county commissionars who also addressed the women. Karn praised the force, which he declared to be composed of "good, capable men."

Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, of Bethesda, who presided at the meeting, appointed the following committee to revise the constitution: Mrs. Eugene Stevens, Chevy Chase, chairman; Mrs Gilbert Grosvenor, of Bethesda, and Mrs. Edward Koch, of Silver Spring. It was decided to hold meetings each month in preparation for an intensive campaign.

Mrs. John H. Werner will speak on the interesting work and benefits afforded by membership in the State and national organizations of the Parent-Teacher Associations, at the meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of Chevy Chase Elementary School, at the school at 2:30 p. m. today. Mrs. Werner is president of the P.-T. A. of Bethesda Elementary School.

Mrs. Curtis Walker will preside over the discussion of current school questions, following the short business meeting. Mrs. W. A. Rogers will be chairman of the group serving tea after the meeting.

The Edgemoor Citizens Association, at its January meeting, reaffirmed its position favoring prompt equalization of assesments in Montgomery County. Maj. John E. Upp pointed out that there has been no re-assessment of real estate for 10 or 12 years, and that, consequently, there has been no allowance made for depreciation. He also stated that many new buildings erected in the county in recent years are not even on the assesment books.

E. J. Gray, newly elected president, stated that under existing legislation the county assessor has the power to adjust assessment. Delegates of the Edgemoor Citizens Association to the Montgomery County Civic Federation were instructed to direct their efforts toward obtaining action upon equalization of assessments.

Officers elected were E. J. Gray, president; Paul T. Culbertson, vice president; C. Emory Phillips, secretary and treasurer.

Delegates elected to the Bethesda Fire Board are Paul T. Culbertson, Robert F. Fleming, Jo V. Morgan, C. Emory Phillips, William S. Hepner, Maj. John E. Upp and R. E. Burnie.

Edward W. Koch has been re-elected president of the Fortnightly Club of the Forest Glen-Woodside

Final decree of divorce was granted Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Goode, 26, of Takoma Park, Md., yesterday by Judge Charles W. Woodward in Montgomery County Circuit Court Rockville, Md. The husband, Forest Lee Goode, was charged with desertion in the petition, filed by Attorney Kenneth Lyddane, of Rockville.

The Woman's Auxiliary of Sandy Spring (Md.) Volunteer Fire Department will resume the monthly luncheons at the fire house at noon Friday. The luncheons ar efor the benefit of the fire department. Miss Mary Miller Stabler heads the committee in charge.

Seven Oaks Manor Citizens Association will meet tonight at 8:15 o'clock in Jesup Blair Community House, Silver Spring, Md.

Stricken with spinal meningitis, Stanley Hewitt, 24, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hewitt, of Silver Spring, Md, was taken to Garfield Hospital over the week-end, where he is reported to be in serious condition. Hewitt was taken ill Thursday, but it was not until yesterday that the case was definitely diagnosed.

Miss Mary Rokahr, home management specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture, was the speaker at the annual meeting of the Montgomery Farm Women's Co-operative Market, at the courthouse in Rockville, yesterday. Miss Rokahr discussed the "Keeping of Farm Accounts."

Mrs. Raymond Kemp, Damascus, Md.; Mrs. Rosa Jones, Darnestown, Md., and Mrs. James D. King, Germantown, Md., were elected as directors to serve for a period of three years. Mrs. Julian Waters, president of the co-operative, presided.

Mrs. Leist Dead at 70 On Visit in Alexandria

Mrs. Rosemary Leist, 70, widow of A. P. Leist, of Ronceverte, W. Va., died yesterday at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick L. Flynn, 8 Birch street, Mount Ida, Va. She had been visiting her daughter for a month. Death was due to a heart attack. She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Flynn, Mrs. W. H. Burkholder, of Ronceverte, W. Va., and Mrs. J. M. Purvis, of Balboa, Canal Zone, Panama.

The body will be sent to Ronceverte next Monday for burial, after the arrival of Mrs. Purvis from Panama.

DeMolay Marks 3d Anniversary In Alexandria

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The Alexandria Chapter of the Order of DeMolay celebrated its third birthday anniversary last night with a dinner in the Lee room of the George Mason Hotel, followed by a program of entertainment and dancing.

Richard Earl Stulz, master councilor of the chapter, was master of ceremonies, and the committee in charge was Elmer G. Ridgely, William E. Lee, James T. Thomson, William M. Saunders, Stanley S. Fedder, Llewellyn Gillum, Godfrey Runaldue and Walter C. Herbert.

Patents from the grand council were presented to Joseph J. Berkow, Milton C. Frinks, Harold W. Reid, jr., Bernard Berkow, James R. Henderson, William W. Cunningham, Frank C. Kast, jr., and Sidney H. Cohen.

Effie Elizabeth Pratt, 19 years old, colored, living at 318 north Alfred street, died in an ambulance en route to the Alexandria Hospital yesterday morning as the result of two pistol shot wounds near her heart. An investigation by the police indicated the girl shot herself, and Dr. Llewellyn Powell, city coroner, gave a verdict of death from gunshot wounds.

Optometrist Named.

Dr. Joseph Wagenheim, of Washington, has been appointed as associate director of the department of education of the American Optometric Association, it was announced yesterday. The appointment was made by Dr. Walter I. Brown, of New Bedford, Mass., president of the association.

Eastern Shore Jury Opens Powell Trial

Princess Anne, Md, Jan. 27 (AP).—The Somerset County grand jury today began consideration of the murder charge against William Powell, World War veteran, accused in the chisel slaying of Arthur Dize, of Crisfield.

Charles Dize, son of the slain man, and his widow, Mrs. Grace Dize, were among the chief witnesses summoned by the State to appear before the jury.

The court will hold a hearing tomorrow on a habeas corpus petition filed by Powell's counsel, John B. Robins. Powell has been in jail for several months.

Young Democrat Clubs Split Over New Deal

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 27.—Disagreement over New Deal policies among Young Democratic Clubs in Maryland led today to establishment of a rival political organization—a chapter of the Maryland Union of Young Democrats—on the St. John's College campus.

The local club, whose chairman is William Gideon, college senior, is a part of a State-wide movement initiated by a group of young Marylanders, who also established the older political organization but resigned because they disagreed with the New Deal.

The new club will hold an organization meeting here January 31. Warren Tydings, of Davidsonvill, former officer of the Young Democratic Clubs of Maryland, is representing the county in the new movement. T. Jordan Dorsey, of Annapolis, is local chairman.

Son Held in Attack On Mother, Brother

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 27.—Mrs. Hinton Caldwell, 46, and a son, Howard, 19, are in Rockingham Memorial Hospital with shotgun wounds inflicted, she says, by her younger son, Brinson Caldwell, 18, last night at their home in Hopkins Gap in the mountains of west Rockingham.

Brinson Caldwell was jailed on a charge of felonious assault. Two fingers were shot from the hand of Howard. Mrs. Caldwell was wounded in the hip and hand. Their condition is not serious.

Officers said the shooting followed a family quarrel which started at the supper table. Brinson is said to have taken the shotgun and run from the house, telling other members of the family not to try to stop him. When they appeared at the door and window, he fired three charges. The father, Hinton Caldwell, was not injured.

Brinson was arrested at the home of a neighbor a mile distant and he refused to talk about the affair.

$99,700 Asked in Bill For 2 National Parks

The Interior Department budget bill introduced in Congress yesterday would provide $59,900 for protection and maintenance of the Great Smoky National Park and $39,800 for the new Shenandoah National Park, according to the Associated Press. These amounts were the same as for 1936, and were equal to the estimates submitted by the National Park Service.

The bill would provide $257,000 for maintenance and protection in national military parks, battlefields, monuments and cemeteries, under the supervision of the park service. Many of them are located in Southern States.

GUATEMALA
By Prof. John Hutter

Taking his listeners into the very heart of this historic region, Mr. Rogers, with motion pictures and colored slides, creates in the mind of each spectator the impression of having visited this glorious land.
He portrays accurately the manners, customs, native costumes, industries, arts, religions, etc., prevailing generally in this country. Many interesting places are visited, including the Mayan ruins at Quirigua; Antigua, the ancient capital of Central America; Chichicastenango, the largest and most beautiful Indian market in Central America. Lake Atitlan, one of the most beautiful lakes in all the world, and many other fascinating places.

Skiiers Taken to Snow On Club's Special Train

Members of Capital Society Make Weekly Trip to Pennsylvania Hills to Practice Winter Sport; Group Is Organized by New Dealers.

By Dudley Harmon.

When one learns that energetic New Yorkers are skiing up and down borax-covered slides installed in department stores there for that purpose, it seems as though no news from the sports world could ever again come as a surprise. Yet it is with something of amazement that we learn that Washington, whose peculiar climate has long made it the despair of lovers of winter sports, now has a ski-train all its own.

Each Sunday a group of the younger and more rugged members of Capital society gathers in Union Station. They are dressed in costumes ranging all the way from smart ski suits to long red flannel tights. They are members of the Washington Ski Club, organized by Mr. Waldo Holden and several other enterprising New Dealers. The committee members are Mr. William C. Moore, Mr. John Porter, Mr. Charles Smoot, Mr. John Borton, Mr. J. E. Murdock, Mrs. Winson Elting, Miss Elinor Ryan, Mr. Joseph Cotton and Miss Elizabeth Morrison.

Cause Sensation.

Here the skiiers cause something of a sensation among the inhabitants, who are mostly miners. A large group greets them upon their arrival at the station and gathers again in the afternoon to see them off.

Last Sunday 18 newspapers were brought on board by members to read on the way up, but not one was opened. Instead, members spent the time carefully greasing their skis and reading up on technical literature. By the time they reached Glencoe, they had mastered, in theory at least, all the more difficult skiing turns and twists.

It is not necessary to be an expert to qualify for membership in the Washington Ski Club. Many of the group have never been on skis before.

"It took me two hours to climb one hill," sighed a discouraged member yesterday.

Daring Jumps.

There are some experts, however. Members point with pride to the daring jumps of Mr. Robert Smoot in particular.

After five hours fighting the hills, members board their special car again. On the return home, most are too weary to do more than slump listlessly in their seats. Conversation is desultory.

The first Sunday the club made the trip, 20 enthusiasts showed up. Last Sunday the number was nearer 40.

Among those who have been in Glencoe with the Ski Club are Mr. and Mrs. Winson Elting, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Darlington, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cotton, Miss Elinor Ryan, Mr. Harrison Proctor, Miss Eileen O'Daniel, Miss Barbara Donald, Miss Alice Graeme, Mr. Richard Sanger, Mr. William Hogg, Third Secretary of the British Embassy; Mr. J. M. K. Vyvyan, Second Secretary of the embassy; Mr. Albert Stephan, Miss Elinor Fahey, Miss Lois Jameson, Miss Ellen Downes, Mr. Brewster Morris, Mr. Bernard Barton, Miss Dorothy Coggeshall, Miss Betsy Knapp, Mr. John Porter and Mr. Dudley Browne.

TUNE IN TODAY! THE STORY OF MARY MARLIN WJSV 12:00 P. M.

WAS IT MURDER?

By JAMES HILTON

Author of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and "Lost Horizon."

Colin Revell, young writer, is called by Robert Roseveare, headmaster of his old school, Oakington, to help solve the mystery of the death of Robert Marshall, younger brother of Wilbraham, head-prefect at the school, and cousin of Mr. Ellington, his housemaster. The boy was killed in bed by a gas-light fixture that had fallen on him. Roseveare says his suspicions were aroused when he found a note written the night before Robert died leaving his belongings "if anything should happen" to his brother. Revell talks with Daggat, the school padre; Lambourne, one of the masters, and Ellington and his young wife, but reaches no solution. Later Wilbraham is found dead in the empty swimming pool, presumably having dived to the tiled floor in the dark. Revell meets Detective Guthrie from Scotland Yard, who tells him a bullet has been found in Wilbraham's brain.

CHAPTER XIV.

REVELL, AFTER A DOUBTFUL PAUSE, began at the beginning and told the whole history of his connection with the Marshall affair. Guthrie did not question him during the narration, but when he had finished, the good-humored, rather nondescript face took on a sudden look of alertness. "So you're what might be termed an amateur detective, eh, Mr. Revell?"

"I don't claim the title, I assure you. I came in at the beginning, because of Roseveare's invitation, and after the second affair I think it was rather natural that I should take an interest in it."

"Oh, quite. And for an amateur you really haven't done so very badly. The only thing an amateur can do—and that, very often, quite easily—is to scare the criminal and give him a good chance to get away. Personally, I think the the Oakington murderer is very far from being scared. The inquest verdict must, as we intended, have reassured him considerably."

"There have been all sorts of rumors about, though."

"Oh, I daresay. Most likely some of my plainclothes fellows have been seen—I put them on to keep an eye on things at night."

"Do you mean that you've been searching the place already?"

"Hardly that—though by pure luck my men did find something. What I was just going to tell you was that a few days ago a man named Graham arrived in town. He was the boys' guardian, in fact, so he had every right to be interested. He came to us at the Yard for a little talk about it."

"Not that he had definite evidence, but he told us enough for the Yard to send me to Oakington—just for a little unofficial look around. I hope I didn't make myself too conspicuous, though I did have a chat with the local coroner and police. Like you, Mr. Revell, I very soon came to the tentative conclusion that the second boy and possibly the first as well, had been murdered. Then, quite by chance, one of the constables on patrol duty found something that definitely gave us a clew. On the strength of it we were able to approach the Home Office with a request for the exhumation of the body. That's how it all happened . . . Don't ask me what it was that my men found, for a detective has to keep a few secrets to himself.

Roseveare's Attitude Mystifies.

"Now," he went on "there's one little minor mystery that we ought to be able to clear up within the next few hours. And that is the very queer attitude of the celebrated Dr. Roseveare. Will you undertake that little job for me?"

"I'll try, of course. But how do you suggest I should set about it?"

"In the directest manner possible. Tell him that the boy's body has been exhumed and that Scotland Yard is investigating the murder—watch the fellow's face and don't give him time to make up a yarn." And he added: "By the way, I wouldn't chatter too much about all this to Lambourne. You may perhaps have been a shade too free with that young man."

Guthrie motored Revel back to Oakington toward tea time, and arranged to meet him again later on in the evening.

Roseveare was naturally astonished to see him again. "Miss your train, eh? There's another good one at 7, I think—you can verify it from my time table here . . . "

Revell flushed under the scarcely veiled hint. "I came back, sir," he began slowly, "because I wanted to tell you that yesterday the body of Wilbraham Marshall was exhumed and it was found that he had been shot."

The effect upon Roseveare was electric; he looked up with suddenly piercing eyes that were like the gleaming tips of a pair of foils. But after the first bewildered second there came to him, as from immense reserves of hidden strength, a sort of defensive blandness which might have concealed anything or everything behind its ramparts.

Roseveare Turn Inquisitor.

"But, my dear boy, you're not serious, are you? All sorts of rumors, I know, are still in circulation——"

"This isn't a rumor," Revell cut in. "I heard it from a Scotland Yard man who has been in Oakington today and who attended the exhumation yesterday."

"Scotland Yard? And in Oakington? But surely—surely—if that were so—he would come to me with his information. Where did you meet your informant? Why did he tell you?"

Revell was somewhat taken aback by this string of inquiries. Nevertheless he answered: "I met him—er—quite accidentally. As to why he told me, I don't know, unless he though I might be able to help him. And naturally, sir, I'm a little puzzled over one or two small matters that concern you and me in this affair."

"Such as?"

"Well, in the first place, why did you really send for me here to begin with? I put it down to the state of your nerves at the time—but I really cna't understand how and why your nevers have been so totally unaffected by this second affair."

"You will believe me, I am sure," Roseveare said, "when I tell you that I had not the slightest suspicion at first that the dormitory accident was anything but what it appeared to be. Not for two months—till the end of November, in fact—did I harbor the very least misgiving. Then one afternoon the wife of one of my staff visited me and unfolded an exceedingly remarkable story. She gave me to understand that her husband had done several things that seemed to connect rather curiously with the death of the boy. I remember she mentioned the sick room over the dormitory and said that her husband had been there several times. So, to come to the point, I recollected a chance conversation I had some years ago with the master of your college at Oxford, and I sent for you.

Well, now, consider my position when you came. I did not feel justified in telling you the truth—to have done so, I judged, would have prejudiced the impartiality of your investigation. On the other hand, it was clearly necessary that I should give you some reason for having sent for you. I therefore concocted the little note which I told you had been left between the pages of the boy's algebra book."

A Lady In Question.

He continued after a pause: "That week-end you were here, however, something happened that removed all my misgivings completely. The lady in question visited me again, but in very different circumstances. She came, in fact, to apologize for her previous visit and to tell me that all her suspicions were really quite groundless and merely the result of nerves. This tallied, of course, with my own theory of the incident and I was very glad to take her word about it."

"And what about this second accident? Didn't it awaken any of the old suspicions?"

"Why should it have done? It was, I admit, a most remarkable coincidence, but in the face of Murchiston's evidence, to say nothing of the evidence of my own eyes, how could I have thought of anything but accident?"

"The detective told me his men had found something—some piece of evidence—he didn't tell me what."

"Do you mean to tell me that policemen have been searching the school?"

"Not searching, I think, so much as watching.

"Watching or searching, it is equally scandalous." His voice lost, for the first time, its smooth precision. "Common courtesy, I should think would have made even a detective ask for the permission which he might know I should have to give. A disgraceful infringement of all public and personal rights!"

And so the interview closed on that note of anger.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THERE'S nothing new in the pronouncement that streaked, gray hair is unattractive, but there is something brand-new in the fact that an unusually effective product has recently been put out which beautifies the hair through color. So enthusiastic are Washington beauty experts about it that many leading beauty shops, both department store and privately owned, have already added it to their treatments.

The new product comes in two different mixtures, each of which accomplishes a different thing for the hair. One mixture accentuates the natural color of the hair and imparts luster, sheen and highlights. The other completely and permanently colors hair in one short, pleasant treatment. In fact, it does more than simply color the hair, for it leaves it soft and lustrous.

The dye completely colors gray hair in one treatment and is particularly effective in correcting badly bleached or overbleached hair. It revivifies nondescript blonde hair, or ash-blonde hair, and—remember this—it tints instead of bleaches.

So if your hair is losing its color and luster, and yet you do not want to look theatrically artificial, try this new product.

Smart Scarves.

A SCARF which ties in a number of different ways will freshen up your costume no end. A downtown store has some that are as versatile and smart as any we've seen for a long time.

You can knot this scarf loosely, cross it over your chest gypsy fashion, or tie it into a big flaring bow under your chin. It is exceptionally smart as a dress livener-upper, and equally chic glimpsed peeping through your coat.

Spring Frocks.

IT SEEMS silly to talk about spring when the winter winds are howling mournfully about our heads, but it's fun to think about, anyway. And since we believe with the Boy Scouts in being prepared, we have already done a little snooping around for spring frocks among the local shops.

An F street store has some grand models which are the spirit of youth and spring. They are originals from the collection of a famous American coutourier. One we partiqularly liked has a skirt and sleeves made entirely of pleats, which Paris predicts will be so smart this spring. The pleats are stitched to the knees, then flare out in graceful fashion.

Another dress has minute tucks, white ball buttons and a cunning little round collar. It's very simple, just the thing for the working girl.

Then there are some gay prints. One is made up in stunning colors—red, russet and blue.

Powder as Gift.

WITH EVERY box of a well known brand of face powder, a Washington store is giving away free two bottles of French perfume. The powder is triple silk shifted, and softens and smooths the complexion. The perfume comes for day and evening wear, and the scent is unusually intriguing in both.

Child Subject To Influence Outside Home

Expert Warns Mothers Against Too Strict Isolation.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MRS. SMITH was extremely careful not to influence her children in any way, and as far as possible not to let them be influenced by outsiders. From the time they were born, she kept them shut off from casual friends and relatives. Visitors were permitted to see them at a distance, but not to touch or speak with them. She herself was kind but impersonal in her management and care.

Unfortunately for her theories, there came a time when it was decreed by State authorities that these children must go to school. Being only human, they naturally were affected by the people with whom they came in contact, and the more so because, after the rather arid asmosphere of their home, human relationships were like water on thirsty soil. Mrs. Smith's careful guarding proved to have been worse than useless. All the reward she had for her self-control was to see her children adopting the ways of living and habits of thought of strangers.

No one can go through life untouched by others. Even the effort to protect a child from outside contacts is, in a way, to influence him. The habits of health, the ordinary conventions of eating and dressing all help to mold him in a pattern which is certainly not natural to primitive man.

It is, of course, ill-advised to influence a child unduly. He must be given as much opportunity as possible to make his own decisions and guide his own behavior. If he is too long, and too completely, dependent on his home and parents, he may never acquire the ability to stand alone or fend for himself. But to hope that by keeping hands off from the outset he may develop naturally and along independent lines is to hope for the impossible.

Simple Model Is Combination Of Style, Wear

By Laura I. Baldt, A. M.

HERE'S the sort of stunning little dress you can wear and always feel well dressed. You'll have guessed that the original was in crepe silk print in bright color on dark ground, so strikingly new. Of course, thin woolens, and plain crepe silks would make up charmingly in this model. It's simple to sew with its sleeves cut in one with shoulders. The peplum gives it a two-piece effect. Pehaps you'd like to make another of cotton material with short sleeves and without the peplum.

Style No. 3434 is designed for sizes 11, 13, 15, 17 and 19 years. Size 15 requires 3⅞ yards of 39-inch material. Send 10 cents (coin is preferred) for pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. Be sure to state size you wish. New Spring Fashion Book costs 10 cents. Send for your copy today. Book and pattern together for 20 cents. Address order to The Washington Post, Pattern Department, 160 Fifth avenue, New York, N. Y.

Toby Wing Airs Views on Marriage

Toby Wing Lists Mutual Jealousy of Success, Handsome Leading Men, Hasty Marriages and Surplus Supply of Beauty as Chief Causes of Hollywood Divorces.

SURROUNDED by resolute autograph hunters, adoring small boys, and a watchful mother, Toby Wing sat in her dressing room here the other day and calmly gave her views on what's wrong with Hollywood marriages.

Round-faced Toby is only 19, and her dressing room looks more like a college girl's than a movie actress'. Gay sweaters neatly folded beside sturdy shoes, where one had expected to see elaborate gowns and high-heeled slippers.

Toby's personality is in keeping with her clothes. She is sincerely natural and unaffected, and her air of simple naivete is not of that sickening variety put on by some Hollywood stars for appearance's sake.

According to Toby, the reason Hollywood couples part company so rapidly and so often is twofold. They are mutually jealous of each other's work, and there are too many other attracive men and women out there to choose from.

"In most cases," said Toby, "an actress's career is more important to her than her husband. Her success in her work is uppermost in mind. Unfortunately, most men become first bored, then annoyed, when their wife's favorite topic of conversation centers about her career.

"Then, too, women in the movies often become jealous if their husbands are more successful than they are, and vice versa, naturally. Actors who stay married to the same person longest are usually the ones who have had sense enough to pick out a nonprofessional wife. She's only too happy to see her husband get ahead.

"No matter how happily married an actress is, her marriage runs a risk of going on the rocks with each new leading man assigned her. Either her husband gets so jealous, without any reason, that life together is impossible, or else she actually does fall in love with the man playing opposite her. In either case the result is the same—divorce."

"The fact that movie actresses often marry in a hurry has a great deal to do with many wrecked marriages. Usually they fall in love during vacations, as they work too hard the rest of the time to see much of men. The amount of time allowed by the film companies for vacation is not enough in which wisely to choose a husband."

When Toby gets married, she is not going to give up her career, but she is going to try not to talk to her husband about it. If he shows signs of falling in love with some one else, she is going away on a long trip to let him make up his mind as to which he really prefers.

Pleasant Homes

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

HER FURNITURE is an accumulation of the years . . . it doesnt match, but each piece is associated with memories of building her home and each is basically good in design and workmanship, therefore of enduring beauty. But her problem is how to polish the wood so that it will get that rich satiny patine that old wood can have. And then she is somewhat puzzled about additions and replacements. Since the furniture she has is of various styles, she wonders what type to concentrate on when she buys new things from time to time. And what kind of a rug would we suggest?

Everybody has a pet way of polishing furniture. We've tried a lot of different recipes, but the one we've found to be most satisfactory is to use a good wax—not the liquid but the paste. Rub it on, leave it there about a half hour, then polish it affectionately with a soft cloth. Send a stamp for our bulletin, "Combining Periods of Furniture." It goes into that more fully than we have space for here. With lovely old furniture, we think there's nothing nicer than an Oriental rug—if that is outside the budget, there are excellent reproductions in beautiful patterns.

Expert Lauds Daytime Dress Of U. S. Women

British Designer Declares Their Evening Attire Is "Less Individual."

NEW YORK (AP).—American women look nicer in the daytime than in the evening, says Norman Hartnell, British fashion designer.

The man who designed the royal wedding trousseau for the Duchess of Gloucester thinks the American woman is "quite perfectly" beautiful, but doubts whether she shows as much individuality in dress as her British cousin.

And Ankles!

"Of course she looks lovely," Hartnell said. "She is quite big to start with, with lovely length of limb and a gazelle slimness. She wears lovely furs, and her ankles and legs are so shapely. That is not the case with the average English woman.

"Yet, somehow, the American woman gives a picture of buying a whole set of evening clothes—everything that goes together—almost as though someone had chosen the whole thing for her, instead of giving an impression of having chosen the various items in her ensemble individually. Sometimes, in fact, it looks like something that had been put on her. Her daytime clothes are more individual."

Why Shop Abroad?

Hartnell was disturbed, he said, that a country with such great selective and creative powers as the United States should bother to go to Europe for clothes—its make-up, hair, hands, jewelry and shoes were so perfect, he added.

But since the American woman does shop abroad, and visits his London salons, he came over on a quick trip "to keep up with her. Things change so fast here, don't you know."

"Took His Breath Away."

Hartnell doesn't go to Paris to see the new fashions—he's not allowed in. That goes for New York, too, he said, "and rightly so." But he buys materials in the French capital.

"Six or seven years ago," he confided, "when I came over here, American women took my breath away—they were so uniformly lovely. Now there's not that difference—not that they've slipped; oh, no—but that English women have improved so much in their dress that the gap isn't so noticeable."

Hartnell is a husky, smiling chap who wears red socks, a red tie with white spots and a red-striped shirt under a double-breasted jacket with a broad pin stripe. His chief line is "elegant dress," he said, with sports clothes only a sideline.

Tropic Disease Is Now Found In United States

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

UNLESS we have traveled in tropical countries, probably few of us have ever heard of the disease known as sprue, or seen evidences of its wasting effects upon its victims.

Although described more than a century and a half ago, the condition was little known until French physicians recognized it in what was termed Cochin-China diarrhea. It was not until 1880, however, that a clearly defined, modern account of the disease was published by Sir Patrick Manson. In 1914 Bailey K. Ashford identified a yeastlike fungus—monilia psilosis—as the cause of sprue found in Porto Rico. Our interest in the condition lies in the fact that it is no longer a tropical disease, as many cases have been reported from various parts of the United States.

Disease Symptoms.

The symptoms appear, as a rule, following the rather long continued use of a poorly balanced diet. There are signs of dyspepsia, an excess amount of gas in the intestines, constipation that sometimes alternates with diarrhea, considerable nervousness, depression, fatigue, inability to sleep, and numbness of the limbs. As these symptoms increase the tongue becomes irritated and sores and ulcers frequently develop. There may be a feeling of burning in the esophagus (the tube that carries swallowed food into the stomach).

Recovery depends upon prompt recognition of the disease and fatalities will be rare if treatment is begun before complications set in.

If lacking food elements are restored to the diet recovery occurs in most instances. The feeding of generous quantities of liver, calcium, and vitamins A, B, and D is important. If the condition is severe liver extract may be given intravenously and the diet should be high in proteins and low in fats and carbohydrates.

Dietary Treatment.

A recent case related by C. S. Fitzmorris is that of a woman, age 41, who has never been near the tropics. She has resided practically all her life in an Ohio city. Because of marked weakness, low blood pressure, and considerable patchy browning of the skin a tentative diagnosis of Addison's disease (tuberculosis of the adrenal glands) was made. Soreness of the tongue had developed. Anemia was quite severe and the patient's weight had dropped from 150 to 72 pounds. Examination showed the monilia organisms, which were later grown in the laboratory. The liver, vitamin and dietary treatment was instituted promptly. The diarrhea ceased rather abruptly, soreness of the mucous surfaces disappeared, the patient's appetite became ravenous, and recovery proceeded normally. There was a gain of 111 pounds in weight in a period of 170 days.

Ashford reports that care must be taken not to confuse the condition with pellagra, pernicious anemia, or Addison's disease.

Trick Make-Up Covers Defects Of Star's Face

But she is considered the most striking example of what a make-up artist can do for a girl. With a little judicious attention she becomes a genuine beauty.

Her jaw protrudes and her chin is molded on frankly heroic lines. On the end of her nose is a sort of bulb, like a full-blown mosquito bite. Her lips are thin.

"I'm no oil painting," she said today with a gay, infectious laugh. "But fortunately I know my shortcomings and what to do about them."

What she does is this:

"For her jaw-line she has a strategically placed shadow, spotted at the point where the jaws curve upward under the ears. The result is a tapering effect that creates the illusion of a heart-shaped face. She "highlights" the bridge of her nose with dark make-up to give the effect of a straight line from her eyes to the end of her nose. The "highlight" actually gives her the appearance of having a classic Grecian nose.

More black shadow under that part of the nose dividing the nostrils seems to make the end smaller.

As for those thin lips, she rouges—and the trick is to push the lipstick the barest fraction of an inch farther on the upper lip than on the lower.

"You have to do that for sympathy," she smiled. "Without the rouge a picture of me would fit beautifully in a rogues' gallery."

President's Mother Picks Gown for Ball

NEW YORK, Jan. 27 (AP).—Mrs. Sarah Delano Roosevelt has selected a length of beige antique brocade for a gown she will wear the night of January 30 to the President's birthday ball.

The silk has a faint tinge of peach—the ball's official color—and the President's mother will wear a peach-colored jeweled clip.

The dress will be made in a house where Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt often shops for evening gowns, and will have a filmy lace fichu.

"Just How Much Does a Girl Have to Stand From a Man?" Asks Girl Who Fell in Love Some Months Ago to Find Road to Romance Very Rocky.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Bluntly stated, what I want to know is: "Just how much does a girl have to stand from a man?" I am asking this in all sincerity and there must be lots of other girls wondering the same thing. A few months ago I fell in love. Since then I have received blow after blow, shock after shock, until now I feel as though I had been in a minor automobile accident—not badly hurt, but shaken and dazed.

• • • •

After this enlightening experience, I would really like to know how a girl manages a successful love affair in the event she has the vitality to pull through one. Mine has just started, but I feel that one more jolt and I will be unable to palpitate any longer. Furthermore, it seems my problem is far from being unique. Nearly every girl I know is going or has gone through the same bewildering experience. Some of them just give up; others take it; and a few come through okay. Therefore I intend, with your help, to clear up a thing or two before delving any deeper into the perplexities of romance.

• • • •

It seems that: A man telephones or calls at his convenience (the girl is naturally pleased at any time). If the girl takes the initiative she is trying to "hook" him. A man doesn't really mean to hurt a girl (he was just thoughtless). A girl must never resent any of his moods (didn't he tell her he was "hard to understand")? A girl must never mention marriage (the man becomes so frightened he usually disappears for several weeks).

• • • •

A girl always forgives a man (isn't he asking it out of consideration for her?) It is a good idea to give the man something to worry about (it is the only way to make him stop thinking about himself). A man has three stock answers for the question: "Do you love me?" 1. "Sure" (which is supposed to humor the old girl). 2. "Must we go into all that again?" (this is the easiest way to avoid the issue if she doesn't call bluff). 3. "I don't know" (a good answer because it allows the girl to hope without actually committing himself).

This is a summary of pointers I have picked up in watching my fate unfold. So in view of this cynical information how would you suggest that a girl go about avoiding what is currently knows as "holding the bag?"

Sincerely, MISS AMBASSADOR.

Endurance An Individual Matter.

DEAR MISS AMBASSADOR: A girl doesn't have to stand any more boorishness from men than she chooses to tolerate; or, perhaps I should say, than she invites by unworthy complaisance in the face of inexcusable rudeness. When a girl finds herself in love, so-called, with a man whose treatment of her gives rise to the cynical conclusions stated above, her own standards of self-respect as well as her ideals of masculine desirability are sorely in need of revision.

• • • •

If a girl would avoid holding the bag, as you call it, she might (a) be indisposed, out, previously engaged or blandly indifferent to the addresses of a man who telephones at what strikes him as his convenience; (b) never take overt initiative in seeking his society; (c) never let him know he has the power to hurt her; or better yet, achieve such a healthful social adjustment that she isn't hypersensitive to the actions and reactions of others; (d) set a definite limit on the amount of moodiness she will put up with from any man; and turn thumbs down those who trespass beyond that limit; (e) let the man bring up the subject of marriage, if and when it is brought up.

• • • •

She might (f) when he has committed some offense which necessarily entails forgiveness, let him work hard to earn the same; (g) stop trying to think up petty schemes for giving him reason for worry, and concentrate on keeping him amused, flattered, attentive, interested, pleased with himself and hence with her as the magnifying mirror for his ego, (h) never, never commit the stupid blunder, the wretched tactical error of asking him if he loves her.

If a man loves a girl, he is usually able to contrive some method of getting the idea across. He neither needs nor wants to have such information wheedled out of him. Such a question as you hypothesize is an impertinence, to say the least; and impertinent questions, while best ignored, are usually productive of evasive, if not actually insolent answers.

The Thirteenth Beatitude.

THE GIRL WHO EXPECTS to enjoy success in her love affairs does well to cultivate the attitude of mind described in what has been called the thirteenth beatitude: "Blessed are they who expect nothing, for they shall not be disappointed." Relationships between the sexes are not based on logic, and seldom on the theory of fair play, since "all's fair in love and war," you know. The girl who supposes, because a man shows her some attention, that he is—or about to be—in love with her that he is prepared to listen sympathetically to her troubles, console her when she's blue; constantly dance attention, explain his actions and his absences, is headed for disillusion and heartache. Few men are made that way. When they take a girl out they expect to be amused. They are interested in nobody's troubles but their own. Nor do they consider that a few dinners, concerts, dances, cocktails or other parties a deux paid for out of their own pocket and resulting from their invitation gave a girl grounds for a heart balm suit.

• • • • • • • •

Socially as well as in most other ways this is still a man's world and for every girl who doesn't realize and adapt her actions to this fact, there are innumerable others who do—and they are the ones who stand to steal her beau. Don't expect a man who come courting to act by reason or rote. Improve each opportunity for playing the perfect companion, and he may decide he cannot do without you. Don't ever be bossy, possessive, demanding, nagging, jealous, suspicious or sour.

• • • • • • • •

I believe your short-lived romance is a one-sided affair largely existent in your own imagination; and that your cynical conclusions are the result of confused attempts to rationalize self-inflicted humiliation. I believe the man has given you little reason to suppose mutual love exists; that he suspects you are pursuing him with matrimonial intent and is playing along at a very safe distance, accepting gratuitous favors without inviting or pledging responsibility. It takes two persons deeply and reverently in love with each other to make much headway in clarifying the perplexities of romance; and my advice to you is to chuck your one-sided love affair overboard and make a brand-new start with someone else.

Sausage Good For All Meals; New Recipes

Breakfast Dish Has Many Uses; Can Be Prepared in Various Ways.

By Dorothea Duncan.

D. DUNCAN

AND how will you have your sausage? Or are you still old-fashioned enough to think that sausage must always be served at breakfast as a hot cake accompaniment? Naturally, we aren't criticizing the sausage habit for breakfast, but we are wondering why women have been asleep to the fact all these years that if sausage is a favorite at breakfast, why it isn't a favorite for many other meals.

The sweet succulence of pork sausage meat or links should darken your table more frequently during these cold, crisp days. There is something about just the aroma of a sausage sizzling on the grill or toasting under the broiler that seems to take the ice out of our veins and make the world seem a brighter place in which to live.

You have no idea until you explore the mysteries of sausage cookery just how many delightful recipes are enhanced by the flavor of this sweet, smoky meat. If you can't decide upon the meat course for dinner, the main dish for that Sunday evening supper, a chafing dish special that will please Mary Jane's 16-year-old friends, why not try sausage? You will be surprised how many foods can be complimented by the tang of a bit of sausage. Tart flavors, spicy ones, crisp salads, fruit juices, each one of these seem to have a special affinity to sausage.

Enhances Simpler Dishes.

Even the simplest, most inexpensive dishes may be enhanced by the smallest amount of sausage. Try a few sausage links cut into rounds as a flavoring for your next mess of lentil soup. You will wonder why the thought hadn't occurred to you before.

If you want a quickly prepared main dish that won't cost very much, try sausage cakes and pineapple slices. One pound of sausage meat and one can (No. 2½ size) of pineapple slices will be enough to feed six persons, if they don't all crave seconds. Broil both sausage patties and pineapple slices under the broiler and serve the patties atop the pineapple slices. This is an excellent meat-fruit course for the Sunday breakfast that boasts whole wheat waffles, too.

Dried lima beans baked with cut-up sausage links make an interesting flavor combination. Serve this as the main dish for a wintry evening meal when you want just the slightest suggestion of meat in your menu. You might top the entire casserole of beans with one sausage link for each person if you want a little more of the sausage. Uncover the casserole, in this case, in time for each sausage to brown before removing the beans from the oven.

Adirondack Sausage Platter.

1 pound pork sausage meat
1 pound mushrooms
½ pound cooked wild rice, well seasoned
2½ cups cooked fresh peas
Pimiento
6 whole spiced peaches

Panbroil sausage and mushrooms together. Fill center of platter with hot rice. Arrange sausage and mushrooms around rice. Circle this with a border of peas. Garnish with pimiento strips and spiced peaches. Serves 6.

With this as the main course, you might serve grapefruit and avocado salad with a thin, sharp dressing, orange muffins, creme de menthe, ice cream in meringues and coffee.

Chafing dish suppers have resumed their popularity and there is a sausage dish for this special type of meal, too. The recipe follows:

Broiled Sausage With Welsh Rarebit.

12 pork sausage links
1 cup of ale
1 pound cheese, grated
1 egg
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
Pinch of dry mustard
Dash of red pepper
6 slices of toast

Broil sausage. Place in warm oven. Beat egg. Worcestershire sauce, mustard and pepper together. Heat ale in chafing dish. Add cheese gradually, stirring constantly. When cheese is thoroughly melted, add egg mixture. Stir until well blended. Place two sausages on each piece of toast and cover with rarebit. Serve six.

Other suggested foods for this meal include garlic dill pickles, tomato and cucumber salad with French dressing, mints and coffee.

For an everyday dinner you will like sausage en brochette or sausage with Brussels sprouts and chestnuts. The recipes follow:

Sausages En Brochette.

12 pork sausage links
12 pieces parboiled sweetbreads
12 large mushrooms
Melted butter
Chopped parsley

Place two sausages, two sweetbreads and two mushrooms on each metal skewer. Dip into melted butter. Place under the broiler for about 15 minutes. Sprinkle with chopped parsley. Serve at once. Serves six.

Sausage With Brussels Sprouts and Chestnuts.

1 quart boiled Brussels sprouts
1 cup boiled chestnuts
1-3 cup butter
6 squares corn bread

Make sausage into patties and broil. Saute sprouts and chestnuts in butter. Pour into deep platter. Place sausage patties on cornbread and arrange around sprouts and chestnuts.

Other suggested dishes for this meal include minted grapefruit cup, French endive with Chutney dressing, peppermint ice cream with chocolate sauce and coffee.

Cakes With Butter Frosting Are Popular Evening Dessert

Delicious little butter cakes with creamy butter frosting are not an unusual dessert, but they are always acceptable and may be served alone or accompanied by fruit and cream or a scoop of ice cream.

Simple, Inexpensive Confections Festive Enough for Party Occasions; Can Be Served With Ice Cream or Beverage to Unexpected Caller.

CUP CAKES with delicious butter frosting always make a pleasant evening refreshment and are popular, too, as a dessert whether served with a beverage of fruit or a scoop of ice cream. The small, dainty butter cakes, baked in fancy shapes, and frosted with an enticing icing are festive enough for party occasions, but are simple and inexpensive to make.

They are nice to have on hand when friends telephone that they are dropping in after dinner for a rubber of bridge or after the theater in the evening. The woman who has homemade cake on her pantry shelf need never worry over the matter of what to serve when unexpected callers drop in. Coffee or tea and cup cakes always seem to find favor with the guests.

Spice cakes are always popular, especially with the men, but so are sour cream cakes, chocolate or rum cakes.

Butter Preferred.

Many women prefer to use butter for shortening in these cakes for the added delicate flavor that it gives. Butter improves any food to which it is added and is easily digested. If you want your butter cakes to be light, with a fine even grain and a velvety texture be sure to use the preferred procedure of mixing the batter.

Place the buter in a mixing bowl and with a wooden spoon cream it until it is plastic and a very light yellow color. The sugar is added carefully, about a tablespoon at a time. Continue beating until the mixture is light and fluffy. The mixture should look something like hard sauce, but will not be as thick. Next beat in the egg yolks, and then add a small portion of the flour which has been sifted with the baking powder and salt. Alternate the flour mixture with the milk and flavoring, ending with the flour mixture. Finally, fold in the beaten egg whites, thoroughly combining the ingredients. Turn into well-buttered tins and bake.

It is a good practice to assemble the ingredients and equipment needed in preparaiton before starting to mix cakes. This saves interruption after you begin mixing. The oven should be lighted so the temperature is right for baking. Temperature control is no longer a problem with modern stoves equipped with oven regulators.

Made in 18 Minutes.

Cup cakes can be thoroughly combined in 18 minutes. They require a good deal of beating, a large part of which should be done before the milk and flour are added.

Let the butter stand out of the refrigerator to soften before creaming it for cake or frosting. Frequently in hot weather it is necessary to put it back after it has been creamed, mixed with sugar, egg and the first flour added. Delays up to this point in mixing are not important. However, after the other ingredients are added there should be no interruption.

The temperature in baking allows the cakes to rise to double their bulk and to complete the baking. You may test with a straw or toothpick if you are a beginner at cake making and afraid to rely on the regular method. The modern approved method for testing a cake, however, is even simpler than the old toothpick method. When the cake shrinks slightly from the sides of the pan and is not dented when touched lightly with the finger it is ready to be removed from the oven.

Cool Before Frosting.

Allow cakes to cool before frosting. If butter frosting is to be used for the cakes, cream the butter with a wooden spoon until soft and smooth. Add confectioner's sugar gradually after it has been sifted; add salt and flavoring and spread on with spatula or pastry tube.

Butter frostings may be varied by adding cold coffee, cocoa, melted bitter chocolate, different flavoring extracts or vegetable colorings.

A delicious butter cream frosting is made by boiling one cup of granulated sugar with 1-3 cup of water until it reaches a soft ball stage (about 238 degrees F.). Do not stir while sirup is cooking. The sirup must be just the right thickness. Add hot sirup slowly to two stiffly beaten egg whites, beating until stiff. When cooled add ¾ cup of soft butter, a little at a time, beating frosting continuously until all butter is added. Flavor with one teaspoon vanilla or other extract. Chill well in refrigerator. Spread on cakes with spatula or decorate with pastry tube. This recipe makes a generous amount of frosting. Keep the surplus covered and stored in the refrigerator. It will keep a long time.

Spice Cup Cakes.

¼ cup butter
¾ cup sugar
2 eggs
1 1-3 cups cake flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon allspice
½ cup buttermilk

Cream butter until soft. Add sugar gradually, creaming all the while. Add eggs, unbeaten, one at a time, beating thoroughly after each addition. Sift flour, then measure and resift with baking powder, soda, salt and spices. Add dry ingredients alternately with the buttermilk, starting and ending with the dry ingredients. Drop by teaspoonfuls into well-buttered small muffin tins. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) for 20 minutes, or until the cakes shrink from the sides of the pan. Yield: Three dozen cup cakes.

Butter Frosting (Uncooked).

2 cups confectioner's sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream butter until soft and smooth. Add sugar, salt and vanilla. Spread on cake with spatula or pastry tube.

Coat Hangers Form Useful Ivy Trellis At Kitchen Window

IF the ivy in your kitchen window box is flourishing so rapidly that it will no longer stand up perkily but droops in a heavy-headed fashion give it a little support by providing a trellis.

Here is a trellis that needs no painting. It takes an incredibly short time to make and is simple and effective. Four shiny coat hangers and wire of matching color are the only materials required. If your plant is under or over-sized, fewer or more coat hangers may be used.

The first step is to stretch each coat hanger out perpendicularly by grasping the hook-end and the center of the lower wire, and giving a strong steady pull. Stop pulling when the coat hanger has assumed a diamond shape. Now straighten out each hook. Now lay a hanger down, another and another, one placed above the other, so that the highest point of the second one will reach about one-third of the distance from the top of the first, and the third one the same distance from the top of the second. Then secure all points of contact securely with wire.

The hook ends, now straight pieces of wire should be twisted together to form the stout main stem, leaving a few inches free which will serve to hold the trellis in place.

Cheese Truffles.

For an unusual as well as delicious appetizer for the hors d'oeuvre tray try the following cheese truffles. Drain stuffed olives, pimento filled, and cover each with soft cream cheese; then roll in finely chopped pecan nut meats and place in refrigerator to become thoroughly chilled.

Corned-Beef Hash Tempts All Appetites

Isn't Simply a Useful Improvisation When Guest Arrives.

LET'S see which of the items on our emergency shelf can be made into a tempting dish for all-round family menu use. There is corned-beef hash for one, which in many homes is never used unless some unexpected guest drops in and is convinced that he should stay to enjoy the family dinner.

This tempting concoction of selected potatoes and the finest corned beef blended with exactly the right seasonings should make its appearance more frequently at our tables—for breakfast, luncheon and dinner. It is economical and easy to serve, to be sure, but more than that, it never fails to score a great success.

Corned-Beef Hash, Modern Style.

1 No. 2 can corned-beef hash
3 tablespoons butter
6 eggs, poached
6 slices toast
2 cups medium white sauce.
2 teaspoons mustard
Parsley

Slice corned beef and brown in butter. Corned-beef hash will slice in firm even slices if the can is set in the refrigerator for a few hours previous to using. Place each slice on a piece of toast and top with poached egg. Pour white sauce, to which mustard has been added, over all. Garnish with parsley. Amount serves six.

1 No. 2 can corned-beef hash
2 tablespoons minced onion
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup medium white sauce
1½ teaspoons mustard

Put hash in buttered baking dish. Add onion which has been browned in butter. Pour over this the white sauce to which has been added the mustard. Bake for 20 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.). This amount serves five

After you have tried and approved this item from your emergency stock and find that it is indispensable for everyday menus, you will be curious to see what can be done about other foods that are usually reserved for a time when some unexpected happening finds you preparing a meal with as great haste as possible. If you want a delicious dish that can be prepared in a hurry try deep brown kidney beans treated as follows:

3 tablespoons chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons finely sliced onion
2 tablespoons butter
1 can deep brown kidney beans
Salt
Grated American cheese

Brown pepper and onion in the butter. Add the beans. Heat through. Sprinkle each serving with grated cheese. Amount serves four.

Enough at this time for main dishes, but let's look to desserts. Here are two recipes, one prepared from canned fruit juice and the other from canned fruit.

Pineapple Bavarian Cream.

1 No. 2 can unsweetened pineapple juice
1-3 cup sugar
2 eggs, separated
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon gelatin soaked in ¼ cup pineapple juice
1-3 cup orange juice
Grated rind of 1 orange

Cook pineapple juice (reserving ¼ cup for gelatin), sugar, salt and egg yolks in double boiler for 10 minutes. Remove from fire. Add gelatin softened in the pineapple juice and the orange juice and orange rind. Let sand until it starts to set. Then fold in beaten egg whites. Chill.

Hawaiian Tarts.

1 No. 2½ can sliced pineapple
Pastry
4 egg whites
½ cup sugar
½ cup coconut
Almond extract

Drain the pineapple well. Roll pastry fairly thin. Cut in rounds the same size as the pineapple slices. Bake until golden brown. When cool, put together sandwich fashion with pineapple slices for filling. Beat egg whites stiff and fold in remaining ingredients. Frost tarts on top and sides with this mixture. Place on cookie sheet and return to oven to brown (about 7 minutes at 350 degrees F.). Amount serves eight.

Chicago Opens Investigation In Injury of 54

Elevated Train Derailed; Four Surface Vehicles Figure in Wreck.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—A thorough investigation of an elevated railroad wreck and crashes involving four surface cars which resulted in the injury of 54 persons was ordered late today by the city council's transportation committee.

A group of aldermen was assigned to co-operate with officials of the traction firms and Illinois Commerce Commission engineers in attempting to ascertain the causes of the accidents and to take steps to preclude their recurrence.

Eleven of the 46 passengers hurt in the "El" derailment remained in hospitals. They were cut, bruised and otherwise injured when the Jackson Park express, carrying 150 passengers on a midnight run, left the tracks at a South Side curve. The cars bumped along the ties and tilted at a dangerous angle over the ground 35 feet below. The motorman insisted signals and equipment were functioning perfectly. He was unable to specify the cause of the accident.

Frozen air brakes were blamed for two trolley mishaps today. Five women were hurt and more than 40 riders were shaken when an Archer avenue car rammed the rear end of a Racine avenue car. Three women were seriously injured and 40 persons were jarred when an Ogden avenue trolley collided with another moving in the same direction. Two similar smashups occurred last week shortly after the sub-zero cold turned streets to sheaths of ice.

Midshipman May Get Medal for Saving Boy

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 27 (AP).—Midshipman J. M. Cease, of Lawton, Okla., may be recommended for a life-saving medal for rescue of John McWilliams, 12-year-old skater, from drowning. Cease saved the youth after he had broken through the ice on Spa Creek here Saturday afternoon. He had to crawl on his stomach to the drowning boy and went in beside him when the ice broke.

Naval Academy authorities today were waiting for a full report on the rescue. They said if the facts warranted they would recommend that Cease be awarded a medal of the Treasury Department.

Parkersburg WPA Head May Run for Governor

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Sutton, W. Va., Jan. 27.—Former State Senator A. C. Herold, of Braxton County is expected to run for the Democratic nomination for Governor of West Virginia, and may announce his candidacy in a few days. If the announcement is made, he will resign as head of the WPA labor division in the Parkersburg office.

Ernest L. Bailey, former State road commissioner, has already announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for the governorship.

Mrs. Heckerman Named.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bedford, Pa., Jan. 27.—Judge Harry C. James has named Mrs. Martha Heckerman, wife of Calton Heckerman, of Juliana Heights, to the Bedford Borough school board to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Clarence A. Diehl, who assumed the position of register and recorder of the county on January 6. She will serve until December, 1939.

Mrs. Pitts Is Sued; Bank Asks $19,530

A suit to collect $19,530 from Mrs. Gladys T. Pitts, wife of G. Bryan Pitts, former president of the board of the defunct F. H. Smith Co., was filed yesterday in the circuit court in Frederick, Md., by Cary A. Hardee, receiver of the Federal American National Bank and Trust Co.

This sum, Hardee contended through Attorney B. H. Conn, is due on an assessment against 900 shares of capital stock in the bank, which failed to open after the 1933 bank holiday.

The writ of attachment was ordered placed in the hands of Emory L. Coblentz, former president of the Central Trust Co. Mrs. Pitts sued Coblentz December 26 in an attempt to collect $147,440 on a note which she said Coblentz had given her husband and which had been assigned to her.

Pitts is now serving a term in Lorton Reformatory.

Malcolm Padget Dies At 34 of Indigestion

Malcolm L. Padgett, 34, died suddenly Sunday at the home of his sister, Mrs. Ruby Walker, 1406 Duke street, Alexandria, Va., following an attack of acute indigestion. He is survived by a daughter, Miss Marian Padgett, two sisters, Mrs. Walker and Miss Marian Padgett, and three brothers, Thomas, Aubrey and George Padgett.

The funeral will be held today at 2 p. m. from the Wheatley Funeral Home, Alexandria, and burial will be in Bethel Cemetery also in Alexandria.

Virginia 'Garden Week' To Be April 27–May 2

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Jan. 27.—The Garden Club of Virginia today made public a list of 104 historic old Virginia homes and gardens which will be open to the public during the annual garden week in Virginia, which has been set for April 27 to May 2, inclusive. Many of these are not open to the public at any other time during the year. Receipts will be used for the restoration of publicly-owned historic old gardens in the State.

In order to expedite travel the Garden Club will open a number of headquarters throughout the State during garden week.

Bel Air Constable Quits As Fraud Charge Sequel

Bel Air, Md., Jan. 27 (AP).—The resignation of Constable Virgil Duke was accepted today by the Harford County commissioners. The constable submitted his resignation after a hearing in which he settled a charge of obtaining goods under false pretenses. The charge was dropped after he paid the claim.

The commissioners indicated they would not name a successor. Numerous complaints were made on the number of arrests Duke made.

County Officer Buried; Was Hit-Run Victim

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Jan. 27.—Funeral services were held yesterday near Chatham for James Bryant, a county officer killed early Sunday morning on the Richmond road by a hit-run driver.

Bryant and Holland Thomas, another county officer, had halted a car on the roadside and were questioning the driver when the victim stepped back from the running board into the path of the passing car, the driver of which sped away. Bryant's skull and legs were fractured. He leaves a wife and two children.

You, too, Can Avoid Baldness

IF you become bald, you do so by choice. Baldness is not thrust upon you. It warns you of its approach — you have dandruff; your scalp itches; your hair falls abnormally. You douse your scalp with cure-all concoctions and try hit-or-miss treatments—and almost before you know it your scalp is ready to join a nudist colony.

Choose hair — not baldness. More than a quarter-million other men have found that hair can be retained or regained by the reliable proved Thomas method. Thomas can help you to get rid of your dandruff; stop falling hair; and re-grow hair on the thin and bald spots.

Consult a Thomas expert today. He will examine your scalp without charge or obligation, and tell you frankly just what can be done in your particular case. He knows the symptoms of the 14 local causes of baldness and knows exactly how to overcome them. Remember — scalp examination is free.

By mild ripe tobacco we mean just this—

THEN—each day's picking cured right by the farmer... at the right time and in the right way... no "splotching" or brittleness, but every leaf of good color and flavor.

FINALLY—bought in the open market...re-dried for storage...then packed in wooden hogsheads to age and mellow for two years or more until free from harshness and bitterness.

That's what we mean by mild, ripe tobacco. And that's the kind of tobacco we use to give Chesterfields their milder, better taste.

Hogsheads of leaf tobacco "ageing" for two years in storage warehouses.

Boy Scouts Again Elect Capt. Wells

Julius Garfinckel Among Those Recalled as Vice Presidents.

Award of Silver Beaver Bestowed for Noted Service Here.

Capt. Chester Wells last night was reelected to his fourth consecutive term as president of the District of Columbia Council, Boy Scouts of America. The council met at the Willard Hotel.

The other officers of the council selected were Paul Bartsch, Julius Garfinckel and Samuel Kauffmann, vice presidents; George Hewitt Myers and Ernest H. Daniel, treasurer and assistant treasurer, respectively, and Dr. Camp Stanley, commissioner.

A feature of the annual meeting was the bestowal of the silver beaver award on four Scouters.

Awards Are Listed.

This award, made by the National Boy Scout Council upon recommendation of noteworthy service of exceptional character to boyhood by recognized Scouters, went to the following:

Julius Garfinckel, a member of the executive board of the council since 1924, a vice president since 1925, a member of the council's camping committee who was largely responsible for acquisition of a 50-acre tract at Camp Roosevelt, and a patron of troops in the bestowal of silk American flags in the promotion of patriotism. He is proprietor of Julius Garfinckel & Co.

William Thomas McClosky, District Scout commissioner and acting chairman of the council training committee, a promoter of Camp Roosevelt and an enthusiastic advocate of trained Scout leadership. He is senior pharmacologist of the Food and Drug Administration, Department of Agriculture.

Louis Beecher Grening, veteran scoutmaster of Troop 43, for his devoted service to boyhood over a long period of years. He is a clerk in the Civil Service Commission.

Virgil Edward Howard, scoutmaster of Troop 12, who for five years has maintained one of the most efficient troops of the council. He is employed in the fingerprint department of the Marine Corps' Bureau of Identification.

Members Re-elected.

Henry P. Blair, Harold C. Bryant, Karl W. Corby, George E. Hamilton, Jack Gates, George E. Hamilton, jr., Arthur Hellen Arthur J. May, Walter H. Merrill, L. Corrin Strong, R. A. an Orsdel, Morton H. Wilner and Lester G. Wilson.

Four new members named to the board were the Rev. Arthur P. Wilson, David E. McCoy, William B. Willard and C. B. Smith.

Wilson, who is pastor of the Columbia Heights Christian Church, was guest of honor. He spoke of his Scouting experience under three flags.

During the past year, it was reported by Scout Executive Linn C. Drake, 33 new units of Scout and Cubs were added to the rolls. It was necessary to separate 24 units, leaving a net gain of nine, six of which were Cub Packs. The council on December 31, 1935 included 167 Scout units and 24 Cub Packs, with a total membership of 4,431 boys.

In 1935, 6,654 boys were influenced by the Boy Scout program.

Skinner Death Blamed On 'Unknown' Killers

A verdict that Richard P. Skinner, 53, of 2927 Twenty-sixth street northwest, was shot and killed by a gun "held in the hands of a party or parties unknown" was handed down by a coroner's jury yesterday after an inquest into the slaying.

Skinner was shot to death January 10 by two colored gunmen as in his filling station at Florida avenue and Porter street northeast. he was counting the day's receipts Alfred Williams, colored, 143 Rhode Island avenue northeast, told the jury he was across the street and saw the men open fire when Skinner resisted the holdup. He said he could not identify the men.

'Monopoly' Inventor Meant Game To Advance Ideas of Henry George

MRS. ELIZABETH MAGIE PHILLIPS, head of the Henry George School of Social Science, demonstrates the similarity between a game she invented 32 years ago and present-day "Monopoly."

Law-Breakers Lose Car Tags, Driving Cards

Violations of major traffic regulations brought additional permit suspensions and revocations to a number of Washington motorists yesterday.

Accused of driving while intoxicated, the following drivers' permits were suspended:

In addition to permits, others also lost their license places. They were:

Suspensions and penalties for speeding offenses included:

George Butt, 3523 Brothers place northwest, 40 miles, 30 days; Tracy Herring, 1000 East Capitol street, 45 miles, 30 days; Harper's Arnold, 38 Baylor road, Hyattsville, Md., 44 miles, 30 days; Philip Cristaldi, 1204 North Capitol street northwest, 44 miles, 30 days; Andrew De Sarno, 1327 L street northwest, 44 miles, 30 days; Charles Eslin, 1200 Sixth street northeast, 40 miles, 30 days; Frances Trawley, 3723 Veazey street northwest, 40 miles, 30 days; William Jennings, 1925 Fourteenth street northwest, 40 miles, 30 days; Louis Levy, 1415 D street northeast, 42 miles, 30 days; Carrie Lissett, 3212 Channing street northeast, 40 miles, 30 days; Gilbert Read, 826 Forest Drive, Hyattsville, Md., 46 miles, 30 days; Anthony Cefaratti, 1413 A street southeast, 36 miles, 15 days; Robert Flint, 2426 Irving street northeast, 38 miles, 15 days; John Smith, 918 Eighteenth street northwest, 38 miles, 15 days; Simmons Milloth, 529 Irving street northwest, 36 miles, 15 days; Walter Kell, 4312 Third street northwest, 36 miles, 15 days; Hall Simpson, 907 O street southeast, 38 miles, 15 days; George Holmes, 7308 Georgia avenue northwest, 38 miles, 15 days; James Mallos, 803 Boxboro place northwest, 36 miles, 15 days; John Bateman, 18 Third street southeast, 38 miles, 15 days; Randall Childress, 6513 Eighth street northwest, 38 Shepherd street northwest, 36 miles, 15 days; Raymond Clements, 1212 days; Birch Rakin, 1308 Ashmead place northwest, 36 miles, 15 days; Charles Keyser, 1620 Decatur street northwest, 38 miles, 15 days; Michael Stanko, 1806 O street northwest, 36 miles (second offense), 30 days; Herbert Athey, 206 K street northwest, 60 miles (second offense), revoked; Harold Bloyer, 1923 Sixteenth street northwest, 65 miles, revoked.

There is nothing new under the sun, Mrs. Elizabeth Magie Phillips, headmistress and proprietor of the Henry George School of Social Science, in Clarendon, Va., is convinced, she said yesterday.

She was referring to the fact that some 32 years ago she had invented Monopoly, that rugged individualistic game of high finance which has become the current after-dinner rage.

Mrs. Phillips originally intended her game to popularize the single-tax principles of Henry George. Ironically, its present success is due, not to this moral but to its opposite, the competitive instincts of "back-to-normalcy" America.

She had no visions of the entertainment her brain child some day would bring to a recreation-seeking world. The gray little lady, now in her sixties, first conceived the idea of Monopoly back in 1904, when she obtained a patent for the granddaddy of the current game hit. Then it was known as "Landlord."

"I conceived the game of Landlord to interest people in the single-tax plan of the great economist, Henry George," said Mrs. Phillips yesterday.

She is a disciple of the great single-taxer of the nineteenth century, and in her original game the system of taxation of George was the basic principle.

Traces of Mrs. Phillips' first lesson still linger in Monopoly. Eventually the game winds up with one player holding all the "money" and "property," and Mrs. Phillips says this is exactly what happens in real life under the present system.

The last variation of the early game "Landlord," which was called "The Landlord's Game," was patented by Mrs. Phillips in 1924, and the patent was No. 1,509,312. That number is still maintained on games of modern Monopoly.

Some time ago a copy of "The Landlord's Game" fell into the hands of Charles B. Darrow, a heating engineer of Philadelphia, who improved it, and eventually Parker Bros., of Salem, Mass., bought the game.

Mrs. Phillips then sold her patent rights to the company for $500. It is understood she receives no royalties from it at all.

As the game takes the Nation by storm, Mrs. Phillips is busy on a new game for Parker Bros. Its nature is still undivulged, but the big firm sees in it a sure success.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Phillips, in her lighter moments, sits in her pleasant house in Clarendon, now and again playing the game that originally was her brain child—Monopoly.

Citizens' Group Attacks Bill To Dry Up D.C.

The Midcity Citizens Association last night described the proposed Guyer bill to return prohibition to the District as "ridiculous." The group felt that action to dry up Washington was untimely as repeal had not yet been given a chance to prove its merits.

A proposal by the director of traffic to increase the fine and jail sentence of convicted to $500 or six months in jail or both was opposed. Members felt juries would be reluctant to convict alleged speeders if the law imposed too strict penalties.

Another proposal in the House, a bill to permit the trial of Congressmen charged with criminal or civil violations in Washington in their own Congressional district also was opposed.

"It is a common opinion this proposed bill was introduced because of the apprehension of a certain member of Congress who played annoying pranks upon peaceful tenants of an apartment house, which the average citizen, in a balanced and sane frame of mind, would not think of perpetrating." The resolution also stated the proposed bill was an unfair and unwarranted reflection on the judges of the District, as well as of the Federal courts.

Other business of the body included approval of a proposed bill to give the District a delegate in the House of Representatives with the power of debate, but no voting privilege. A resolution urging the re-establishment of the old Second Precinct also was adopted.

Bases Differ For Reducing Electric Rate

Pepco Engineer Offers Plan Varying From P. U. C. Expert.

A wide divergence of opinion over the proper application of a formula for determining the rate base upon which consumer electric rates for this year are to be fixed, developed yesterday at a hearing before the Public Utilities Commission.

Max C. Mason, survey engineer for the company, suggested that the rate base might be reduced by $1,906,398.

Andrew Sangster, witness for the commission, had suggested last week that the rate base might be reduced by $3,289,000.

Had their fromula been properly applied in the past five years, A. G. Neal, vice president and general manager of the Potomac Electric Power Company, testified, the consumers would have paid an additional $164,214 in electric bills.

Commission accountants have estimated that at least $84,583, or half of the excess profits of the company over the 7 per cent return allowed under the sliding scale rate plan, will be cut from electric bills this year.

Should the commission decide that there should be a substantial reduction in the rate base because of a recalculation of the value of properties retired in the past 10 years, a greater reduction in consumers bills is in prospect.

"The company does not want earnings to which it is not entitled," said William McClellan, president of the Pepco, in a statement to the commission.

In the past year, he said, there has been a discussion of "write-offs" in the rate base, but decission has been deferred until the current rate hearing is over.

Study Previously Asked.

The commission requested the power company a year ago to make a study of the items in the rate base of December 31, 1934 and which have since been retired.

Computations made by Sangster and Mason, he said, have not been passed on by the board of directors of the company but they have been considered as "throwing light" on the values to be given retired properties under reconsideration of the rate base.

The value given the company in 1924, he said, is not a valuation in the sense that the word is used in formal valution findings but iat is in the "nture" of a formal valuation.

The difference in the amounts suggested by Sngster and Mason as possible reductions in the rate base, it was explained, rests in the fact that Sangster applied his calculation to overheads, while Mason did not.

Youth Here With Plea For Parents in Siberia

Tells of Horrors He Saw in Making Way to U. S. Freedom.

Paul Voronaeff, young Russian evangelist, came to Washington yesterday to paint a dark word-picture of the persecution to which his father ad other clergymen have been subjected in the Soviet Russia.

The purpose of his visit here, Voronaeff said, is to lecture and eto appeal to members of Congress to help him rescue his parents, who now are exiled in a Siberian concentration camp because they preached the Word of God. He will describe their plight tonight at 8 o'clock at the Foundry M. E. Church.

The Voronaeff family, parents and five children, is pathetically scattered. That this is so is due to the evangelical zeal of the father, the Rev. John E. Voronaueff, once president of a union known as the "Christians of the Evangelical Faith."

Came to U. S. in 1911.

The Rev. Voronaeff, his wife and Paul came to the United States from Russia in 1911. At that time Paul was 6 months old. In this country, two other children were born—Alexander and John, jr.

In 1921 the clergyman-father went back to Russia with hsi family to try to stem the atheistic tide in the new republic. He carried on his missionary work for nine years. according to Paul, but in 1930 he and 10,000 of his fellow evangelists were arrested and exiled to Siberia. Three years later Mrs. Voronaeff also was banished from Odessa.

Two other children had been born, Timothy and Hope, but according to Paul, the mother was torn from them by the Soviet police.

The American Red Cross, working through the Russian agents at Geneva, managed to send Alexander and John, jr., the American-born children, to the United States. They raised $1,500 through religious organizations to bring Paul and Timothy and Hope to this country.

Tells of Mass Deaths.

Paul said yesterday that the money was, in effect a "ransom."

"I was arrested several times," Paul said, "because I was the son of a Christian minister, and forced to work in Siberia. In January, 1933, I was forced to work 14 hours a day burying the corpses of women and children who perished from starvation. With three other fellow Christians, I dug a common grave for 398 bodies."

At times, he saids he was on the verge of starvation.

"I was chewing my leather belt," he said, "having no bread, and digging up roots and weeds in the fields, boiling them into a mash to eat. Sometimes I used the bark of trees for food."

His only thought now, Paul said, is to raise enough money and obtain sufficient influence to "ransom" his parents and reunite them with the children in this country.

And some day, he said, he hopes Russia will be made safe for ministers of the Gospel. When that day arrives, he said, he plans to go back to Russia and carry on the work which his father started.

Gen. Coleman New Governor Of Army Home

Maj. Gen. Frederick W. Coleman, chief of finance of the Army, was named yesterday by Secretary of War Dern as governor of the Soldiers Home for a term of three years, beginning May 1.

Gen. Coleman will succeed Maj. Gen. H. P. McCain, retired, former adjutant general of the Army, who is now completing his second three-year term as governor of the home. On the completion of his term of office as chief of finance in April, Gen. Coleman will retire from the active military service.

In retiring from active duty, Gen. Coleman will end a long and distinguished military career of more than 37 years. A native of Baltimore, Md., he is 57 years of age.

Gen. Coleman entered the Army in 1898 as a second lieutenant of Infantry. He reached the rank of colonel in 1921. On April 23, 1932 he was appointed chief of finance with the rank of major general.

During the World War Gen. Coleman served with the Ninety-first Division, participating in the Ypres-Lys and Meuse-Argonne offensives and serving also in the Lorraine defensive. He was twice cited for gallantry in action and holds the Distinguished Service Medal.

Citizens Advocate Judge's Renaming

Reappointment of Police Court Judge Gus A. Schuldt was urged last night by the North Capitol Citizens Association.

The association opposed the suggestion that the Tuberculosis Hospital at Thirteenth and Upshur streets be abandoned. The committee on streets, sidewalks and lights was directed to co-operate with the Mcinley High School Parent-Teacher Association in its efforts to correct a situation on the east side of the school, where the terrace has crumbled and caused a reaining wall to bulge.

Thomas Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, spoke at the meeting. He recommended that the present complicated traffic regulations be supplanted with a concise code rigidly neforced. He also suggested that traffic officers now doing office work be placed on the street ad their places be taken by civilian clerks.

It was announced that a card party would be held in the Langley Junior High School February 19 for the benefit of the Property Owners Association.

Sen. King Criticized

Miss Marguerite Woolley, of the League of Woman Voters, criticized the opposition of Senator William H. King to the recently introduced amendment to the District Juvenile Court act when she spoke last night at the meeting of the Georgetown Citizens Association.

The speaker, who quoted Senator King as saying that the amendment would promote rather than lessen delinquency, said that he was obviously not aware that similar legislation had been in effect for a long period in his State, Utah.

The changes would provide a chancery court for the trial of juveniles rather than the existing criminal court and increase the age limit of juveniles from 16 to 18 years.

Ruth Stauffer Is Awarded English Post

McKinley Teacher Wins Department Without Opposition.

Ballou Cites Congestion, Urges Three New Structures.

Appointment of Miss Ruth M. Stauffer as head of the English department in the Capital's white senior and junior high schools was approved yesterday by the Board of Education. Now teaching at McKinley High, she will assume her new post at the beginning of the second semester next week, succeeding Miss Sarah Simons, who retires.

Holding a special meeting to act on this and four other appointments and to hear further outlining of the proposed five-year building plan by Superintendent Frank W. Ballou, the board took under consideration his recommendation that the central administration building be razed and replaced by a new structure, that new homes be built for Wilson and Miner Teachers Colleges and that a new senior-junior high school be erected in the Manor Park section.

Approval of Miss Stauffer, veteran of more than 30 years in the local school system, was voted without debate. Her name was submitted by Chairman Robert A. Maurer, of the personnel committee.

Five Applicants.

There were five applicants for the $3,300-a-year post, three from within the system and two from outside, Dr. Ballou said, adding Miss Stauffer did not seek the job but was herself sought out by the superintendent. She lives at 3301 Jocelyn street northwest.

Other appointments approved yesterday, all Wilson Teachers College personnel:

Miss R. L. Smith, teacher at Cranch School, primary critic teacher at Wilson.

Mrs. R. K. Webb, promoted from sixth grade teacher at Hardy School to critic teacher at Wilson.

W. W. Cruze, assistant professor, permanent. Formerly on probationary status.

Miss E. M. Andrews, promoted from critic teacher to assistant in education.

Dr. Ballou submitted detailed data pertaining to policies followed in naming administrative and supervisory officers. Included was a list giving names of all persons chosen for such ranking posts between July 1, 1920, and January 1 of this year. It revealed that of 214 such appointments, 191 have come from within the Washington school system and 23 from outside.

He emphasized the need of an administration building sufficiently large to house all of his assistants, most of whom at present are quartered in scattered structures. Remodeling of the old Franklin Building, which has been school headquarters for years, would not be expedient, in the opinion of Dr. Ballou, who recommended a new home be erected at the present site at Thirteenth and K streets northwest.

Congestion likewise is a problem at both Wilson (white) and Miner (colored) teachers colleges, said Dr. Ballou in urging that both be moved and installed in new buildings. He suggested as a side for Wilson the grounds at Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest, now occupied by the Tuberculosis Hospital.

According to present plans, the hospital is to be abandoned when the municipal sanitarium for adults at Glenn Dale, Md., is ready for occupancy.

The site, Dr. Ballou said, would be large enough not only for the teachers institution, but also for the proposed new plant of the Dennison Vocational School. He made no recommendations as to another location for Miner Teachers College.

Construction of a combined senior and junior high school in the Manor Park area, adoining Brightwood and Takoma Park, also was urged by the superintendent. So acute is the space situation in junior and senior high schools, particularly the former, in the northwest section that a new building such as he proposes would be filled to capacity from the very beginning, he declared.

Punishment Treads on Heels of Excuses on 'Gloomy Monday' In District Traffic Court, The Post Investigator Finds

(Editor's note: In an effort to determine the answer to Washington's present traffic problem, with its mounting toll of accidents, The Post has assigned a reporter to learn the reason behind violations of traffic regulations. A reporter, accompanied by an official of the Police Traffic Division, has been cruising in a police car. To vary his activities, he visited Traffic Court again yesterday. It is The Post's desire merely to learn "the reason why" of violations. This is the seventeenth in a series of stories.)

By Howard F. Wentworth.

"Gloomy Monday"—the day Washington motorists pay and pay for week-end traffic lawlessness.

It's the day of days in Traffic Court. It's a gloomy day for all concerned. Court attaches are burdened with extra work. The judge is burdened with tangled problems which must be weighed carefully merore a penalty is inflicted. And te poor (?) motorist is burdened with long, tiresome waits and a deep resentment at this "outrageous" treatment. (The ultimate price, payable in fines or jail sentences, wasn't given a thought before.)

But it's also the day of days to hear varied and incredible "reasons why" behind violations of the law. In attempting to squirm "out for under," theaccused driver says and does anything to avoid punishment.

Yesterday morning we again "listened in" on Judge Gus A. Schuldt's court. We deferred our daily cruise and learned a few new reasons why "stop" signs are passed, why red lights are "jumped" and why speeders speed.

F. F. V. Is 'Fast-Flying Virginian,' Says Judge

A Virginia motorist appeared in Traffic Court yesterday, accused of speeding. A policeman testified he was driving his car at 32 miles an hour on a downtown street.

"You must be one of those F. F. V.'s," said Judge Gus A. Schuldt.

"No, Your Honor, I'm afraid I can't claim that distinction," was the reply.

"Nevertheless, you are an F. F. V.," said the judge. "Do you know what that means?"

"Certainly—First Families of Virginia."

"You are wrong. It means 'Fast Flying Virginians,'" retorted Judge Schuldt.

The courtroom was jammed. (It most always is.) There was the same tense atmosphere, the same worried looks.

Soon after we entered, Judge Schuldt called an unusual case—a case involving a vicious, heedless type of violator.

It will be recalled that three persons were killed early Sunday in an accident near the south end of Highway Bridge. The man who stood before Judge Schuldt was charged with speeding. Moreover, it was charged that he sped past this accident scene (while a large crowd stood beside the wrecked car) and careened onto the bridge.

A policeman gave chase. The offending driver was paced at a rate of 55 miles an hour through Potomac Park. He was stopped near Fourteenth street southwest. Here's what he said in court:

"I knew I was going too fast, but I didn't know just how fast."

"Do you know that several innocent persons standing at that accident scene could have been killed by your negligence?" he was asked.

His answer was a shrug of the shoulders ad a few mumbled words. He admitted he knew the speed limit was 22 miles an hour on the bridge and in Potomac Park. Judge Schuldt fined this man $25. He also faces the loss of his driver's permit.

Another motorist who was arrested on Highway Bridge attempted to explain his speeding. He, the policeman said, was traveling at 36 miles an hour.

"I made a mistake—I passed a police car," said this driver. "But," he added, "no one ever travels within the speed limit on that bridge."

He seemed to feel that this fact excused him. He was fined $10.

A very honest motorist was the next to appear. He was accused of speeding on Sherman avenue northwest.

"I have no excuse whatever," he said.

"Nine dollars," said the judge.

And the next was a woman driver. She was charged with passing a red light at Connecticut avenue and Macomb street northwest. She said:

"I didn't see the light—I was looking the other way."

By passing the light, it was testified, she nearly caused an accident when other cars came to sudden halts. But, she was sure her act had nothing to do with Washington's traffic problem.

"I didn't hit anything, did I?" she smiled.

Another motorist was accused of driving on an expired permit. He said he "thought it had just expired." Records showed it had been void for more than two years.

Then there was an automobile salesman. He had "no idea" he was speeding at 40 miles an hour on Constitution avenue. He said he was demonstrating a new car to a prospective buyer. He was arrested at 12:45 a. m.

"Don't tell me you were demonstrating at that hour in the morning $15," said the judge.

The next motorist pleaded guilty to speeding at 38 miles an hour on downtown Seventh street.

"But I thought I was only doing 30," was his excuse. And in the next breath he told Judge Schuldt that he knew the speed limit was 22.

The "reason why" came thick and fast—and so did the penalties.

Good Morning

Such reductions as those in our Clearance Sales would be appreciated in any city in the country. They are being especially appreciated in Washington where everybody seems to understand so well the future trend of clothing prices. An Engrossing Stage Play Loses a Little of Its Grip by Over-Exposure as Film

'Ceiling Zero' Is Victim of Its Own Candor

By Nelson B. Bell.

There are times when the screen by its very comprehensiveness of scene and action defeats its own purpose.

I should say that one of them has occurred in the translation of Frank Wead's engrossing drama of "Ceiling Zero" from the living stage into terms of celluloid.

The picture, previewed by the drama desks and a few air-minded observers yesterday afternoon in the Warner Brothers' private projection room in the Earle Theater Building, reveals too much of the drama that was enacted only by implication when the stage play had its premiere in the National Theater, with Osgood Perkins and John Littel in the principal roles.

The result is the almost complete destruction of that tremendous measure of suspense that characterized the second act of the play on the stage.

With Mr. Perkins tinkering with his recording gadgets in the bleak Newark airport and his pilots reporting only through radio loudspeakers and making known their grevious plights under a zero ceiling from a long and invisible distance, Commander Wead's play on the stage took on impressive proportions as deft and utterly devastating piece of suspenseful playwriting.

When we go aloft with the pilot, headed for his unexpected doom, hear both ends of those radio conversations, see the workings of the instrument boards of both plane and airport station, witness the pea-soup thickness of the fog that is enveloping the sky and earth and otherwise are privileged to glimpse every ramification of plot and the inferential importance of every scene, the bottom rather drops out of those dramaturgic elements that spelled such enormous suspense on the boards.

It makes too assertively and persistently visible those subtle qualities of drama that might so much better be suggested than exposed to the naked eye.

This is not by any means to write off "Ceiling Zero" in its film form as a carelessly or haphazardly made strip of gelatin. It adheres with extraordinary tenacity to the lines, episodes and tempo of the original.

There has been no appreciable sacrifice of any of the potential qualities of stirring drama possessed by the Wead play when it first was shown at the National. My complaint is that the whole business has been too completely and painstakingly visualized for its own good.

Differences of Method.

There are, of course, vast differences between the technique and methods of Pat O'Brien and Jimmy Cagney and those of Osgood Perkins and John Littel. Mr. O'Brien, a comparatively recent Washington visitor at the Earle, it will be recalled, frequently shouts when Mr. Perkins resorted to more subdued devices, and Mr. Cagney, somehow, despite his customary dynamics, seems to lack what might be termed the "bounce" of Mr. Littel's memorable performance in the role of "Dizzy" Davis, the war-time aviator, who never could bring himself to take commercial aviation with the seriousness which its rules and regulations demand.

I am told by airmen who attended yesterday's preview that "Ceiling Zero," in its new manifestation, makes no technical blunders. This is a verdict which I am inclined to take at face value. The picture in its flying and mechanical aspects seemed to these eyes to be wholly authentic.

Youngsters Worth Watching.

June Travis and Isabel Jewell contribute feminine performances to this excellent acting ensemble that will be especially effective in the eyes of those who did not see the stage play. They would be good under any circumstances, but will be better to those who do not remember the heart-wringing pathos of the original performances.

There will be points of excellence on the screen at the Earle beginning Friday that did not assert themselves yesterday.

It was a censored print from the nearby precincts of Maryland that we viewed in the projection room yesterday afternoon. Maryland's view of propriety is such as to deprive native motion picture viewers of much that is innocently amusing of which the District is able to avail itself.

Some of the laughs, unfortunately, were left out of yesterday's print.

"The High Road," Frederic Lonsdale's popular comedy of English society will be the next production of the Drama Guild of Washington. Tryouts for the play will be held on Thursday and Friday of this week at 8 p. m., in Corcoran Hall, George Washington University. Sylvia Lane, who assisted Dr. DeWitt Croissant in the preparation of "Tobias and the Angel," the last Guild production, will direct the play. Dorothy Croissant will serve in the capacity of production manager. "The High Road" will be publicly presented early in March.

With Katherine De Mille, daughter of the famous director producer, or vice versa, and Kitty Carlisle about to leave the Capital, the roster of visiting film stars will be kept up by the arrival of both Elissa Landi and Ginger Rogers.

Miss Landi already is at the Shoreham, having arrived last night with her father, Count Charles Zanardi-Landi, for an indefinite stay. Miss Landi has been in the East since the comparatively recent death of her mother. There are rumors no end, linking her name with that of J. F. T. O'Connor, comptroller of the currency.

There is an old legend which has something to do with "where there is so much smoke, etc."

On Thursday of this week Ginger Rogers, costar with Fred Astaire in all the pictures that have brought them both renown, beginning with "Flying Down to Rio," will be in town to appear, in turn, at each of the six prominent hotels staging the series of President's Birthday Balls.

She will arrive sufficiently early in the day to be greeted by the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the press and other invited guests at a modest levee.

Buck Here in Person.

A slightly static phone call from Manager Hardie Meakin of the RKO-Keith Theater makes known that Frank Buck, the intrepid jungle adventurer who "brings 'em back alive," will appear in person on the stage of the Fifteenth street house on Friday and Saturday of this week as a special added attraction with first public projections in the Capital of his latest picture, "Fangs and Claws."

There has been much dickering over this engagement. First, Mr. Buck was discoverable and could be induced to appear here; then Mr. Buck wasn't and couldn't be!

Now the thing is definitely determined. Mr. Buck will be here for the first two days of his picture's run and will appear on those days at every scheduled presentation of the feature.

Frank Buck is easily foremost among the "animal men" of the films, even surpassing in the frequency and exciting quality of his filming such veterans of the wild spots of the earth as Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson.

However, the gentler aspects of the drama and the theater are not unknown to this world traveler. He was at one time the husband of that veteran and distinguished critic of the drama in Chicago, Amy Leslie.

Personally, I should rather be the husband of a drama critic than the barehanded captor of a cobra or a tiger!

But then, as the saying goes, that is what makes horse racing!

Arriving in the National Capital as a distinguished harbinger of the approach of William Gillette in his highly lauded revival of Austin Strong's comedy of "Three Wise Fools," Mr. Clayton Hamilton yesterday at luncheon revealed that Mary Rogers, daughter of the late Will Rogers, definitely is out of the cast of the play.

The strain imposed by public curiosity, the constant reminder of the tragic death of her father and the vicissitudes of learning and playing a new part occasioned a nervous crisis that called for an immediate cessation of professional duties and a long rest.

Miss Rogers' part is reported to be charmingly and efficiently filled and Mr. Gillett's performance to suggest an actor in the prime of his fifties, instead of a veteran player who is an octogenarian.

Mr. Hamilton viewed Cornelia Otis Skinner's "Manison on the Hudson" for the first time in the National Theater last night, and will remain here until next Monday—a genial, scholarly and richly endowed gentleman of the theater.

Dots and Dashes.

The Home Theater, one of the Warner Brothers residential houses in Northeast Washington, recently has undergone complete refurbishing, renovation and redecoration . . . It is now one of the handsomest, even if not the largest, of the local Warner chain . . . Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, who scored so decisively in the film version of Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta," are scheduled to follow Eddie Cantor in "Strike Me Pink" at Loew's Palace Theater . . . "Strike Me Pink" is the Cantor picture known "in work" as "Shoot the Chutes" . . . The new MacDonald-Eddy vehicle is "Rose Marie"—first feature?length musical to have been filmed entirely in the open . . . Emile Boreo, as was reported here Saturday morning, almost was done in by a bad cold and attack of laryngitis following his last performance Friday night . . . Dr. Frank T. Shyne, that eminent neck-twister, spine-rattler and first aid to artists in distress, had him practically as fit as a fiddle for Saturday morning's first performance . . . The good doctor has rendered similar service for Walter Hampden, Edmund Lowe, Charles "Buddy" Rogers and so many others of note that it is needless to try to catalogue them all here . . . Toby Wing, headlining at Loew's Fox this week, is the daughter of an officer bearing the rank of major in the United States Army . . . Sixteen of the shapely chorines opening on the Fox stage with the "Broadway's Cabaret Revue" unit on Friday will participate in a spelling bee, of all things, over Station WMAL a week from tomorrow night . . . "Exclusive Story," a tense drama dealing with the numbers racket, will be screened for the drama desks today at 1:30 in the private projection room of the Fox Film Exchange . . . It was written by Martin Mooney, who subsequently did a 30-day jail sentence for refusing to disclose the sources of his information.

Hope-Springs-Eternal Note.

Hope there is something in the film that will serve as a tip-off to a good number combination!

MARY PICKFORD, who owns her own film company, is trying to get Paramount to give her the role of "The Old Maid" when they make the flicker of that title . . . At a recent party, Douglas Fairbanks tried to be very attentive to Mary but she was merely polite to him . . . B. P. Schulberg and Sylvia Sidney have been out together in public . . . Clifton Webb, who got a release from his Metro contract, received more money for not making a picture than Fred Astaire received for making "The Divorcee" . . . Benita Hume's favorite escort is Ronald Colman . . . Sam Goldwyn, Chico Marx and Irving Thalberg wanted to play bridge and kept phoning for a fourth party. Chico said to Goldwyn: "Between the people you don't talk to and the people who don't talk to you, we can't get a fourth."

Irving Berlin and Fred Astaire will introduce the music of their new flicker, "Follow the Fleet," on the Magic Key radio program on February 9 . . . Margot Grahame may be Club Trocadering with Johnny Green, but she is also planning a reconciliation with her husband, Francis Lister . . . Director John Ford has completed shooting "Shark Island," and last week, merely visiting the Fox-Twentieth Century Studio, he saw a number of Confederate soldiers marching toward a sound stage . . . Ford stopped one of the soldiers he knew and asked what was going on . . . They're going to have Gen. Lee surrender in 'Shark Island,' that picture you just finished making," the soldier replied . . . Charlie Chaplin's flicker, "Modern Times," has been ready for release but Chaplin postponed the opening date to give Paulette Goddard more time to buy new gowns for her New York visit . . . The marquee of a local theater reads: "The Man Who Broke the Bank"—"Bank Night."

One of That Mansion's Occupants

Although it is a dramatic sequence in which she is the only visible player, Cornelia Otis Skinner in peopling the cast of her "Mansion on the Hudson," which opened her week's engagement in the National Theater last night, by a clever combination of writing, acting and imagination contrives to create in the mind's eye a complete gallery of characters. "Mansion on the Hudson" is a story of several generations of an old and aristocratic family that falls on evil days. Miss Skinner has imbued it with an illusory quality that is unique in the modern theater. She is shown in this photograph as Sally, otherwise Mrs. Stanley Howland, jr. The time would be scene two of her remarkable solo-drama.

Miss Skinner Renews Claim To Greatness

By Nelson B. Bell.

"MANSION ON THE HUDSON," Cornelia Otis Skinner presents her dramatic play, written for a single actress, preceded by three original monologues: "Christmas Morning," "Luxury Shop" and "Home Work," the last named by request. At the National Theater.

Another view of Miss Cornelia Otis Skinner's "Mansion on the Hudson," on the stage of the National Theater last night, served only to add the weight of further evidence to a firm conviction that here is a remarkable piece of creative writing that affords a brilliantly gifted young artiste an opportunity to limn six strikingly contrasted character studies in the formation of a drama that is completely peopled, although enacted by only one actress.

It has been set forth in this column in seasons prior to the present that "Mansion on the Hudson" relates, through the versatile talents of a single player, the whole story of the gradual disintegration of an aristocratic family and a pretentious estate, spanning the course of half a century.

The characters of the family of Howland, who gradually are submerged by the political and financial emergence of the Kellys as neighborhood notables, are firmly established in the first incidents of the dramatic recital and continue with unabated interest until the last disaster has befallen a once-proud name.

Depicts Wide Gallery.

In making vivid this strangely contrived tale of crumbling fortunes and changing times, Miss Skinner portrays, in turn, the first Mrs. Stanley Howland, chatelaine of the handsomely wooded estate of Tall Trees; Sally, Mrs. Howland, jr., whose likeness appears on this page today; Carrie Howland, a middle-aged and bitter spinster; Mrs. Joseph Kelly, flashy matron of the house of social and financial climbers; Tony's wife, the Italian spouse of the "spaghetti joint" proprietor, who comes to wealth by the fluid and golden floods of bootlegging, and a young society woman who is present at the final catastrophe that overtakes the youth whose personal misfortune marks the climax of the first episode of the "play."

This is a prodigious task that Miss Skinner has set for herself in the comprehensive disclosure not only of events covering 50 years, but in the delicate, and sometimes indelicate, shading of character.

It always has seemed to me that Miss Skinner in this particular example of her "dramatic sequences" is happiest in her depiction of Mrs. Stanley Howland, Sally, and Mrs. Joseph Kelly. These are vignettes that stand out with the clean-cut clarity of finely executed cameos.

The superior merits of her single-actress plays are no less the product of her originality as a writer than they are of her splendid gifts as an actress.

When she made the decision to hew an individual and distinctive niche for her unique artistry in the modern theater, that institution lost an interpretative artiste whose endowments would have brought high renown to conventional and time-honored drama.

Preceded by Sketches.

"Mansion on the Hudson" last evening was preceded by three of Miss Skinner's inimitable short monologues—"Christmas Morning," "Luxury Shop" and "Home Work." The first two I do not remember having seen before and, as between them, I rank "Christmas Morning" the more intimate, truer and better.

Since its last performance here, unless memory is playing strange pranks, "Home Work" has undergone rather drastic revision. It still is one of the most human and most pungent things its creator has to offer.

Last night's program will be repeated tonight and Saturday night and at the Wednesday and Saturday matinees. On Wednesday and Thursday evenings, the major feature of Miss Skinner's bill will be "The Wives of Henry VIII," a diversified and colorful offering, and on Friday night the piece de resistance of the bill will be "The Loves of Charles II."

Each program will be augmented by a group of the shorter sketches that brought their star her first, but not greatest, renown.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation presents the Roth String Quartet of Budapest at the Library of Congress Monday night in the second of five concerts. Program: Quartet No. 1 Op. 7 (Bela Bartok), Quartet in E (Douglas Moore), Quartet in F minor, Op. 20, No. 5 Franz Josef Haydn).

Despite the best of intentions toward Bela Bartok, I have never found his first quartet engrossing from start to finish. The lento movement with which it opens, as long as two ordinary quadrants, prolongs an elegiac mood to the point of monotony and tires the attention, while the racial characters of the themes emerges somewhat confusedly from the harmonic maze. Moreover, the writing seems to be deliberately subversive instead of spontaneously idiomatic.

In the allegretto, where artificiality gives ground before an emotional motivation, the music has a measure of attractiveness. There is humor here after the violoncello has ended its grave, admonitory monologue and the companion strings break into mocking jollity. This is the strongest movement in the work, because the ideas are sharply defined with less affectation of oddity. In the concluding allegro, mannerisms once more cloud the issue.

Receiving its premiere at the hands of Feri Roth, Jeno Antal, Ferencz Molnar and Janos Scholz to whom it is dedicated, Douglas Moore's quartet proved to be an engaging composition with a personality. Its traits are not readily identifiable in the opening allegro, which appears at the first hearing to be a fusion of influences, possibly of Faure and Bloch.

But its individuality comes to the fore in the allegro giusto, unmistakeably American in connotations. A marching theme of mock pomposity gives way to a rollicking country dance, which suggests in its spirit some good old break-down, such as "Money Musk." It has a lively humor, infectious and unrestrained. The andante cantabile one suspects to be a bit sardonic in its treatment of a sentimental theme, as though a popular song of the 'eighties has been harmonically travestied.

The concluding allegro continues to hold a folk flavor in its modernistic waywardness. Throughout the quartet, the writing is pungent and provocative. Mr. Moore was present to hear his opus, and the audience greeted him with an applausive encomium.

The Haydn quartet, a part of the composer's amazing output during his fortunate days at Esterhaz, is a work which may be considered prophetic if one is in the vein for catching likenesses in music. From that point of view, one can imagine Mozart in the allegro moderato, Brahms in the sombre menuetto, and Schubert in the adagio.

Kansas State Society Holds Dance Tomorrow

The Kansas State Society will hold its annual banquet and dance tomorrow night at the Mayflower Hotel in commemoration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the entrance of that State into the Union.

Among those who have been invited to join the receiving line are the State's two Senators, Arthur Capper and George McGill, and Mrs. McGill, former Vice President Charles G. Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Gann, Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry Woodring, and the Kansas members of the House and their wives. The banquet will be followed by dancing.

Music Tonight Set to Honor Bailey Alart

Program Will Be Held in Central High; Funds to Buy Scores.

In tribute to the memory of the late Bailey F. Alart, conductor of the Community Center Civic Symphony Orchestra, a program of music, dance and drama will be presented tonight in Central High School auditorium. Proceeds will be turned over to a fund for the purchase of a valuable library of scores from the Alart estate. The use of this library had been generously accorded by Mr. Alart, who also had given his services as conductor without compensation. The orchestra will be unable to continue its work without the library.

Participating tonight will be the Civic Symphony Orchestra, directed by Samuel Page Ford; the Lisa Gardiner Dancers, assisted by Mikhail Nikolov; the Schubert Singers, directed by Mrs. Chester Adair, and three members of the Columbia Players.

The orchestral numbers will be: Overture, "If I Were King" (Adam), "Sylvan Sketches (Helm), "Marche Heroique" (Saint-Saens), "In the Garden" from "Rustic Wedding" symphony (Goldmark), selections from "The Little Modiste" (Alart).

The Schubert Singers will be heard in "Sea Fever" (Andrews), "Annie Laurie" (arr. Buck), "The Bells of St. Mary's" (Adams), "By the Bend of the River" (Edwards), "John Peel" (Andrews), "Duna" (McGill), "The Night Wind" (Farley), and the "The Sleigh" (Kountz).

A. A. Milne's one-act play, "The Camberley Triangle," will be given by Dorothea Lewis, Robert M. Miller and B. A. F. Doehrer, of the Columbia Players.

The Lisa Gardiner Dancers will offer "Pizzicati" (Drigo), "The Beautiful Blue Danube" (Strauss), "Serenade" (Boccherini), "Sugar-Plum Fairy" (Chaikovski), "The Skaters" (Waldteufel), and "Mazurka" (Delibes).

The program will close with La Salle Spier's dance pantomine, "The Afternoon of a Faun," by Fillis Speich, Marjorie McGee, Margery Beall and Alice Louise Hunter, with the composer at the piano.

Authority of Schumann To Address Music Group

Mrs. Otto Torney Simon, an authority on the Schumanns, will address a meeting of the Public Library Recordings Group in the music division of the Central Library today at 7:30 p. m., Dr. George Bowerman, the librarian, announced yesterday.

The influence of Clara Wieck, famous pianist, on the musical art of her husband, Robert Schumann, has been the subject of special study by Mrs. Simon.

Clinedinst Studio.

WILSON ASKS CONGRESS FOR WAR.—On April 2, 1917, unable to curb Germany's submarine warfare on American ships and nationals, President Wilson, re-elected by the slogan "He kept us out of war," asked Congress to break with Berlin. After debate, Congress declared war on April 6, 1917. Thus, the Battle of the Bonus dates from that day. Fired with patriotism, Americans rushed to the colors. To them it was do or die, fight and win.

Harris & Ewing.

THE DRAFT.—But America faced a gigantic task of raising an army of millions. The first draft to enlist an army impartially was ordered on May 18, 1917, calling for all men between 21 and 31. A second draft for men between 18 and 45 was called April 2, 1918. Photo shows first draft number drawn by Secretary Baker.

"YOU'RE IN THE ARMY NOW!"—Drafted from all walks of life, the Army found it had a tough job ahead making soldiers out of farm lads, machinists, salesmen and college boys. Training camps all over the country were quickly established. Many who "graduated" were concentrated on this side of the Atlantic saw no tougher service than "kitchen police."

MARCHING AS TO WAR!—Cold steel passes the Capitol as a contingent of Washington troops set out, "destination unknown," to France. There were 545,773 Regulars, 728,234 Volunteers and 2,783,094 drafted men under arms. Of the total, 4,057,101 troops, a little more than half saw service in France.

THE HELL OF WAR.—American troops carry a wounded comrade to a dressing station through a shell-torn French village. Of the 2,590,629 who actually got overseas, 1,390,000 saw front-line fighting. Of these, 37,568 were killed in action; 12,942 died of wounds, and 182,674 were wounded.

WHILE SHELLS ZOOM overhead these doughboys munch lunch in a trench. To many the war was quite a picnic and a lot of fun. It had its disadvantages—mostly mud—but the Yanks were the best fed, the best clothed. The Nation's annual traffic fatalities are greater than the American war casualties.

BACK HOME, VICTORIOUS AND ACCLAIMED.—The British had their Blighty, but the Yanks had Hoboken! Here's a boatload back from France, with 2,000 wounded below decks. Before the Armistice was an hour old in November, 1919, a bonus bill was before Congress.

THE "FORGOTTEN MEN" REMIND US.—A group of veterans in 1933 starting off for Washington from New York to demand full payment of the bonus. They had already cashed certificates totaling millions just a few years before. This was no sooner spent—and it went quickly—than the demand came for more.

BARRED FROM THE CAPITOL.—Bonus marchers on Washington in July, 1925, turned back from the Capitol where they planned to present a petition to Congress, dejectedly pound the pavement back to their "camp."

THE FAMOUS BATTLE OF ANACOSTIA—After being routed from an attempted march on the White House and ordered to vacate the Anacostia flats, veterans and police staged a free-for-all. The Battle of the Bonus was really bitter now. Other nations in Europe, equally as grateful to their defenders as was the United States to its veterans, had long ago paid off their men with small cash payments and thanks, and forgotten bonuses to pay for The Next.

ALL SMILES.—Veterans and Senate leaders who pushed the bonus to its final passage. WHOOPEE!—They get the bonus, and here's the way some vets celebrate. The millions given to the veterans will go to pay their bills, buy cars, homes, furniture, and clothes.

G. W. Routs Ohio State, 45-23, to Gain Revenge for Only Loss

Locals Take 14-0 Lead, Coast In

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A SHARP-SHOOTING George Washington quintet that could have made baskets in an empty tomato can (no. 2 size) last night, overwhelmed Ohio State by the overwhelming score of 45-23 at Tech High School before 3,500 fans who found it difficult to believe.

It was a return engagement between the two and George Washington had that spine-tingling motif of revenge hidden away in its determination to send its supporters home happy, for Ohio won the first game, 36-27. The Colonials had their revenge, every last measure of it. The visitors didn't mumble the time-honored word of surrender, "Uncle," only because they simply didn't have sufficient breath left.

The bewildered Buckeyes were left at the post as Hal Kiesel, leading scorer of the evening, and Tommy O'Brien, runner-up, led an early attack that had the basket sagging with George Washington points. The Colonials obtained the unbelievably large lead of 14-0, holding their opponents scoreless for the first 10 minutes of play.

Ohio strove desperately to bridge the gap between the two, firing long shots from the side and midcourt. Some hit the mark, but more frequently the invaders missed. George Washington's reply was another bombardment that gave it a 26-to-10 advantage at half time.

Set Plays Futile.

The Buckeyes resorted to futile set plays with pivots in an effort to slip through the home team's impregnable defense, but the floor was too slippery and George Washington too alert. The Colonials prodded their advantage to 36-16 early in the second half, with Milt Schonfeld in charge of the attack which had been directed by George Freilicher. State substituted freely and frequently in an effort to stem the tide, but the Colonials continued piling up the count, running their advantage to 41 to 19, with Kiesel and O'Brien, abetted by "Tuffy" Leemans, leveling an unending barrage at the basket.

Jim McDonald was Ohio's ablest player last night, leading his team's attack with 9 points, while the best William Henry Harrison (Tippy) Dye, jr., could do was 3. William Henry Harrison, incidentally, is reputedly one of his team's little big shots. He was just another player in red pants last night.

Whitehead Leads Florida Golf Field

By the United Press.

St. Augustine, Fla., Jan. 27.—Charlie Whitehead, blond bomber of South River, N. J., today led the field in the qualifying round of the Golf Club Champions' Tournament with a par round of 72.

Whitehead, defending the title he won here last year, showed a smoothed-out swing and was accurate with woods and irons. Playing the 553-yeard eighth, the Jersey star was home with an iron and a canned putt for an eagle 3. Since 1934 Whitehead has won 26 straight matches in Florida competition.

One of the sensations of the qualifying round was H. A. Henderson, of St. Augustine, nearly 70 years old, who scored a 74. With everyone else complaining of cold and wind, he led the field until afternoon.

Flynn Defeats Dodge, Gains Tie for Cue Lead

Nosing out Johnny Dodge by the narrow margin of 35-34 in 65 innings, Gene Flynn last night went into a four-way tie for the lead in the city pocket billiards championship tournament now in progress at Lewis and Krause billiard parlors.

Flynn's victory enabled him to tie Gene Ruark, Warren Hokie and Everett Crouch, all of whom boast seven victories against two defeats. Hokie and Flynn meet tonight, following the Henry Baer-Frank Masi match, in the play-off for undisputed possession of the lead. The tournament will end Friday.

The second match last night resulted in Gay defeating Goodacre, 35-29, in 75 innings.

Ross Batters Halper, Stops Him in Eighth

Philadelphia, Jan. 27 (AP).—Welterweight Champion Barney Ross took all the roughness and toughness out of rough, tough Lou Halper in seven rounds tonight and then stopped the heavier Newark (N. J.) battler in the eighth frame of their scheduled ten-rounder at Convention Hall.

Referee Frank Knarsborough halted the fight at 2 minutes 39 seconds of the eighth, after Halper had been floored once for a nine count with a vicious right-hand smash, and was on the verge of going down again.

Victory at Last.

Brussels, Jan. 27 (AP).—The United States Olympic ice hockey team, showing strong scoring power for first time on its European tour, defeated the reinforced Etoile du Nord sextet, 9 to 5, tonight.

Tigers Quoted at 3-2 in 1936; Kearney Rates Nats 40-1 Shot

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Jan. 27.—The Detroit Tigers and the Chicago Cubs, last year's winners, were made the favorites at 3 to 2 today in first odds posted by Tom Kearney, St. Louis betting commissioner, on the 1936 major league baseball races.

Kearney listed the St. Louis Cardinls at 3 to 1 and the Boston Red Sox at 2 to 1 in runner-up positions in the National and American Leagues, respectively.

Figures quoted against each team's chances:

American League: Detroit 3-2, Boston 2, New York 4, Cleveland 10, Chicago 30, Washington 40, St. Louis and Philadelphia 100.

National League: Chicago 3-2, St. Louis 3, New York 4, Pittsburgh 6, Cincinnati 40, Philadelphia and Boston 100.

The 40-1 rating that Kearney gives the Washington club represents higher odds than he was quoting last year at this time. Before the 1935 pennant race, Washington rated sixth choice in the league at odds of 20 to 1.

Ohio State Gridmen Exonerated by Probe; Gov. Davey's Football Joke Is Now Official

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 27.—Gov. Martin L. Davey's football joke became officially known as such today.

After a thorough investigation, the Western Conference announced it was clearly satisfied that the Ohio Governor was merely joking last October when he said 15 Ohio State football players were on the State pay roll and insinuated that football prowess got them their jobs.

Gov. Davey later said he was merely joking, but the Western Conference ordered two separate investigations with today's result that all 15 players were absolved from all insinuations and charges.

Two Reports Made.

Two individual reports were made—one by Maj. John L. Griffith, as athletic commissioner of the conference, and another by the conference infractions committee consisting of Prof. W. J. Moenkhaus, Indiana University, and Prof. A. C. Callen, of Illinois.

Maj. Griffith investigated the athletic side of the "joke" to determine if any of the 15 should be ruled ineligible from further competition; the infractions committee looked into the matter as a whole to determine whether non-athletes as well as athletes were given an equal chance at employment at Ohio State.

Paid Same as Others.

"It seems clear, first, that the 15 football men who were employed by the State of Ohio from November 1, 1934, to November 1, 1935, obtained their appointments on their own initiative and through the help of personal friends," said Maj. Griffith's report. "Second, that they were paid at the same rate as others who were not engaged in athletics. Third, that there was no disproportion in the number of jobs held by athletes and, fourth, that it would not interfere with their university tasks."

In collecting evidence for his report, Maj. Griffith obtained statements from the heads of the State departments giving the number of Ohio State students employed, their work performed and their pay. Further, Gov. Davey wrote a letter outlining the requirements for their work and the work done by the athletes.

The infractions committee reported it found no favoritism of athletes in obtaining State jobs.

"The committee feels," said the report, "that Maj. Griffith made a thorough investigation. The evidence shows that the much publicized State jobs are given to non-athletes as well as to athletes, and the committee does not feel that the evidence indicates that athletes have been unduly favored."

In other words, the Governor of Ohio told a big joke, but it had such an opportunity for serious repercussions that the Western Conference officially investigated it and agreed that it must have been a joke.

Georgetown Is Off On 3-Day Jaunt

Hoyas Play Yale, Army, Temple on Trip.

Georgetown's basketball forces entrained last night for New Haven, first stop on a three-day trip that will see the Hoyas pitted against Yale, Army and Temple on consecutive days. The last game is an Eastern Conference engagement and the one that will definitely settle Georgetown's hopes in the championship race.

No other local games are billed until Thursday when Maryland plays host to William and Mary. This will be in the nature of a warm-up for Saturday's duel with Duke, which contstitutes the upper-half of a twin bill that has Virginia meeting the Terps in boxing in the lower half.

Catholic University's game with Mount St. Mary's originally booked Friday night at Brookland, has been postponed to February 25 at Catholic's request. Midterm exams are in progress and school officials decided to forego all sports until their completion.

Four K.O.'s Mark Fort Myer Fights

Lots of dynamite was packed in the gloves of the two-fisted fighters of Fort Myer last night at their weekly boxing program, as four of the bouts ended in either technical or straight knockouts.

Howard, 145-pounder, won on a technical knockout from Lightfoot in the second round of their scheduled three-rounder. Both were from Headuarters Battery.

Cunningham-Mangan Rivalry Sure to Pack Garden Saturday

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—When Glenn Cunningham stepped in front of Joe Mangan near the finish of the Curley Mile at Boston on Saturday night he took the dust off the S. R. O. signs at Madison Square Garden.

For both Cunningham and Mangan are entered in the Wanamaker Mile, which features next Saturday's Millrose games here, and their rivalry in this ancient fixture already is a grudge fight which will pack the garden to the rafters.

Cunningham, the Kansas flier, who is acclaimed the world's greatest miler indoors or out, entered the Curley Mile a smashing favorite over the field, which included Mangan, former Cornell collegian, who now runs for the New York A. C. Until the last lap was started it seemed certain Cunningham would romp in with an easy victory. His famous bell-lap kick would see to that.

Wins by a Foot.

But Mangan was running the race of his life, and, rounding the last turn, he was about to pass the Kansan, who was on the inside lane. Cunningham swerved toward the center of the track, coming directly into Mangan's path. Joe, striving to avoid a collision, thrust out an arm and literally pushed Cunningham across the line, a winner by one foot.

The Boston fans started booing Cunningham and they were still howling today. The echo was caught up here so loudly that it's certain that fire department officials will be forced to bar an overflow crowd in Saturday's show.

Cunningham says he turned his ankle and stumbled into Mangan's path. This, of course, is a most reasonable explanation, but it didn't satisfy the Boston crowd, nor will it suit the local track and field addicts, who are certain to treat Cunningham to a most ungracious booing.

Mangan, furious at the turn of events immediately after the race, was certain that Cunningham had fouled him. Later he had "nothing to say," but on his way home to New York he filled out an entry blank for the Wanamaker, an event he had intended to skip. This was his real answer.

Most Controversial.

The Cunningham-Mangan tangle at Boston constituted the most controversial distance race in America since the 5,000-meter event of the 1932 Olympic games. It was in this event that Lauri Lehtinen, of Finland, had twice swerved into the path of Ralph Hill, star United States entry, as the American was pounding into a lead in the stretch. Lehtinen was given the title and credited with a new world record, but many spectators thought his was a deliberate foul, and probably as many, including the writer, still think so, four years later.

The Boston incident was the second of its kind involving Cunningham during the young indoor season. In the recent Brooklyn K. of C. games Cunningham came into contact with Chuck Hornbostel, throwing his rival off stride and winning handily.

Hunter Defeats Goggin, Wins Golf Title

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 27.—Willie Hunter, of Los Angeles, blasted the heavily-trapped Lake Merced course with sub-par golf on the last round and defeated Willie Goggin, San Francisco, 4 and 2, today for the San Francisco match play Open title. He won first prize of $1,675.

Hunter, 1921 British amateur title holder, set a pace that proved too swift for his rival as they entered the last nine of the 36-hole final.

Holding a 1-up lead at the time, the slender pro ran his advantage to four holes as they reached the thirtieth, made it dormie 4 at the thirty-second and clinched the match on the thirty-fourth with a birdie 3. Goggin had remained in the running after the deadlock by winning the thirty-third with a birdie 3.

Hits Bold Clip Shot.

Instead of coasting out by halving the thirty-fourth, Hunter hit a bold chip shot from 30 feet away. The ball rolled straight into the hole to end the contest.

Hunter completed the afternoon round five under par, Goggin shaded par by two strokes. Each turned in a 34, one under par, for the third nine.

Throughout, Hunter putted with deadly accuracy. Goggin found trouble on the greens and was unable to straighten out several long shots. Goggin, noted for his power from the tee, was consistently outdriven.

It was the most important tournament victory for Hunter since he turned professional in 1925.

Goggin drew down $837.50. The Junior Chamber of Commerce announced it had been thrown for a loss of $2,260 in sponsoring the tournament.

The match was played in dreary weather with a sprinkling of rain this morning.

Each qualified with 142, Goggin having rounds of 72 and 70 and Hunter 71—71. Hunter defeated Ky Laffoon, of Chicago, 2 and 1, in the first round of match play and took his semi-final eighteen from Craig Wood, New York, on the 19th.

Goggin defeated his first match play opponent, Jimmy Thomson of Ridgewood, N. J., 2 and 1, and won from Ray Mangrum, Los Angeles, 3 and 1.

Pat Crawford Named.

Kinston, N. C., Jan. 27 (U.P.).—Pat Crawford, former major leagues baseball player, has been appointed secretary of the Columbus, Ohio club in the American Association, his relatives announced here tonight. A long illness prevented Crawford's assuming management of the Rochester, N. Y., club last year.

Draw Fought By Serrian And Blair

By Bill McCormick.

MICKEY SERRIAN and Frankie Blair, a couple of rugged Italians, who fought as if one were Mussolini and the other Haile Selassie, knocked each other about for ten rounds to a draw decision at Turner's Arena last night.

The encounter, witnessed by a crowd of about 1,200, was even more exciting, more closely contested than a previous meeting here between the two which set a new high for action and in which Blair took a hairline decision.

Perhaps not since the legalization of boxing here has a stalemate decision been so justified. In the early rounds, first one of the willing welterweights, then the other, would spring into a microscopic lead. Toward the finish they stood toe to toe, battling it out on absolutely even terms, to wind up both nearly dead from exhaustion—and in a dead heat.

One Ballot for Blair.

Judge Charley Dunn and Referee Denny Hughes called the contest an even-Stephen affair as Judge Frank Schuyler balloted Blair the winner. The Post score sheet showed Serrian one-half point or less ahead at the finish, which will just give you an idea.

Serrian got in his most telling licks when he was able to tuck his head down, ram through Blair's flying fists and convert Frankie's ribs into a xylophone with a two-fisted body attack.

Blair fared very well as long as he was able to keep Mickey at long range and off balance and keep popping telling wallops to the head and body. At all other times during the battle neither enjoyed any great advantage, but both took more than enough punishment as they bounced back higher the harder they were hit.

Off To Slight Advantage.

Serrian got off to a slight advantage in the first round as Blair attempted to box, stabbing with a long left until Mickey finally got set, then falling heir to several hard swats as he allowed the opposition to set the pace.

The second, third and fourth rounds went to Blair by the narrowest of margins as he discarded his scientific method of approach and waded in with both hands flying away, utilizing his superior speed to keep Serrian off balance and at times even slightly bewildered. Even during the progress of these rounds, Serrian would time and time again almost sweep away Frankie's advantages with single telling blows from his mighty right hand.

In the fifth, Serrian seemed to have found the answer as he ripped into Frankie's body with a crushing, two-fisted body attack that had Frankie badly befuddled and pretty tired at the bell. Mickey continued those tactics in the sixth—his best round—and it seemed inevitable that Blair would go down before the whirlwind tattoo that was being played on his brisket.

Blair Takes Seventh.

Somehow, Blair gathered reserve strength between rounds and came out as fresh as a sports department copy boy for the seventh. He proceeded to spike Serrian's body attack most effectively and flailed away at his head to take the round. Serrian again found the range to the stomach in the eighth round,

Coramine Returns $143.60 On Coast

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Jan. 27.—Coramine, 2-year-old maiden filly, won the first race at Santa Anita Park today to pay $143.60 for a $2 ticket, the highest price so far this season.

She paid $33.80 to place and $14.40 to show. Not Asleep was second, paying $2.80 and $2.20. Brass Bottle, third, paid $2.80.

New Event Is Added To Cup Regatta Here

At a meeting of the President's Cup regatta committee yesterday, announcement was made of an added competition to be held this year for the John Charles Thomas Perpetual Trophy. Competition will be open to the ten leading point scorers in the 225-cubic inch class. All competition for the Thomas Trophy must be held in Washington.

The race will be run in three heats of 10 miles each. An open race for the American Power Boat Association 225-cubic inch championship also will be a feature of this year's water carnival.

Cleveland Purchases Blaeholder From A's

Cleveland, Jan. 27 (AP).—Purchase of George Blaeholder, right-handed American League pitching veteran, from the Philadelphia Athletics was announced late today by the Cleveland Baseball Club. Blaeholder was obtained from Connie Mack at the waiver price of $7,500, club officials said.

Blaeholder will be used as a tutor for the Indians' young hurlers and for bull-pen service this season, although he probably will be started in some games, the announcement said.

Golfer Dies

Johnny Golden, Noted Golfer, Dead at 39

Pneumonia Contracted on Way South Is Fatal to Ex-Ryder Cupman.

By the United Press.

STAMFORD, Conn., Jan. 27.—Johnny Golden, 39, prominent golf pro, died here at 11:20 tonight from bronchial pneumonia.

Golden, who was a member of the Ryder Cup team in 1927-28, was stricken in Jacksonville, Fla., two weeks ago as he was en route South for winter tournaments. He was ordered home and arrived here last Friday.

Golden had been golf pro at Wee Burn Club in Darien, Conn., for the last six years. In the 1927 Ryder Cup match with a British team, Golden defeated H. C. Jolly, 8 to 7, in a singles match, and paired with Walter Hagen to defeat E. Ray and F. Robson in a foursome, 2 and 1. In 1928 Golden again paired with Hagen to win a foursome, 2 up, from E. Whitcombe and H. Cotton. He did not play a singles match that year.

Golden won the North and South Open in Pinehurst, N. C., in 1932.

Bob-Sledders Kept Idle by Weather

Americans Slowly Going Punch Drunk Because of Inactivity.

By the Associated Press.

GARMISCH-PARTENKIRCHEN, Germany, Jan. 27.—America's skiers and skaters have settled down to heard practice for the winter Olympics either here or at other points in Europe, but her bobsledders slowly are going "punch drunk" from inactivity.

Th balmy weather of the last few days has made it impossible to open the big Olympic run and the bobbers haven't a thing to do except to eat their usual five square meals daily. Their sleds have been at the starting point for several days, thoroughly slicked up and ready for action when winter comes.

Tries to Arrange Contest.

J. Hubert Stevens, of Lake Placid, N. Y., veteran captain of the team, made a serious effort today to arrange some sort of an athletic contest against the German bobbers.

Right now it looks like it might be soccer. If it is, it should be one of the athletic spectacles of the age. Ivan Brown, of Keene Valley, N. Y., lightest man on the American team, weighs 190 pounds. The others are really big.

The well-known jinx on the winter Olympics which has threatened to turn Garmisch-Partenkirchen into a summer resort has been really poisonous only to the bobbers, however.

Ski Jump in Shape.

Maureen Orcutt Wins Golf Medal With 81

Punta Gorda, Fla., Jan. 27 (U.P.).—Mrs. Maureen Orcutt Crews, of Miami, today led a record field in qualifying rounds of the second annual Charlotte Harbor women's championship of champions today, as she took medalist honors with a card of 81.

Mrs. Crews shared honors with Marian Miley, dark-haired sharpshooter from Lexington, Ky., who also carded an 81. A comparison of cards, however, showed Mrs. Crews was a hole ahead of Miss Miley and she was declared medalist.

250-Pound Wrestler To Make Capital Debut

The most powerful lump of beef and brawn to invade the mat locally in recent years will make his appearance at Joe Turner's Arena next Thursday night in the person of Tom Jenkins, who will oppose Mike Mazurki in a semi-final to the Ernie Dusek-Joe Cox feature bout.

Brought to the United States by the same interests that pull the strings on Danno O'Mahoney, Jenkins—a 265-pound Scot—is declared by his sponsors to be at once a showman and strong-arm specialist.

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

AS SALARIES go, the pay isn't bad, and everybody knows you can't beat the hours, but after ten years in a National League monkey suit, Dolly Stark has discovered that baseball umpiring, as a profession, has it drawbacks. At least that's what he said yesterday when he notified the league president that he was quitting. He wasn't impressed with the future of the job and the salary he was drawing did not compensate him, he said, for the lonely life he was forced to lead throughout the big league season.

POVICH.

That, of course, is the rub in any big league umpiring job. To anybody less than a thick-skinned individual, an umpire's existence figures to be well-nigh unbearable. It is a league-imposed Coventry that all umpires are under—their friendship with the ball players ending from the moment an umpire is signed. They must be men apart, aloof from their fellows and daring not to cultivate more than a passing acquaintanceship lest they feel the wrath of the league officials.

They must never travel on the same trains with the ball teams except in dire emergencies, lest friendships spring up. They must never put up at the same hotels, never take the same cabs to the ball park and never be seen in other than casual conversation with a ball player in and out of uniform. Once in the ball park, they must remain in their little cubby-holes underneath the stands until their official duties call them on the field, and once there personalities must be forgotten.

It is all a part of the big leagues' scheme to divert suspicion from their umpires, who hold the very integrity of the game in their own integrity. League presidents shudder at the thought of any influence that might impair public confidence in umpires, and thus in baseball, and every temptation that might lead an umpire to shade his judgment on decisions is thus removed, the league hopes. But it isn't human—according to Dolly Stark.

TO THEIR credit it must be observed that there never has been a scandal in the big leagues into which the name of an umpire has been dragged. Many ball players, even the big-shot stars, have been connected directly or indirectly with betting coups of the gamblers, but the slate of the umpires is clean, and big league presidents silently congratulate themselves year after year on that item.

But the realization that they, like Caesar's wife, must be above suspicion, has tended to make big league umpires autocrats of the ball field. League presidents, who have direct supervision over the umpires, are loathe to uphold complaints against 'em, eager to give them the full backing of their offices on any squawk short of a direct accusation of crookedness. Thus the umpires realize that they can get away with much, and they do.

No club owner or club manager has a chance to win a favorable decision on any squawk against an umpire's judgment. The fact that they are interested parties while the umpires' decisions are supposed to be unbiased settles the fate of all complaints. The umpires know they need only to stick together, to support one another in written reports of all incidents, and they will be upheld by the league head. They have learned that and know how to protect their jobs. Woe to the rookie umpire who doesn't follow the lead of his mates.

There was an incident in Detroit in 1934 that illustrated the baseball proverb that when umpires fall out, one of 'em loses his job. A veteran umpire and a rookie were working one of Washington's games against the Tigers. A ball that was hit three feet foul was called foul by the rookie umpire working on third base. The veteran umpire behind the plate called it fair. An argument between umpires ensued, the rookie in anger told the club managers that the veteran ump had told him "he had to play ball with the veterans if he wanted to stick around in this league." At the end of the season, the rookie was retained, the veteran fired.

In Short—

While drawing $12,000 per season as an American League umpire, Billy Evans earned $20,000 yearly as a writer of syndicated baseball articles . . . jobless now, he is back in the sports writing field as the owner of his own syndicate . . . Clark Griffith has purchased a Chattanooga radio station in the interests of promoting his Chattanooga baseball club . . . Philadelphia baseball writers who are wailing that Connie Mack wrecked his ball team by winter sales of players forget, perhaps, that Mack entered the winter with an eighth-place club . . . Elden Auker, the Detroit Tigers' prize underhand pitcher, is an underhander by accident . . . he discovered it was the only way he could get the ball up to the plate with any speed after suffering a shoulder injury on the football field . . . Johnny Stone, Washington outfielder, is the new owner of a block of business buildings in his home town of Lynchburg, Tenn. . . . When they were teammates with the Browns, Goose Goslin offered to wager that Jim Levy, the Browns' shortstop, could beat Ben Chapman, of the Yankees, in a straightaway dash . . . with no takers.

Terry's Infield Worries End as Koenig Signs

New York, Jan. 27 (AP).—Any infield worries Manager Bill Terry of the Giants may have had vanished today with the receipt of the signed contract of Mark Koenig, the durable veteran who was a lifesaver for the Giants at second, third and shortstop last season.

The signing of Koenig brings every contender for posts in the Giant infield into the fold.

Iselin Annexes Third Boat Series Triumph

Havana, Jan. 27 (AP).—Scoring his third consevutive victory of the series, Adrian Iselin 2d, of New York, captured the Cup of Cuba with his star class yacht, Ace, today.

After romping away with the morning race by more than 20 minutes, Ace repeated in the final contest this afternoon, to win the cup with 15 points.

Stark, National's Ace Umpire, Pay Holdout—First on Record

By the Associated Press

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—A brand-new species of the baseball holdout bobbed up today when Albert D. (Dolly) Stark, ace of the National League umpiring staff, became the first arbiter on record to quit his job because of salary trouble.

Stark said he has told President Ford C. Frick he is "through." Frick said he has not accepted the resignation, hoping Stark would reconsider, at least for one more season.

In town from Hanover, N. H., where he coaches Dartmouth's basketball team, Stark said:

"You can list me as a hold-out. That's the story. Unless the league sees fit to pay me a lot more money, I'm done. I don't like umpiring well enough to make it a business at the present scale of salaries.

Wants Bigger Work.

"I want to do bigger work than umpiring and I want to get bigger money. I hope I can stay in baseball, either as manager or business manager. Ultimately I hope to have such a job on a major league club.

"Mr. Frick has been grand to me. I just am not satisfied to keep on at what I'm paid. Since I receive as much as most umpires, it's up to me to move and that's what I'm doing."

At the height of his career right now, Stark has been in the National League since 1928. An arm injury cut short his playing career.

Popular alike with fans and players, Stark was presented an automobile last season by a group of New York admirers. Subsequently he was voted the National League's ranking arbiter in a poll of players.

Frick Mum on Pay.

Frick would not discuss the salary angle. He said Stark wanted to get into a business with larger financial possibilities.

"I don't blame him a bit for that," said Frick. "He's a grand fellow and I want to see him get along. I am going to try to keep him if I can, at least for 1936. He's one of our best men and I am not going to accept his resignation until I am sure he will not reconsider."

Stark has been mentioned as a possible successor to Bob Quinn as general manager of the Brooklyn Club, if the job is not added to the responsibilities of Casey Stengel, field boss of the Dodgers.

Irked by Limitations.

Stark's friends say he has been irked by the personal limitations imposed upon him by umpiring. He feels the job keeps him separated from mingling, off the field, with the very people he likes most to associate with—ball players and managers.

Stark came to the National League after one season as an umpire in the old Eastern circuit. Prior to that he was an infielder with the Jersey City Internationals.

Although Frick made no announcement, a report was published that Lee Ballanfant, of the Texas League, had been signed as a prospective replacement for Stark on the National League umpiring staff.

Eastern Heavy Favorite to Defeat Aroused Tech Team Today

Maroon Five Will Seek Revenge

Roosevelt and Western Meet in Battle for Second Place.

By John R. Vosburgh.

THE interhigh series merry-go-round whirls Tech into the path of Eastern's champions this afternoon. To all indications Tech is due to be taken for a ride again. It becomes a serious question, then, which is likely to be the more interesting performance, the battle between Roosevelt and Western at Tech or between Tech and Eastern at Roosevelt.

With the Georgetowners and the Rough Riders tied for second place and their well-established rivalry lending some added flavor to the occasion, the Western-Roosevelt tussle takes on slam-bang proportions.

On the other hand, the opportunity of seeing this Eastern team in action should go far toward packing the Roosevelt gym. Add to this the fact that the Tech team believes itself capable of upsetting the champs and you have a neat background for a fast ball game—on paper at least. Both games start at 3:45 p. m.

Champs Won Last Game.

The last time Eastern and Tech got together, it was a margin of 20 points by which the champions finally went off the floor victorious. Today they will be gunning for their twentieth straight inter-high victory and with this as an added objective, the outlook is scarcely bright for Tech.

Coach Rusty Thompson's boys, however, are keeping in mind the tough struggle Central gave the champions last week. Figuring Eastern may be headed for a temporary let-down, the Maroon is out to take advantage of any such possibility. The first game with Eastern was not exactly a runaway until well in the second half. The Tech men are figuring to concentrate especially on stopping Chick Hollidge, the chief trouble-maker in the first game.

Tech believes itself the victim of a let-down in last week's game with Roosevelt. Tommy Dobyns, who missed the Roosevelt game, is expected to be back in action at center with Bill Rea and Capt. George Hahn at guard and Walton Merchant and Jimmy Vermillion at forward.

Scheible Is Ready.

Coach Charlie Guyon of Eastern who did not use Red Scheible, his star guard, against the Navy Plebes, Saturday, has the sharpshooter ready for action today.

A bit more certain, however, are the evenly matched prospects of the Roosevelt-Western game. The Rough Riders, sailing along after the 30-18 beating they gave Tech, are highly confident of stepping into undisputed possession of second place. Western, on the other hand, points toward its 2-point defeat at the hands of Central as game which could have been anybody's.

Spiro Kolius and Frank Bailey figure to be the chief damage-wreakers for Roosevelt with Gerry Burns and Hop Lomax the serious threats for Western. The game should develop into a point-for-point, hilarious episode of this hectic race which the other four schools are waging to finish a poor second to Eastern.

Bagur, Ex-Jockey, Held Following Miami Raid

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hialeah Park, Miami, Fla., Jan. 27.—Jockey Herb Bagur, ruled off the turf for life for possession of a battery at Washington Park last summer, and three other persons are being held by the Miami police for investigation following a raid upon Bagur's downtown office where he was alleged to be conducting a "tipster racket."

According to police, a detective paid Bagur $500 in marked bills for information on a "fixed" race. These bills were found on Bagur's person. In advertising his wares, Bagur confessed he had used a battery on many horses and his selling point was that he knew the boys who were riding at Hialeah with batteries.

Firemen Want Games.

The Takoma Park Fire Department basket ball team is seeking gams for tonight, tomorrow night, Thursday and Friday nights. They have a gymnasium. Call Adams 4821.

Massanutten Enters Four in Meet Here

The Massanutten Academy has swelled the entry list for the open swimming meet to be held at the Shoreham Hotel next Friday night with entrants in several classes.

In the 100-yard free style race, the Virginia institution will be represented by Irving McCaffery. Andy Clarke will participate in the 220-yard free style, and Johnny Lang, one of the best divers in the State of Virginia, will participate from the springboard.

Terp Ringmen Open Drills For Meet

LAUNCHING preparations for what well may be the toughest assignment his twice-beaten battlers have had this season, Coach Jack Harmony yesterday sent the University of Maryland boxing squad through a lengthy and tiring workout at College Park. The Old Liners meet Virginia Southern Conference champions, Saturday in the feature half of a twin bill.

Dissatisfied with the work of Johnny Birkland, the slightly bald heavyweight who was kayoed by Leo Katalinas, of Catholic University, in the decisive bout of their match, Harmony virtually had decided to send a rugged but untried rookie against Virginia. The nominee is Ed Fletcher, football lineman, who has proved himself an apt pupil in the socking science.

Fletcher weighed out at 181 pounds after a strenuous session yesterday, and this lack of heft may seriously handicap his chance of winning the assignment. Harmony wants to use him badly, but it is doubtful if he'll be willing to send him against 200-pound Fred Cramer.

Birkland, who forfeited to Miami last Saturday because of insufficient practice due to examinations, lost favor in Harmony's eyes when he failed to follow instructions against Katalinas.

In that bout Harmony sent him out with instructions to box the bull-like heavy, but Birkland elected to slug it out with his foe and consequently was floored three times in the first round. Harmony talked to him between rounds—told him to get on his bicycle and box—and again Birkland stood toe to toe with Katalinas and slugged. Again he hit the deck, and the third time he went down Harmony tossed in the towel.

A. A. U. to Pick Tourney Site Tonight

Important Meeting to Be Held at Central Y; 2 Spots Weighed.

AN important meeting of the District A. A. U. basketball committee headed by Winfree Johnson will take place tonight in the office of Physical Director Ralph Foster at the Central Y. M. C. A., 1736 G street northwest, starting at 7:30.

The purpose of the meeting is to set in motion plans for The Post's District A. A. U. championship tournament scheduled to begin February 18.

Bernie Phillips, Y. M. C. A.; A. Earle Weeks and Joseph Aronoff, of the A. A. U. executive committee; Morris Fox, Police Boys' Club; Jan Jankowski, Northeast Boys' Club; Harry English, president of the Community Center League; Joe Bertolino, of the Agriculture Department, and Dave Herman, The Post.

Gym to Be Picked.

One of the first things to be discussed will be the selection of a gym for the big games. Just now Chairman Johnson has two places in mind, Heurich and Tech High.

The decision to hold the games three weeks earlier than heretofore has met with the approval of local basketball leaders and officials. This is being done in order to enable the winning unlimited team to leave early in March for Denver, Colo., to compete in the National A. A. U. championship.

Chairman Johnson, in predicting a record-breaking number in this senior division, said that Rinaldi Tailors, which is composed of most of the members of last year's champion Sholl's team; Bureau of Investigation, Resettlement, Delaware & Hudson, Senate Beer, Company F and Fort Washington have been playing whirlwind basketball, and loomed as outstanding contestants for the title.

Teams in the 100-pound, 115-pound, 130-pound, 145-pound, boys' and girls' unlimited classes within a 15-mile radius of Washington are eligible for play. Entries close February 14.

Citizens to Pay Homage to C. U. Team

THE citizenry of Washington is viewing the Orange Bowl "victory dinner" on February 3 as its opportunity to honor one of the finest football teams in the country. Washingtonians from all walks of life, representative of the national and District governments, local business, professions and clubs, will gather at the Willard Hotel to pay tribute to the Catholic University eleven, which brought home victory in the Orange Bowl football game at Miami on New Year's Day.

Officially the City of Washington will be represented by Commissioners George Allen, Melvin C. Hazen and Col. Daniel I. Sultan. Commissioner Allen will act as toastmaster. The "mayors" of Capitol Hill will be there, too, in the persons of Senator William H. King and Mrs. Mary Norton, chairman of the Senate and House District of Columbia committees.

A lengthy committee includes such familiar names as "Radio Joe" Kaufman, William Remon, Bankers Robert V. Fleming and Joshua Evans, jr.; Attorneys Frank Hogan, Joseph P. Tumulty and H. Winship Wheatley; Isaac Gans, Gerald Grosner, Chris. Heurich, jr., Leo T. Crowley, Edward A. Baltz, Richmond B. Keech and John Teunis.

Others to attend are Rabbi Abram Simon, Father O'Leary, president of Georgetown University; H. C. Byrd, acting president of the University of Maryland; District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett, Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman, Eugene Meyer, publisher of the Post, and Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, of the Herald, and many other Washington notables.

Speakers will include two noted Washingtonians, Representative Hamilton Fish, jr., of New York, and Assistant Attorney General Joseph Keenan. Both are ardent sportsmen and entertaining raconteurs. Fish having presided at many athletic banquets since his all-American days at Harvard.

to take it after Blair had seemed destined to gain the edge by a whirlwind attack.

They stood toe to toe throughout the ninth on absolutely even terms. The tenth was even more hectic as they both answered the bell with the most determined attacks seen hereabouts. Blair landed the punch that might have decided the fight in his favor—a left hook to the chin which made Mickey's knees buckle—but Serrian bounced back in with vim and vigor to even matters as they punched themselves into a state of near-exhaustion at the finish.

Blair weighed 146, Serrian 145.

Willie Felice gave Doug Swetnam, of Washington, a nice going over in a slow six-rounder that was billed as a semifinal. The New York weatherweight was too aggressive, too strong and too smart for Swetnam at all stages of the contest.

Sam Bacala, a Baltimore welterweight, hammered his way to a unanimous decision over Chief Clyde Wilson, of the Cherokee Indian Wilsons, in a give-and-take six-round preliminary.

Carrier K. O.'s Riley.

Stanford Carrier scored a clean second-round knockout over Bobby Riley, of Alexandria, in a fast and furious preliminary which was slated to go four rounds. The Washington welterweight dropped Riley for the full count with a short right to the chin.

Tony Livingston, a Quantico Marine, scored a third-round technical knockout over Charley Rondo, a Baltimore middleweight, in an opener scheduled for four rounds.

Six Colleges, Including Three In D. C., Form Track Group

Special Dispatch to The Post.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 27.—Six colleges in Maryland and the District of Columbia, meeting here yesterday, formed the Mason and Dixon Intercollegiate Track Conference.

Track men in this section have long felt the need of such an organization, for the sport has languished somewhat during recent years.

The meeting yesterday was held at Johns Hopkins University, and those colleges which had representatives in attendance were Johns Hopkins, Gallaudet, Washington College, American University, Catholic University and the University of Baltimore.

Griffith Elected.

Waldo Hambleton, head track mentor at Johns Hopkins, was elected secretary and treasurer of the new body; Dorsey Griffith, coach of the sport at Catholic University, was chosen as president.

F. H. Hughes represented Gallaudet; George Ekaitis was on hand from Washington College; Walter Young represented American University, and Bucky Miller was Baltimore University's representative.

The idea of the Mason and Dixon Conference was first suggested by Hambleton and Griffith, whose respective teams have been meeting in dual competition for some time.

Meet Set May 2.

Plans were formulated yesterday for a conference meet at Homewood Field, John Hopkins' athletic plant, on May 2.

Although these half-dozen colleges have banded together in their cinder-path conference, there is a chance that the organization will be enlarged long before the first track and field meet is held.

Mount St. Mary's, Loyola College and St. John's College may eventually join the group.

I. B. E. W. Takes Lead in Pin League

THE four-way tie for the leadership of the Federal League was broken last night at the Arcadia alleys when the I. B. E. W. team gained a grand slam over Interstate to take the commanding position for its first time. The new pace-setters climaxed their drive to the top with a big game of 621.

The battle for the runner-up position between Highway Department and Investigation wound up with Highway landing the berth with an odd-game decision. Bill Miller's 148 game was the only bright light of Investigation's defeat. G. P. O., in taking two games from the G. P. O. (Union Printers), shot a 1,757 set to top its victims' total by one pin. Jerry Cowden featured the win with a 383 set.

National Capital Parks was upset twice by Public Schools and Veterans' Administration received the same dose from Navy Yard.

Sigurd Solem rolled two triple-header strikes in one game in the A. & P. League at the Lucky Strike drives to chalk up a 177 game and a season record. Although a big game in any league, the score was comparatively low for six strikes. Solem's efforts went for naught, however, when his team, the Condours, dropped three games to Encore. M. J. Casey, of the victors, mauled the maples for a new high-set mark of 407.

The Orientale continued to exert their superiority over the Procurement League at the Recreation drives, humbling the Victorians in two games. Maleczewski, of the Gothics, carried away high individual game and set laurels with 134 and 350, respectively, and the Saxons shared team honors with the Colonials, the former shooting 552 for the game and the latter taking total pinfall with 1,569.

Washington Centennial swamped Bethany with a 523 game and 1,491 set in the Eastern Star Ladies' League at the Lucky Strike. Ann Williams led the list of individual efforts with a 125 game and 319 set.

Miami Opposes Columbus Tonight

COLUMBUS UNIVERSITY'S 1936 boxing team makes its debut tonight at Joe Turner's emporium of punch in a coming-out party against Miami's potent leather-pushing brigade that will open promptly at 8 o'clock.

Although a pair of District T. A. U. champions and two near-champions appear in the Discoverers' line-up, it is not possible to measure their power until they have been seen in action, although Coach Bobby Goldstein expects to place a winning team in the ring. Miami, however, boasts a powerful and well-coached group of battlers, as they adequately demonstrated Saturday night against Maryland. A decision in the Southerners' favor will not be surprising.

Leon Shub, 135-pound city amateur chamion in 1934, who did not defend his laurels last winter, will hold forth in the lightweight class tonight. His opponent will be Scotty McLaughlin, a doughty Scotchman who won by a technical knockout over Morty Schwartz last Saturday, after being on the verge of a knockout himself in the first round.

Columbus' other champion is Bob Rawson, 145-pounder and title winner last season, who faces Toby Tobias, a stolid and cagey counter-puncher who in turn defeated "Spike" Webb Saturday. The near-champions are Henry Peterson, 128 pounds, who finished second best in the 118-pound class in the tournament, and Bob Grinsm, runner-up in the 165-pound class.

Ray Moss, Columbus' entry in the 118-pound division, will meet up with a smart and potent-punching gentleman in Eddie King, whose only handicap is his size. King hurts when he hits and he undoubtedly will hit Moss—at least once. The starting line-ups:

Columbus.	Wt.	Miami.
Moss	118	King
Peterson	128	Robinson
Shub	135	McLaughlin
Rawson	145	Tobias
Desch	155	Buiold
Grimm	165	Leonard
McKinney	175	Palaima
Wolfe or Schwartz	Hev.	(Undecided)

Caras, Cue Champ, Ends Washington Play Today

Jimmy Caras, whose billiard triumphs have won him as much publicity as the return to the throne of the exiled King George of Greece, winds up his round-the-town program tonight at the Arcade parlors on Fourteenth street and Park road.

The champion, who is a local boy, will put on an exhibition and play two top-notchers. Program starts at 7:30.

Fraternity Wins.

Louis, at 25, Will Be Good Enough to Trim All Champions at One Time, Tunney Predicts

IN an exclusive interview in the February issue of Sports Illustraied and the American Golfer, Gene Tunney, the conqueror of Jack Dempsey, will voice some rather startling views on the subject of Joe Louis.

"If Joe Lois follows the usual course of improvement," Tunney will be quoted as saying, "it is my belief that at the age of 25 he will have the necessary qualifications to beat all the heavyweight champions we have ever had in the same ring on the same night."

Asked what he thinks of Joe Louis today, Tunney told the Sports Illustraied and American Golfer interviewer that in his opinion the sensational negro is the greatest 21-year-old fighter, pound for pound, that has ever been in the ring.

"Still, although I am conscious of all the unusual qualities at this period of Louis' development, I think that Jack Dempsey, at his best, would have beaten him as he is today.

"I base this on Dempsey's unusual ability to unleash dynamic and destructive power in the first seconds of a contest and to continue this expenditure of such power until he fell exhausted. This ability of Dempsey's can be directly traced to his nervous system which, in turn is undoubtedly fed by an unusual glandular development."

Tunney points out that Louis has been tested in every respect but his ability to take a punch and believes Joe will continue to develop as he grows older. He calls attention to the fact that by the very nature of their physical qualities, heavyweights take longer than other boxers to reach their limitations of perfection.

GENE TUNNEY.

Questioned directly as to how he thought he would fare against Louis, Tunney side-stepped the issue.

"Let's skip that, if you don't mind," he replied. "Comparisons are slightly ridiculous because there is no basis for them, especially in this instance."

The correspondent persisted, asking Tunney what strategy he would use to stay clear of Louis' fists.

"I don't know," admitted the former heavyweight champion. "Besides, I haven't given it any thought and I'm rather thankful that I don't have to give it any thought."

Golden Gloves Entry Deadline Is Reached

Entries for the Washington Herald Golden Gloves boxing tournament closed last night. Final compilation is expected to show between 65 and 70 entrants.

The tournament will open at 7:15 p. m. tomorrow with six novice bouts. The open class competition will start at 8:30.

Thursday night the semifinals will be held and Saturday night at 7:30 the novice finals will start. The open finals are expected to start about 8:30 p. m. Saturday.

All contests will be held at the Catholic University gymnasium.

Rickey Is Aroused When Dizzy Dean Turns Down Offer

By Jimmy Powers.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Branch Rickey, angered today because a telephone salary conference failed, growled: "Dizzy Dean ranks twenty-fifth in any list of stars." Rickey, vice president of the Cardinals, drew $80,000 last year; Dean was paid $17,500. Rickey is hurting himself and his business more than he is hurting the best pitcher (according to the records) in either league. The irritated Rickey's remarks may be compared to a butcher who says "My steaks are terrible," and then tries to peddle them to the same people who listened to his raps.

Rickey used to take advantage of the business ignorance of barefooted farmer boys like Pepper Martin and the two Deans. He paid them coolie wages for years while he drew down a fatter check than his apparent services merited. No other club has such a disparity in wages between the business office and the producing stars. Rickey's blast will make many friends for Dizzy.

Announcer Joe Humphries has gained 15 pounds, say postcard greetings from Florida . . . The amateur New York Rovers set a hockey record when they played before 23,000 paid admissions Sunday. Thirteen thousand saw them at the Garden in the afternoon, 10,000 saw them at Baltimore the same night.

WHEN Coach Elmer Layden received a silk skimmer at the South Benders' dinner, Toastmaster Warren Brown cracked, "This is the first time a Notre Dame man has worn a high hat, and I hope it will be the last."

Jimmy Braddock will fight in Cuba to prove that Joe Louis or his handlers were too timid. . . . Fastest skater around our town seems to be Joe Bree, of Brooklyn, but wait until next Monday night, when he meets the Silver Skate winners of Detroit, Chicago, Boston and Providence in the Garden. . . . Ben Bernie, the Old Meusetrap, who will play at the big indoor ice carnival, has a neat roll riding on Bree's sharp blades.

Grittiest girl athlete in New York State is Katharine Dewey. She beats all boys thundering down the Mount Van Hoevenberg bobsled run at Lake Placid. We saw her two weeks ago shooting down those ice troughs like a comet. Now she has a single heat record of 1 minute 19 seconds to her credit.

Sphas to Meet Heurich Five On Sunday

THE Philadelphia Sphas, 1934 world's champions, will meet the Heurich Pros in Sunday's attraction at Chris Heurich's basketball emporium.

Defeated last year by Heurich in a thrill-studded game that was nothing short of an upset, the Sphas are coming here seeking to wipe out the stigma of that defeat.

Recently the Sphas, who have added the former Temple flash, Red Rosan, defeated the New York Celtics, and won a two-out-of-three game series from the famous Renaissance team.

Several years an All-America selection, and rated by Freddie Mesmer as one of the finest all-around players in the country last year, Rosan has played brilliantly with the Sphas.

Other stars with the Sphas are Moe Goldman, City College of New York ace; Inky Lautman, youngest player in the American League; Shikey Gotthaffer, guard, and Cy Kaselman, forward.

Two preliminary games will support the feature contest.

Columbiana Captures Feature

Filly Is Given Race After Argument

Hialeah Jockey Charges Foul, but Stewards Void Claim.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

HIALEAH PARK, Miami, Fla., Jan. 27.—Although today's feature race was run in 1 minute and 37 seconds, it took the stewards almost 10 minutes to award the victory to Columbiana. The Petee Wrack filly had finished in front after a vigorous battle with Don Creole. Jockey Sammy Renick, who had the mount on Trebor, the third horse, registered a claim of foul against the winner. He contended that Columbiana had bumped his charge out of contention as the leaders swung into the stretch.

The stewards went into consultation and stayed until the anxious crowd began to believe they were out to lunch. Strangely, the cosmopolitan crowd remained silent and there was hardly a murmur as the red "official" lights were displayed.

Best Horse Won.

Regardless of the delay, it was the consensus of the press box that the best horse won. Columbiana met with early interference and was shuffled back to seventh before the field was straightened out on the back stretch on the mile journey. From that point to the stretch Columbiana, driven by Jockey Seabo, was working her way to the leaders.

Seabo, guided her through on the rail entering the straight away to send her into a struggle with the front-running Don Creole. Midway of the stretch, Columbiana took the lead and was drawing out at the end to win by a length and a half. Trebor was six lengths behind Don Creole at the end.

Winner Pays $8.10.

A field of eight accepted the issue in the race—the Key Largo Purse. Columbiana paid a delayed mutuel of $8.10.

A crowd of 10,000 witnessed the program and betting showed a sizeable increase for an early week day. The weather was extremely tropical and linen was the most popular cloth of the day.

The daily double returned a stimulating mutuel of $351.70 to those who backed the combine of Albuquerque, a $10.90 mutuel, and Founder which paid $18.60.

Owaller, the Blackwood filly which is expected to have a great racing future, won the day's juvenile sprint while in the role of an odds-on favorite.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al:

It seems that the name "La Cherie" is a rather notorious one hereabouts and when it turned up tacked onto a horse one of the race officials was so shocked that he ordered it changed. At the cost of $100, the owner chose a natural name in "Hadtobe," and the horse, running under the new monicker, won at box-car odds here last Friday. But the joke is on the official who ordered the change. As long as the horse runs there will always be a notation on the program and charts—"Formerly ran as La Cherie." The stewards have granted riding licenses to Buddy Ensor and Whitey Abel. Ensor in his prime rated with the saddle greats of the turf. His chief claim to fame was that ordinary horses loved to run for him. He has made a half-dozen comebacks and has been through several fortunes, and he will have many rooters when he rides postward. Abel is a most versatile horseman, being an owner, trainer and jockey. He rode Bostonian to victory in the 1927 Preakness. In granting him a license, the stewards stipulated that he ride only the horses which he owns or has an interest in. The feature race tomorrow will be "The Maj. Bowes Amateurs Purse," which reminds us that we sat in a car last night listening to Miami's singing fireman on the Bowes program in New York. Nearby a garage was burned to the ground. Sort of like the time Nero fiddled while Rome burned. BILL.

First race—Mont Blanc ran an impressive race last out to be second in good time. After breaking in a tangle, he moved up with a rush only to hang at the end. Better racing luck should bring him brackets. It is possible that Airforce did not fancy the heavy going in that most recent race, although he set the pace part of the way. Deserves another chance. Senator D. closed courageously after overcoming interference here last week.

Second race—Aftermath made every post a winning one last out and may make it two in a row despite the 118-pound assignment. Moss Gal, second in the same race, appears to be a courageous miss and again is a threat. Maedic, winner here Saturday, should make a money appearance.

Third race—Wee Tune may appreciate the 7-furlong sprint route and go on to win this race. Closed gamely at three-quarters and is as fit as hands can make a horse. Character is not particularly partial to the distance but is due respect at the weights. Dowdy Dell has been working well.

Fourth race—Bellum, full brother to Ladysman, is one of the most consistent colts on the grounds. He won his last impressively and should go well here. Great Haste has been rested. He was beaten a nose in his last at Tropical. Speed, recent winner on a heavy track, is dangerous.

Fifth race—Corinto was bumped at the start and ran a good race when competing on a fast track. Came back to win in the mud. Gets in with only a steadying impost and may take the measure of Brannon. The latter was a fast-closing second last out. Mountainy Man, in light, promises to be a keen contender.

Sixth race—Step Miss, winner by five lengths over the recent heavy track, seems capable of picking up 117 pounds and taking care of this sort of company. Should like the turf course. Cantakit was carried wide last out. Joan D, a miss with a yen for distance, is not to be disregarded entirely.

Seventh race—Drusus takes off 6 pounds after a winning effort and figures to make it two straight in this field. Crowned Head can better that last despite the top weight assignment. Canimar won at this route at Tropical.

Best bet—Bellum.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALBUQUERQUE, $10.90, $5.60, $3.10; MISS SUBWAY, $3.90, $2.90; LADY HOCKBERGER, $2.50.

ALBUQUERQUE, prominent in the early racing, responded readily for the final drive after being given a mild breathing spell midway of the turn, swung to the outside and closed with a rush to get up nearing the close. MISS SUBWAY had nice speed to form a steady pace, made strong efforts while chasing ZEVANAID and fought it out determinedly until the finish.

SECOND RACE—Three furlongs. Purse, $800. For 2-year-old maiden fillies. Went to post at 2:51. Off at 2:57½. Start good (chute). Won driving; place, same. Winner, ch. f. Emmanuel Denemark's br. f. (2), by Blackwood—Patricia Jane. Trained by S. S. Mitchell. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:34

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OWALLER, $3.00, $2.50, $2.30; PEGGY PORTER, $5.80, $6.90; CLOUDS, $4.40.

OWALLER, outrun for the opening sixteenth, went to the inside of PEGGY PORTER to gain command midway of the home stretch, rallied nicely when placed to punishment and drew away slowly nearing the finish. PEGGY PORTER broke swiftly, bore out after the opening sixteenth while in command, responded to vigorous urging and held on determinedly.

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 3:27. Off at 3:36. Start bad. Won driving; place, same. Winner, ch. g. (3), by Finder's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FOUNDER, $18.60, $8.70, $5.80; CROWNING GLORY, $6.80, $4.80; ORINOCO, $6.70.

FOUNDER settled in his stride quickly to race MIDNIGHT FLYER into defeat, opened up a clear lead when straightened in the homestretch and had something in reserve to withstand CROWNING GLORY.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100; allowances. The Kendall. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 4:04. Off at 4:09½. Start good. Won driving. Place, same. Winner, Shady Brook Farm's dk. br. g. (5), by Noel—Little Indian. Trained by George Brooks. Value to winner, $775; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:11 2-5.

VISIGOTH, $5.00, $3.40, out; MICROPHONE, $4.20, out; DANCING DOLL, out.

VISIGOTH, lacking speed to hold a contending position in the first half mile, rallied strongly when shaken up in the final quarter mile and, closing fast, wore MICROPHONE down without effort in the closing furlong to win with speed in reserve. MICROPHONE had much speed to take command in the opening furlong, raced DANCING DOLL to submission, but could not withstand the winner.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,200; allowances. The Key Largo Purse. For 3-year-olds. Went to post at 4:36. Off at 4:41½. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Winner, J. Hirsch's b. f. N. Y. Exchange Loss $209,325 For Last Year

Operating Deficit for the Previous Year Was $1,060,890.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 27.—The annual report of the New York Stock Exchange and its affiliated companies shows a loss of $209,325 compared with a loss of $1,060,890 in the preceding year.

Total income amounted to $7,049,183, against $6,965,469 in 1934 and expenses amounted to $7,258,509, compared with $8,026,359 a year previously.

On the income side, the amount due from memberships was unchanged at $1,375,000, while stock clearing corporation charges increased to $1,557,797 from $1,332,641.

Salaries and wages, the largest item in the expense account, amounted to $3,871,050 in 1935, compared with $4,491,614 in 1934. Taxes increased from $693,563 to $762,218. An item of $89,531 listed as "contribution to the New Jersey Stock Exchange" indicated final liquidation of the project which gathered headway several years ago to move the exchange to New Jersey because of a threatened increase of considerable proportion in New York City taxation.

Assets were listed as $41,431,805, compared with $42,223,671 a year ago. Cash on hand totaled $2,490,867, against $2,042,251.

Southern Pacific Buys 17,000 Tons of Rails

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 27 (AP).—The Southern Pacific Railroad has placed an order for 17,000 tons of heavy rail with the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co. Announcement of the order was made by S. J. Brown, general agent of the Southern Pacific here.

Cost of the order was placed at $818,375. In addition, an order was placed for $50,000 worth of tie plates, bolts and other track fastenings.

U. S. Sugar Exports Drop 16.4% in 1935

New York, Jan. 27.—Refined sugar exports by the United States during 1935 aggregated 102,331 long tons compared with 122,413 tons during 1934, a decrease of 20,082 tons, or 16.4 per cent, according to Lamborn & Company.

Practically every corner of the world is included in the 50 different countries to which the United States refined sugars were shipped during 1935. The United Kingdom leads the list with 26,722 tons, followed by Uruguay and Norway with 12,342 tons and 9,136 tons, respectively.

New York, Jan. 27 (AP).—The Stich tobacco index advanced from 61.9 last week to 62.9, it was announced today. The index of weekly average tobacco prices is based on the 1926 average of 27 cents a pound as 100, for U. S. type 12, grade, B4F, flue-cured tobacco.

Railroads Buy But 5 Per Cent Of Year's Steel

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—The steel industry looks to the average man—the householder and ultimate consumer—to furnish its next great impetus to expansion, Walter S. Tower, executive secretary of the American Iron and Steel Institute, told the Institute of Scrap Iron and Steel.

Steel, he said, is no longer dependent upon a few heavy industries, but the "average man and his family have come to have an importance as customers for our products undreamed of by the steel masters of only a few decades ago."

Accustomed to consider the wants of only a few thousand of makers of steel's products, Tower said the industry's gain in production from a low of 20 per cent of capacity in 1932 to about 48 per cent in 1935 "occured without any great help from such traditionally large steel consumers as the railroads and heavy construction industry."

Those two customers used more than one-half of all steel produced a generation ago, Tower said, but last year took less than one-fifth. Rail production, 25 per cent of the finished products turned out in 1900, was about 5 per cent in 1935.

Demand for "tailor made" steel, Tower said, was partly the cause of, and partly the result of, fundamental changes in market requirements, to which the steel makers have responded with production of "hundreds of different types of products in thousands of combinations of shapes, sizes and chemical analyses."

Stocks Rally With Passage of Bonus Bill But Close Is Spotty; Government Bonds Weak.

New York, Jan. 27.—Trading in stocks brought higher prices with a fairly high rate of activity, but strength was spotty. Utilities had an early run, followed by the airplanes, with later interest in the oils. Dollars weakened a little and Government bonds continued their decline, gathering a little momentum on the final passage of the soldiers' bonus and the general outlook for inflation. May wheat closed an eighth of a cent higher at 107⅞ cents a bushel.

Investors and speculators, after a week-end of consideration given the decision of the Federal Reserve Board to lift margin requirements, and weiging that against the forces of inflation and business improvement, continued to feel as they did after the opening hour Saturday, namely, that stocks should go higher. Either Wall Street felt that the margin order should be interpreted as meaning Washington was preparing for an inflationary boom in stocks, or opinion took the stand that the Administration's left hand would have less effect than the right hand.

Excess Reserves.

So long as the unbalanced budget, heavy spending, bonuses, silver purchasing and currency meddling continued to be the features of our managed economy, inflation will be difficult to prevent, even though the desire so to do may be present in the minds of the authorities. Anyhow, the margin rule was regarded in many quarters as feeble, for one thing, as stock exchange and SEC officials, bankers and others have pointed out, the real danger of inflation in markets lies in the tremendous amount of excess bank reserves. The proper way to head off the market boom would be to attack the center—that is, do something to bring down excess reserves or to nullify their effect.

Jacking up margins may do some good along with other action, but at a time when so much speculation can be carried on with funds already in hand or easily obtainable, it can be nothing more than a warning. Its use even as a threat, furthermore, suffers from the debility of a plain fact that the Federal Reserve Board did not bring itself to act until a majority of the members had learned that their days on the board were numbered. That may have been mere coincidence, but many doubt it. It may also have been a sop to that section of the New Stealers who regard any activity in stocks as sinful and harmful to the proletariat.

Midwinter Slack.

Comparative soberness among highly rated investment shares, as compared with the popular low-priced issues of almost any industrial membership, and with the specialties and commodity shares which appeal to the speculator against inflation, is consonant with the current time marking of industry. For the past three or four weeks the steel trade's operating rate has changed little. This week, according to the American Iron & Steel Institute, the rate will settle slightly. It is placed at 49.4 per cent of capacity compared with 49.9 per cent last week. For the first time in many months the operating rate for steel is now under that of the corresponding period of a year ago. Then the rate was 52.5 per cent.

January is not usually a particularly active month, either in the retail and wholesale trades or in manufacturing. However, the time is near when the steel industry feels strongly the preparations for spring activity in the building trades, the automotive industry, railroad repairs and improvements and among miscellaneous users of steel. The pickup this year may well come later than usual, because the activity of last autumn was greater than seasonal, especially in the motor industry.

The day's main contribution to the news, overriding in the Senate of the bonus veto, which ended all doubts over the bonus, was too confidently anticipated to have sharp effect on markets. Stocks thereafter—from the middle of the fourth hour—acted much as they had in the earlier trading, moving spasmodically, with considerable activity and a tendency to reach forward. Still, the shifting of activity to oils, metals and rubbers provided an inflationary fillip.

Symbols.

Suggestions for changes in stock symbols designed to shorten space taken up on the ticker tape usually meet with the objection from the stock exchange authorities that the trouble, expense and errors involved would make changes too expensive. That objection does not seem to apply in many cases. The printing of new forms and the memorizing of new symbols apparently are no stumbling blocks for the right stocks. For example, Allied Mills, which bears the record of having its symbol changed twice in two weeks. The symbol was changed to AYM two weeks ago. It now becomes ADS. If the ticker continues to run behind the market every day for a while longer perhaps a highly beneficial shakeup of at least a dozen symbols could be put through.

Arbitrage.

An observant investor writes: The Great Consolidated Power 7 per cents, 1944 (Japan), called for redemtption February 1, 1936, are payable in New York, with February coupon attached, at $1,000 for the obligation and $35 for the coupon. They are payable in London at £208 and £7 11s 11d, respectively, a total of £215 11s, 11d. With sterling exchange at $5.01 the London price offers a profit over New York of $45 odd. Few private owners will consider this point and it is doubtful if all the banks will take the trouble to advise customers that the proper step is not to send the bond to London for collection, but to negotiate it at the day's rate for sterling in New York, which they will do for the holders.

Force of Habit.

So accustomed have become traders to having a fling in the public utility stocks—especially the low-priced holding companies—on Monday mornings that the usual flurry took place this morning, in spite of the fact that the Supreme Court a week ago adjourned for two weeks. Anyway, no one cared to disturb any trader who wanted to buy stocks, utilities or any other sort. For once the excitement in two or three curb exchange stocks drew attention from the stock exchange. Electric bond opened with 10,000 shares and Cities Service began with 29,700 shares, which made the stock exchange's contribution of 3,500 shares in Commonwealth look puny. The biggest block on the big board was a 15,000-share shot of Armour.

$50,000,000 Bills 3.4 Times Subscribed

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced last evening that the tenders for $50,000,000, or thereabouts, of 273-day Treasury bills, dated January 29, 1936, and maturing October 28, 1936, which were offered on January 24, were opened at the Federal Reserve banks yesterday.

The total amount applied for was $170,307,000, of which $50,074,000 was accepted.

Gains made by the Washington Rapid Transit Co. in passenger traffic last year were substantial enough to overcome a considerable rise in operating expenses. Net income for the year, according to the report filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission, was $42,744.23, which compares with $7,121.46 in 1934.

Operating revenues in 1935 totaled $456,909.02, which was an increase of $49,784.49 over the previous year. Operating expenses called for $393,081.37, an increase of $18,409.96 and leaving an operating income of $63,827.65 in comparison with $32,449.12 in 1935, or a gain of $31,378.53.

The December report showed operating revenues of $41,704.36, against $36,069.21 in December, 1934, an increase of $5,638.15. Operating expenses required $34,963.40, compared with $35,333.20 in December the year before.

Operating income totaled $6,740.96 against only $736.01 a year ago, meaning an increase of $6,004.95. After addition of nonoperating income and all deductions from gross the bus lines reported a net income for December of $4,990.79, against a deficit in December, 1934, of $1,310.09, making a gain in the month under review of $8,300.88 and adding to the turn for the better in the other months during the year.

Accounting Manual.

The District of Columbia Institute of Certified Public Accountants have received from the institute, national organization of the profession, a bulletin setting forth the approved methods which should prevail in public accounting practice. The bulletin is being distributed among accountants at this time to help them in preparing annual corporate reports for shareholders, stock exchanges and the Securities and Exchange Commission.

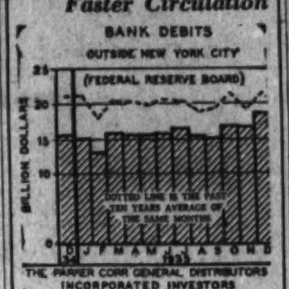
Bank Debits Show Faster Circulation



Boston, Mass., Jan. 27.—Greater speed in the circulation of money is shown by bank debits. December debits outside New York City gained nearly 20 per cent over a year ago, and were the largest amount for any December since 1930. Also, debits for the entire year 1935 went ahead of 1934 by 15 per cent and gained 33 per cent over the low year of 1933.

Weather Conditions.

U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Washington, Monday, Jan. 27, 1936.

Forecast for the District of Columbia—Fair with slowly rising temperature Tuesday; Wednesday increasing cloudiness with slowly rising temperature, probably followed by snow Wednesday afternoon or night.

For Virginia—Fair with slowly rising temperature Tuesday; Wednesday increasing cloudiness with slowly rising temperature, probably followed by snow in the Tidewater section and snow in the interior Wednesday afternoon or night.

Conditions.

The disturbance that was over the Lower Lake region Sunday night has filled up, while the disturbance that developed over the Virginia and North Carolina coasts Sunday night has increased very rapidly in intensity and it is central tonight about 150 miles east of Halifax, Nova Scotia, moving eastward, a Scandinavian type. 29.16 inches. These disturbances have been attended by snow, mostly light, in the middle Atlantic and north Atlantic States, North Carolina and portions of the Lake region. Generally fair weather has prevailed elsewhere, except for rain in southern Texas and for snow or rain in the north Pacific States. A disturbance is moving rapidly east-southeastward with center northwest of Hudson Bay, Chesterfield Inlet, 29.32 inches. Pressure remains low over western Alaska. Dutch Harbor, 29.38 inches, and is relatively low and falling from southern California northeastward to Wyoming and Colorado. San Diego, 29.92 inches. High pressure prevails over practically all other sections with centers as follows: Battleford, Saskatchewan, 30.72 inches, Omaha, Nebr., 30.70 inches and Mayo, Yukon, 30.52 inches. The temperature has fallen in the Eastern and Southern States, while it has risen slightly from the Rocky Mountain region eastward to the Lake region. Abnormally low temperature still prevails almost generally east of the Rocky Mountains.

President Roosevelt yesterday named Cornelius Van H. Engert, of California, as minister resident and consul general to Ethiopia.

Ex-Convict Admits Crime; Officers Hurry Him to Jail for Safety.

By the Associated Press.

Fresno, Calif., Jan. 27.—Former convict Elton Stone was sentenced today to die on the gallows after pleading guilty in a courtroom packed with muttering citizens to murdering Mary Louise Stammer, 14, daughter of a prominent attorney.

Officers loaded him quickly into an automobile and hurried away for the 176-mile trip back to Folsom prison before implied threats from a crowd of 2,000 could materialize into possible mob action.

"Let's get Stone!" one youth shouted as the 31-year-old garage mechanic was taken into court for arraignment. Others shook their fists. The shouting youth retreated when officers stepped toward him.

Stone had said he bore a "grudge" toward the girl's father, Walter H. Stammer—but Stammer insisted he never had seen the man before he was apprehended.

The stocky prisoner shot the girl one Sunday night in November, firing through a window as she was reading in her home. Then, he said in a statement, he broke into the house and was disrobing the dying girl when frightened away by the approach of members of the family.

Within the space of a few hours, Stone was arraigned, pleaded guilty and received sentence, after a night ride from Folsom prison. He has been held for safe keeping there since his arrest last Wednesday.

Van Sweringen Estate Bequeathed to Brother

Cleveland, Jan. 27 (AP).—In a brief will filed today, the late Mantis J. Van Sweringen bequeathed all real and personal property to his brother, Oris P., with whom he had risen from obscurity to become one of the Nation's most prominent railroad executives.

No estimate of the estate's value was filed with the document, which named "O. P." executor without bond. It stipulated the surviving brother be given full authority to sell any of the assets he chooses. It asks "that my brother support and maintain my sisters (Carrie B. and Edith E., aged 62 and 61 years, respectively), in the same manner as we have heretofore done." A third brother, Herbert, is not mentioned.

On the Air Today

SOME of the boys and girls gathered at WJSV Saturday afternoon to get a preview of that station's new program feature. His name (he's the entire show) is Jim McWilliams. And if you know your old Keith vaudeville you would recognize Jim McWilliams in an instant.

It seems that vaudeville was very kind to Jim and he retired, with the demise of that honorable institution, to Virginia. The lawn mower replaced the piano on which he burlesqued operatic arias, and "soooeee soooeee" was wafted out over the quiet countryside where once his famous comedy political harangue filled the corners of the Nation's playhouses.

But once a showman, always so. Jim got a call from Norfolk's WTAR and before he realized what had taken place he was doing a regular turn before the microphone. It's called "The Star Reporter." In the parlance of the theater, it clicked. And now Washington is to follow the adventures of Jim McWilliams' characters through thrice-weekly broadcasts from WJSV, the first tonight at 6.

"The Star Reporter" made good at WTAR in a very short time. But it is Jim McWilliams' years on the stage, which give promise of a professional show, that merit a trial on your dials.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, replies to the address of Al Smith tonight at 10, WJSV. Those who heard the Liberty League dinner speech last Saturday night will recall that at its conclusion the network announced Senator Robinson would, in truth, reply tonight. Despite Columbia's forthright reply to Henry Fletcher in regard to its policies regarding political broadcasts, there appears to be a disposition to keep the scales well balanced on campaign speakers' time.

The shadow of the portly Alexander Woolcott is upon us again. A letter arrives from Mr. Grover Ayers, whose sentiments were expressed some days ago in this space anent Mr. Woolcott's final broadcast. Mr. Ayers, reading Frank Ford Burnet's reply on Sunday's radio page, suggests a meeting at which he would be glad to show Mr. Burnet the letter he received from the sponsor and to state his convictions in more detail.

I would ilke to offer my desk as a meeting point—for the privilege of attending the session. After reading both letters I should say it really ought to be done on the air so that all might hear.

WMAL and WJSV were on the air at 4 this morning with the funeral services of England's late King. WMAL will continue until 9; WJSV ends it at 6 in favor of the regular day's schedule.

At 11 a. m., WMAL broadcasts a memorial service from the Washington Cathedral with organ and choir and a reading by Bishop Joseph E. Freeman. At 10, WJSV carries a similar service from Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

Short wave fans will be able to hear the funeral service direct from London (Daventry Station), between 8:15 and 9 a. m. At 10 a. m., and 1, 4, 6:30 and 10 p. m., the service will be broadcast from transcriptions. This word was received late yesterday by Robert Heini from M. A. Frost, of the British Broadcasting Co.

In the "million dollar dance band hour" Thursday night, in connection with numerous President's Ball fetsivities over the country, will be presented a few minutes with Jack Hylton. Do not accept a couple of dance numbers as representing the quality of Hylton's performance. Every Sunday night Maestro Hylton is presenting one of the most delightful hours of radio entertainment on anybody's air, but it is the ensemble performance, particularly Pat (Sammy Small) O'Malley, that makes it tops. The "million dollar band broadcast" will present star dance bands of both major networks and will be broadcast over both.

M. & O. Employes Ballot on Strike

St. Louis, Jan. 27 (AP).—Ballot boxes tonight held the decision of 2,000 union operating and clerical employes of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad on authorization of a strike over a wage dispute. The ballots will be counted tomorrow.

The strike vote was taken after the railroad's receivers, C. E. Ervin and T. M. Stevens, refused demands for a 10 per cent wage restoration. Ervin also declined arbitration offers of the national mediation board.

He pointed out the railroad had restored half of a 20 per cent wage cut made in February, 1932, and would restore the remainder as soon as business conditions permitted. Present revenues made the increase impossible, he asserted.

About half of the railroad's 4,000 employes are members of the Big Four Brotherhood, and unions representing the maintenance of way force, the shop workers and the clerks which conducted the strike poll.

Holiday Honors George V.

Culbertson on Bridge

Two hundred or more of the Nation's leading contract bridge experts begin play today in a national championship tournament in New York. There will be events for pairs and for teams of four, in addition to special tournaments for mixed pairs (one man and one woman) and for newspapermen.

The tournament which begins today is known as the Atlantic National Tournament. It is one of four such competitions with which the United States Bridge Association expects to make it possible for good players in all parts of the country to enter without needing to travel 1,000 miles or more. A Southern tournament of the same type will be held in Birmingham, a Western tournament in Cincinnati, and a Pacific Coast tournament in Los Angeles.

In each of these big bridge events the winners in the team-of-four play will be transported at the expense of the association to the Grand National Tournament in April. It is probable that the grand national also will be held in New York.

In the Atlantic National Tournament, which will last all this week, the players will be competing for beautiful trophies donated by Douglas Paige, Joseph E. Ridder, P. Hal Sims, George Tilton and Josephine Culbertson.

A "good hand" can be made up of so many different kinds of honor trick combinations that even a master player seldom knows which of the high cards in his hand are valuable for slam purposes and which are without value. The 4-5 no trump convention locates aces, but sometimes it is a lower card, such as a queen, which makes the difference between success and failure at a grand slam.

Two friends of mine, excellent players, went wrong on the following hand, and no one could find it in his heart to blame them.

NORTH
♠ K J 10 7 6
♥ J 4 3
♦ K Q J

WEST

♦ 9 8 7 5 2

SOUTH
♠ A Q 5
♥ A K 8 6 2
♦ A 4
♣ 10 5 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 heart	Pass	2 spades	Pass
3 hearts	Pass	4 hearts	Pass
4 no trump	Pass	5 clubs	Pass
7 spades (final bid)

North did his best, playing for a complicated sort of squeeze which would have given him the contract if the same defender had held the queen of hearts and the queen-jack of clubs; but it was hopeless. Onlookers blamed North for raising the hearts, but he had support for a rebid suit and did not want to deny this support by bidding three no trump.

Cases of this type are easily handled by means of the jump five no trump bid, a new feature of the Culbertson system, which is the only grand slam force in existence. When a player jumps to five no trump (not preceded by four no trump) he demands that his partner bid seven if he holds any ace and the queen or better in the five no trump bidder's suit. Otherwise, the partner must sign off at six.

In the hand above, South, after North's four heart bid, would have jumped immediately to five no trump. North, having an ace, but lacking the queen of hearts, would have signed off with six hearts, and there, or at six spades, the hand would have been played and made.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

WHILE various groups are striving to solve the traffic problem in general, the Association for Adequate Parking Facilities Among Government Employes is seeking specifically additional garages in the downtown area.

BAKER.

Blame for the present congested conditions is placed on "selfish interests" by D. E. McQueary, Veterans Administration, association president. For several years Mr. McQueary has been a leader in a movement to interest the Government in a self-liquidating garage-under-ground-parking lot plan.

"Selfish interests seek to make the use of our cars nearly impossible by forcing living expenses 30 per cent higher than any other city in the United States," Mr. McQueary declares, "and charging prohibitive parking lot fees. Mass transportationists point out that the non-use of our automobiles would solve the traffic problem, but they do not point out that it takes from us what they themselves will not relinquish.

"Why take from us the use of automobiles when all classes from common laborers to millionaires and all races and creeds continue to enjoy them?

"It is not fair to be more severe with Government employes than other classes. They should receive first consideration because their salaries support whatever private business the city has, they are in the public service in a District 10 miles square, set apart by law specifically for Governmental purposes. Let Government activity have first consideration here and private business will improve. Let us 'get facts, think deep, see far,' a clear vision of this all important matter.

"Parking facilities for us will eliminate unloading jams near the departments and cruising for places to park during the rush hours. This will save many lives during icy and inclement weather and will afford 50 per cent more open space on the streets. We shall insist also that the main arteries be not blocked by big trucks, buses and other vehicles during the rush periods. Trucks, buses and street cars share in the toll of life with the passenger automobiles, and they should no more be permitted to block the streets than private cars."

Public Personnel Day.

Public personnel day will be celebrated here and throughout the country today when members of the National Federation of Federal Employes will gather in groups to listen to a radio address by Marguerite M. Wells, president of the National League of Women Voters.

The broadcast, a feature of the league's nation-wide campaign for trained personnel in the public service, begins at 10:30 p. m. President Wells will introduce Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald of Michigan, and Mayor Fiorella LaGuardia of New York.

Members of the District of Columbia Federation of Federal Employes Unions will meet at the local N. F. F. E. headquarters auditorium, 710 Fourteenth street northwest, to play bingo prior to listening to the broadcast. Bingo and card playing will begin at 8. Prizes will be awarded and a surprise program will be presented.

Marcel Propper (C), captain of the Government Printing Office spelling team, announces the G. P. O. Speling Club will start on its new semester at 7 p. m. today in the green room.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C appears after your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor tomorrow only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Toby Wing, Tommy Monahan and Orchestra and other acts; screen, Gladys Swarthout and John Boles in "Rose of the Rancho"); or to P, Loew's Palace (Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray in "The Bride Comes Home"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (Joe Morrison, Chic Sale and Rosalind Keith in "It's a Great Life").

Vex Not the Women.

In fact, the warning's stale;
One ne'er should vex the weaker sex—
More deadly than the male.
For history's filled with names of skilled
But unwise men who tried
By word or act to spurn the fact
And soon were cast aside.
Hence on that "Hill" we wonder will
They heed the fact and pause;
Proceed with care lest in their hair
They find one "marriage clause."

HERBERT P. ROBERTSON (P),

NRA Liquidation.

According to an announcement of A. C. C. Hill, NRA executive director, 200 NRA employes have been dropped since January 1, leaving only about 1,675 on the pay roll. Of this number 450 are using up accumulated annual leave and 235 are on loan to other Federal agencies, so that only about 1,000 are actually engaged on NRA matters.

Harold McKinney Speaks.

Harold H. McKinney, plant pathologist of the Bureau of Plant Industry, recently addressed the Medical School of George Washington University. He discussed some of the similarities of virus diseases that attack plants and others that attack animals, including man, and also pointed out some of the differences.

'Rebecca' Falls From Pedestal; Injures Girl, 20

Miss Gladys Schellin, of the 2300 block of Minnesota avenue southeast, was recovering at her residence yesterday from cuts and bruises suffered when she forcibly made the acquaintance of Rebecca, a life-size marble statue in a Baltimore hotel, Sunday at 3:30 p. m.

Representing an Italian artist's conception of "Rebecca at the Well," the statue was valued at $5,000 and for eight years had stood in the lobby of the Emerson Hotel.

"Rebecca" crashed to the floor and broke into small pieces, one of which gashed 20-year-old Miss Schellin's foot. Rebecca was taken away in a wheelbarrow and Miss Schellin was given first aid in a Baltimore hospital.

"The report of the police is all wrong," said Miss Schellin yesterday. "I entered the lobby and the statue toppled on me. Somebody must have knocked it over."

Island Riots Injure Two.
